INTRODUCTION

A Family Tree or a Chart which traces one's ancestors and descendants is not only a thing of much interest but it possesses a value which increases materially with each succeeding year. In America we have been so busy in developing a new Continent in the establishment of our independence, that many of us neglected to maintain the family records. But the Good Book commends us to honor our Father and Mother and there is no better way than perpetuating their memories. I have tried to trace all branches of direct maternal and paternal lines of my own family and the main branches of my husband's family, namely: Rixford, Hawkins, Wilson, Flint, Cutting, Hinds, Cook and Cushman. Many family records never permitted before have been used.

The first Volume consists of Royal Ancestry and Mayflower lines. I have also included in Volume II, a few Royal Lines not included in Volume I.

The work has been a labor of love and it has been my wish that all who possess the book may enjoy it as much as I have it's compilation. It has cost me a great deal of time and labor, expended without thought of compensation, save that which comes from the satisfaction of preserving records and family traditions, which were rapidly passing away.

Notwithstanding all the efforts made, and care exercised to verify names and dates, there are doubtless errors. The larger portion of the facts herein recorded, have been obtained from family records and Bibles, Pension Bureau records, State Archives, Cemetery records or from published Genealogies, and to all I acknowledge my indebtedness and have tried to give each one due credit wherever possible.

As a foundation for my "Genealogy of Royal Descent," Vol. I, and "Three Hundred Colonial Ancestors," Vol. II, I have used the four Mayflower lines to Francis Cooke, James and Susannah Chilton, and daughter Mary, and two lines to the National Society Founders and Patriots of America, to Lawrence Leach and William Phelps, these seven lines being traced by my brother F. Phelps Leach. The Author has three lines to the Huguenot Society to Hon. John Washburn, John Bissell, and James Eno; ten lines to the Daughters of the American Revolution to Ephraim Leach, Samuel Shattuck, Aaron Field, Samuel Hungerford, Isaiah Hungerford, Samuel Nash, James Hawley, Joel Phelps, Stephen Mead, and Samuel Brown; three lines to the United States Daughters of 1812; forty-seven lines to the Colonial Daughters of the 17th Century; one hundred forty supplemental lines to the National Society Daughters of the American Colonists in Vermont.

Colonial ancestors of (Mrs. Oscar H.) Elizabeth M. Rixford, which have been accepted by the National Society of Daughters of American Colonists, and for which Ancestral Bars have been received (see "Daughters of American Colonists Lineage Book," 1931-1932):

Rev. A. A. Chapin, D.D., at the unveiling of the Deacon Samuel Chapin Monument, "The Puritan," at Springfield, Mass., said:

"To preserve the memory of our ancestors is one of the marks of a high state of civilization." "Among enlightened people if a child is born a record is made of it. A man dies, the fact is set down with day and date in a public register. In this way men may trace the history of families and individuals. Among barbarians no such records are kept. Hence, too, among all enlightened people, monuments are reared and the chisel of the sculptor and the palette of the painter are put into requisition to hand down to posterity the form and features of the departed."—Charles Eagan Chapin

EXPLANATORY

Emigration to New England in the seventeenth century is to be attributed to the discomfort experienced by the English Puritans in their native land, rather than to any attractiveness in this transatlantic wilderness.

Moreover, emigration to the New World was not merely exile from a land they were reluctant to leave: it was exposure to suffering by cold and hunger, to peril of death by shipwreck, by wild beasts, and by treacherous savages.

If the settlement of New England had been the result of mere adventure, its history, would have had so little connection with that of the mother-country, that its relation might properly commence with the first arrival of colonists; but actually there is such a continuity of history between the emigration and the influences which led to it as requires the historian of a New England colony to discourse of England more than the mere title of his work would seem to justify. To relate the history of New Haven, therefore, one must go back to an earlier date than its actual settlement.

The contest between arbitrary and constitutional government, which had never ceased in England after King John signed the "Magna Charta," raged with unusual violence while the throne was occupied by the Stuarts. The reign of the Tudors had been a period of comparative rest; the Wars of the Roses having so weakened the great barons, who in earlier times made and deposed kings at their pleasure, and the introduction of artillery having so strengthened the monarch against an enemy destitute of these engines of destruction, that, from Henry the Seventh to Elizabeth, there was but faint resistance to the will of the sovereign, by the hereditary lords who sat in the upper house of Parliament.

But the time of the Stuarts was less favorable than that of the Tudors for maintaining a theory and practice of government which contravened the rights of the subject. Formerly the great barons had come to Parliament followed by hundreds of archers and spearmen, ready to back their lords in any contest which might occur; but the barons only, and not their retainers, had presumed to put to question the conduct of the overlord.

Whatever resistance had been offered to arbitrary government during the reign of the Tudors, had proceeded, not chiefly, as in earlier times, from the House of Lords, but chiefly from the House of Commons, representing a power already great and constantly increasing.

This contest between the Stuarts and the English people, on account of its bearing on emigration to New England and the commencement of a new colony at New Haven, we shall briefly review.

The Puritan emigration from England, for which we are endeavoring to account, commenced while Charles was holding his third Parliament. Plymouth had, indeed, been settled before this time and before Charles came to the throne; but the Pilgrims who planted that colony had been already exiled from their native land for twelve years before they crossed the ocean.

Such was the condition of England which induced the Puritan emigrants to exile themselves from their native country, and encounter the perils of the sea and of the wilderness. Colonization produced by such causes peopled New England with a superior population. The colonists were, as a class, intelligent, moral, religious, heroic. "God sifted a whole nation, that he might send choice grain over into this wilderness."

It was probably the conference between Laud and Davenport in reference to this complaint to which the prelate referred, when, in his report of the diocese of London for that part of the year 1633, which elapsed before his elevation to the primacy, he said, "One charge being, that he had forced Davenport to flee from his parish and from the country," he said in reply: "The truth is, my lords, and 'tis well known and to some of his best friends, that I preserved him once before, and my Lord Vere came, and gave me thanks for it."

HERALDRY

Heraldry, the act or science of blazoning or describing in appropriate technical terms coats of arms and other heraldic and armorial insignia, was largely employed during the feudal ages to display the exploits of chivalry, and to reward as well as commemorate its triumphs over oppression and violence. But the system is of very ancient origin, long antedating the Christian era.

In its modern sense, however, the heraldic art dates from the time of the Crusades, and was reduced to its present perfect system by the French. It was not until the time of the Crusades that the crest or cognizance was generally adopted. Originally the crest was an ornament chiefly worn by kings, knights, and warriors. At first these badges were placed on the summit of the helmet, to render them more plainly visible, or on the arm; but in later times were transferred to the shield or armor. The crest served to distinguish the bearers in battle, and as a mark for their followers or supporters. In the ages of the past, the crest enjoyed the place of honor.

An erroneous idea is entertained by some that heraldic symbols denote an aristocratic or exclusive class, and are undemocratic in their origin and permanency. On the contrary, these badges of distinction were the reward of personal merit, and could be secured by the humblest as well as the highest. They are today the testimonials and warrants of bravery, heroism, and meritorious deeds of our ancestors.

Modern armies have inherited the idea. British regiments have always used them. They did not come into "official" use in our own army until 1919, when the War Department authorized them and prescribed in detail their general characteristics.

The Quartermaster General's Office has a number of reproductions of corps and division insignia dating back to the Civil War. In the World War, they were not adopted officially for divisions until the summer of 1918 in France. It seems that the 81st Division—the Wild Cat—arrived in France with the familiar shoulder patch which was then unauthorized. Authorities in the A. E. F. were quick to see its possibilities as a means of identification and the value in developing the spirit of the division, and directed all division commanders to adopt distinctive shoulder patches.

At the present time all Regular Army regiments, many National Guard and Reserve organizations have adopted distinctive insignia. The War Department approves the design to prevent duplication. Each insignia perpetuates in heraldic form the notable achievements of the outfit. The documents in the Office of the Quartermaster General dealing with the subject of the military coats of arms are: "War Department Circulars," Nos. 444 and 527, 1917; and "Quartermaster Review," Volume VII, No. 6, May-June, 1928, pages 26 and 28. These are on file in room 229, State War Building, Washington, D. C.

Among other army services which have adopted distinctive coats of arms, for their various units is the field artillery.

We indulge the hope that an interest in heraldic science may increase, that parents, instructors of youth, and the leaders in the progress of modern endeavor may give it the place to which it is so eminently entitled.

THREE HUNDRED COLONIAL ANCESTORS

ARMS ANCESTRY

JOANNA ARMS, of Yarmouth, widow aged 50 yrs., with 3 children, Ruth, age 18 yrs., William and John, had a pass to New England "to Remaine," May 11, 1637.

WILLIAM, born 1654; died August 25, 1731; married Joanna Hawks, 1677, who died November 22, 1729.

William Arms, the ancestor of the Arms family in the United States, came from the Island of either Jersey or Guernsey, in the English Channel. It is presumed that he assumed the name of Arms, as none of this name are found on the island from which he came. He was a knitter of stockings by trade. The first heard of him was his marriage with Joanna, daughter of John Hawks, one of the settlers of Hadley, Mass., in 1677. His name appears in the town records of Hatfield, Mass., in 1677. He removed from Hatfield to Sunderland, thence to Deerfield, Mass., about 1684. In 1698 he was chosen farm-viewer, and one of a committee to build a school house and hire a schoolmaster; in 1699, a constable; in 1700, a tythingman; in 1701, a fence-viewer and school commissioner. After that his name appears almost yearly in the town records. Also in the records of Sunderland, Mass., from 1714 to 1722, where he is spoken of as "Good Mr. Arms." He served in the Indian fight at Great Falls, and was one of those entitled to the township granted by the General Court, 1736. His body lies in the old burying ground at Deerfield, a little east of the center of the grounds, adjacent to his son William and grandson William.

William Arms served as a soldier under Capt Willm Turner at Hadley, April 6, 1676; was in the Falls fight May 19, 1676; at Hatfield 1677, where he speculated largely in real estate; he also owned real estate in Hartford; he came to Deerfield about 1698, and settled at the south end of the Street on "Arms Corner," now in the possession of his descendants, Geo. A. and Richard C. Arms, for which he exchanged with Thos. Hunt a house and land in Hartford; he removed to Sunderland, 1713; came back three or four years later and died Aug. 25, 1731, aged 77. He married November 21, 1677, Joanna, daughter of John Hawks of Hadley; she died November 22, 1729, age 76.

History of Deerfield, Mass., by Sheldon, Vol. I, John Hawks, 1707, in list of commissioned officers.

William Arms and Joanna Hawks had eight children, the eighth being Elizabeth, born 1695, died Oct. 1, 1772, married Ebenezer Field, who was killed accidentally Sept. 12, 1726; afterwards married Azariah Wright, 1726. She was the first schooldame in Northfield, and a noted woman there.

BAKER ANCESTRY

Descendants of John Baker

The following record, taken from a book in the British Museum called "County Genealogies and Pedigrees of Hertfordshire Families," collected by William Berry, has been kindly furnished by William Sherwood, Esq., of Fairfield, Ct. It is a part of the Record found in the above named book, of the family of John Baker. It leaves scarce a doubt in the mind of the Compiler, that the wife of Thomas Nash, the emigrant to New Haven, was Margery, daughter of Nicholas Baker, since we have no record of any other Thomas Nash coming to New England.

John Baker married Margery Madistard.

Children:

I. Nicholas.
II. John, m. Joan, dau. of Gregory Woodard of Bromyard.
III. A Daughter, m. —— Smart, had a dau. Margery who m. Newborough.
IV. A Daughter, m. —— West of Hales Owen.
V. A Daughter, m. —— Bolton.
VI. A Daughter, m. —— Coxe of Claques.
VII. William, m. Joan Gill, had a son William called Lord Baker.

He married his second wife in 1662. Nicholas Baker was the first Deputy from Hinman in the General Court of the Colony 1636–38. "Lincoln's History of Hingham" credits Nicholas Baker with 8 children and a possible 9th. Nicholas Baker was a genuine Puritan. He was one of the first Ministers of Scituate in whose memory the Daughters of the American Revolution placed a Bronze Tablet. This Tablet was placed on the Lot of the first Meeting House by the Chief Justice Cushing Chapter of Scituate, 1912.

BARBER ANCESTRY

The origin of the name is a question upon which there is some difference of opinion. All agree, however, that Normandy was its original European home, and that it came into England at the time of the Norman Conquest in the 11th Century, and the claim has been made that it came into Normandy indirectly from Persia.

The ancient Jewish year which opened with the 25th of March, continued long to have a legal position in Christian countries. In England, it was not until 1752, that the 1st of January became the initial day of the legal year, as it had long been of the popular year.

Lieut. Thos. Barber, whose name appears in the early Colonial Records of Windsor, Conn., was born probably in the County of Bedfordshire, England, about 1614, and was first of the name in New England.

He came to Windsor in 1635, with the party fitted out by Sir Richard Saltonstall, under Francis Stiles, a Master Carpenter of London. He was then 21 years of age, and was the first of the Barber name in New England. (History of Windsor, p. 21.) The Stiles party after the Plymouth Trading Post were the first active settlers in Windsor.

The following is a copy of a portion of the London Passenger Register for the ship "Christian" in which the Saltonstall party sailed for America, "16 March 1634." These underwritten names are to be transported to New England imbarqued in ye "Christian" de Lo; (from London) Joh. White Mr. bound thither, the men having taken ye oath of Allegiance & Supremacie, 1. Francis Stiles, 35 yrs.; 2. Tho. Bassett, 37 yrs.; 3. Tho. Stiles, 20 yrs.; 4. Tho. Barber, 21 yrs.

The Hartford Probate Records contain the following regarding the settlement of Thomas Barber's estate:

Barber, Thomas, Windsor, Invt. b132-14-00; taken 20 Oct. 1662, by Benj. Newberry and John Moore.

Court Record, Page 187—4 Feb., 1662/3, Invt. approved, Samuel was placed with his brother Thomas Barber to learn a trade; Mercy (Mary) Barber was placed with Lt. John Moore until 21 years of age to learn a trade; Thomas Barber doth engage to take Samuel Barber's portion and after two years from the present to allow 6% simple interest per annum. John Barber took Josias' portion upon the same terms.

By Capt. Newberry,
Deacon Moore,
Sgt. Alvord.

Thomas Barber was one of the Gallant Soldiers in Pequot Expedition with the rank of Sergeant; he distinguished himself by his bravery in a number of fights with the Pequots, and particularly in the taking of a fort which the Indians considered impregnable. After describing the march and the plan of the attack, Capt. Mason gives the following account of the exploit. "We called up our forces with all expedition, gave fire thro' the Pallisade upon them; the Indians being in a dead, indeed their last sleep. Then we wheeled off and fell upon the main entrance, which was blocked up with bushes about breast high, over which the Captain passed, intending to make good the entrance, encouraging the rest to follow. Lieut. Seeley endeavored to enter, but being somewhat encumbered, stepped back and pulled out the bushes, and so entered, and with him about 16 men. We had formerly concluded to destroy them by the sword and save the plunder." This occurred probably in June, 1637. According to the Windsor records, in 1635, Thomas Barber was granted "a Lot ten rods west of Humphrey Hyde's Hill Road." In 1641, the lands in the locality called by the Indian name Massaco, were apportioned among the Colonists. Thomas Barber was granted about 600 acres of these lands. The Records of Northampton, Mass., contain the following regarding Thomas Barber: "A Towne Meeting 24th of 4 mon. 1661."

On Oct. 6, 1640, Thomas Barber married Jane or Joan ——(Surname not known). She is supposed by some to have been a daughter of one of the Dutch settlers, and another authority states that she was the first white woman to land in Connecticut.

He died on Sept. 11th, and his wife Joan, on Sept. 10th, 1662.

Children (names of 5 children not given):

1. John, bapt. July 24, 1642; removed to Springfield, Mass.
2. Thomas, b. July 14, 1644; removed to Simsbury, Conn.
3. Sarah, bapt. July 19, 1646.
4. Samuel, bapt. Oct. 1, 1648; m. (1) Mary Coggins; (2) Ruth Drake.
5. Mary, bapt. Oct. 12, 1651.
6. Josiah, b. Feb. 15, 1653.

In the Hartford Probate records it will be observed that the name of the fifth child of Thomas and Joan Barber is given as Mercy instead of Mary, as shown above. Also some records seem to indicate that she married a Hale, but the Gillett family records furnish conclusive evidence of her marriage to John Gillett. It is possible that in the records showing the name of Hale, her marriage was confused with that of her sister Sarah's to Timothy Hall, as a confusion of the names Hale and Hall is quite common.

October, 1668, Thomas Barber one of about 25 men that met at the home of John Moore, Jr., and agreed on the terms of the Settlement ("Memorial History of Hartford," Vol. II, p. 342). Thomas Barber made a Contract with the town of Simsbury to erect a Meeting House in 1683 (p. 349). Thomas Barber had a contract with others in 1679, in the town to erect a Ghrist and Saw Mill (p. 359). Settlement begins at Norwottock afterwards Hadley. (P. 439) Congo C. R.

(p. 498), Thomas Barber one of the Stiles Party. (See p. 68)—There were four brothers of the Barber family who removed from the old Parish in 1738—Samuel, Thomas, Jonathan and John. All settled in the district of the Old Center School District in Canton. Dr. Samuel Barber had 11 sons and three daughters. Jonathan had 2 sons and 1 daughter. John Barber had 5 sons and 1 daughter.

Samuel Barber, baptized Oct. 1, 1648; married (first) Dec. 1, 1670, Mary Coggins, who died May 19, 1676, by whom he had three children, Thomas, Samuel and John. He married (second) Jan. 25, 1677, Ruth Drake, daughter of John and Hannah (Moore) Drake, who was baptized Dec. 6, 1657. They had (p. 25) 11 children, the fourth, Ruth, born July 24, 1683; married William Phelps, my ancestor, Ruth.

Ruth Barber, b. July 24, 1683; m. (2nd. wife) April 18, 1706, William Phelps, son of Lieut. Timothy and Mary (Griswold) Phelps, who was b. Feb. 4, 1668/9. Children: 1/100. 1. Caleb Phelps, b. Jan. 11, 1708. 1/101. 2. Jacob Phelps, b. June 18, 1711. 1/102. 3. Ruth Phelps, b. Jan. 23, 1713.

William Phelps, the husband of Ruth Barber, was the son of Lieut. Timothy Phelps and Mary Griswold, of Kenilworth, Conn. Lieut. Timothy was commissioned in Queen Anne's War, 1702, in which he served in Capt. Matthew Allyn's Company, Col. Wm. Whiting's Reg. Lieut. Timothy was a brother of Mary Phelps, who married Thomas Barber, and son of William Phelps, The Emigrant.

William Phelps (mother, Mary Griswold, was the dau. of Edward Griswold, b. in Eng., abt. 1607) and his wife Margaret ——, who d. Aug. 23, 1670, her tombstone being the oldest one in the Congregational Churchyard at Killingworth (now Clinton), Conn.

Edward Griswold was a prominent character in the early history of Conn.; was a member of the Colonial Legislature, and was frequently commissioner. He d. in Killingworth (or Kenilworth) in 1691, aged 84 years.

3. John, probably d. young.

7. Ruth, b. July 24, 1683; m. William Phelps.
8. *Mary.

---

*Stiles' "Ancient Windsor" gives Sept. 25, 1704, as the date of birth of the daughter Mary (dau. of Samuel Barber[2] and Mary Coggins), but in the record of the Brown family, the same authority states that she married Peter Brown in 1696, or eight years before the date of her birth. In the Appendix of the volume mentioned, Dr. Stiles calls attention to this descrepancy. It will be seen, by reference to the wills heretofore mentioned that there was a daughter Mary, belonging to this family; that she married prior to the making of her father's will, in Feb., 1708/9, and in her sister Mindwell's will she is specifically mentioned as the wife of Peter Brown. Hence she was evidently one of the older children.

(Will of Samuel Barber, Sr.)—Barber, Samuel, Sr., Windsor: Inv. p. 598, 04-10; taken Mch. 1709, by John Moore, Sr., Job Drake, Sr. and Thomas Marshall, will dated 21 February 1708/9.

BIDWELL

Bidwells in England—The Saxon name was Biddulph, meaning War Wolf; one of the oldest castles is the Biddulph castle in Norfolk County, England; it was built about 1066, and tradition says one of William the Conqueror's generals married the Biddulph heiress of that time and assumed her name. When the English rebelled and after fighting seven years were subdued and remained under Danish rule until 1042, when Edward, surnamed the Confessor, came from Normandy was elected King. In 1400, Sir Wm. Berdewelle is mentioned as having given a legacy, etc. In 1426, lands were let at Gasthorp to Robert Berdewelle, Esq., at 20 shillings per annum. Mr. Thomas Bidwell is mentioned as an alderman and ex-mayor of Thetford.

Rose's Biographical Dictionary, Vol. 3, has the following: "Wm. Bedwell, a learned divine and topographical writer of the reign of James 1st. He was concerned in the revised translation of the Scriptures, published in that reign. He was educated in the University of Cambridge and Fuller thinks (Church History, book 10, page 45) that he was at St. John's College. He took orders and had the living of St. Ethelburgh in the city of London, conferred on him in 1601, and was made vicar of Tottenham in 1607. He died 5 May 1632, at the age of 70 and is buried in the church at Tottenham with an epitaph which still remains, in which it is said that 'he was one of King James' translators of the Bible; and for the eastern tongues as learned a man as most who lived in these modern times.'" He published "Kalendanum Viatorium Generale or The Traveller's Callender; serving generally for all parts of the world, 8vo., 1614." "Mohammedis Impostman, whereunto is annexed the Arabian Tredgman V. to 1615." "A brief description of the Town of Tottenham High Cross in Middlesex, 4 to 1631." In this last work is given a copy of a very ancient ballad "The Tournament of Tottenham" which was printed also in Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry. Bedwell printed the ballad from a manuscript in possession of Geo. Wither the poet, which manuscript containing the earliest copy known of this singular ballad, is now in the public library at Cambridge and Mr. Wright who ascertained the identity has lately given from it a more authentic copy than that of Bedwells. Wood speaks of Bedwell as the only person in England of his time who understood Arabic and Mr. Gough says he translated the Koran into English. He was an early friend and patron of Henry Jacob who was also noted for his Oriental studies.

(Page 22), Extract from History of the Settlement of Windsor, Conn. "In 1630, not less than 17 ships arrived in Massachusetts Bay, bringing some 1500 or 1700 emigrants. Dorchester, Watertown, Roxbury, Medford and Weymouth were rapidly settled by the new comers. Foremost among these colonies of 1630, both as regards the character of its members and the date of its arrival, was the one which was settled at Dorchester and afterwards removed to Windsor, Conn. It had been formed mostly from the western counties of England, early in the spring of 1629, by the exertion of the Rev. John White, of Dorchester, whose zeal and labors fairly entitle him to the appellation of the great patron of New England emigration." On the 20th of March, 1630, this company of 140 persons embarked at Plymouth, Eng., in the ship called the "Mary and John" a vessel of 400 tons burden and commanded by Capt. Squeb. On the Lord's day, 30 May, 1630, their good ship came to anchor on the New England Coast. Their settlement was named Dorchester in honor of the Rev. Mr. White of Dorchester, England, which had also been the home of several of their number.

Upon the 16 April, 1636, the survivors of the company returned to Connecticut. Their settlement was called Dorchester and name changed to Windsor 1637, from Windsor, England.

Glastenbury for 200 Years by Chapin, page 129: John Bidwell, Jr., had the 1st saw mill at Glastenbury, 1667. He lived at Hartford, as his father willed him all his lands and buildings west of the Connecticut river. He had at Hartford, a saw, grist and fulling mill; six saw or grist mills, three at Hartford, and one each at East Hartford, Wethersfield and Middletown, he was an engineer and was selected by the town of Hartford, to deepen the channel in the Connecticut river between Hartford and Wethersfield. (Town Records of Hartford, 1686. The town by their vote made choice of Major Talcott, Ensign Nathaniel Stanley, Mr. Cyprian Nichols and John Bidwell to consider the best way to make a channel in the river between this town and Wethersfield). He is buried at East Hartford and left an estate of 1081 lb. His widow Sarah, in March, 1704, gave to her son John, land on the east side of the Connecticut river and her son Thomas witnessed the deed. He and his wife Sarah were admitted to full communion at the 2nd or Centre St. Church, Hartford, 21 Feb. 1685. Vol. 5, page 45, Hartford Co. This liberty and power was granted.

(Ancient Windsor, Conn., Vol. II, Part 1, H. R. Stiles, 1892, p. 72), BIDWELL (Bydewell, Biddle, original Saxon, Biddulph, "war wolf") seem to be originally of County Norfolk and County Devon, England. Richard "was buried" in W., Dec. 25, 1647 (also Old Ch. Rec.); he left a daughter, Hannah, b. 2 Oct. 1644.

An Anna Bidwell married James ENO (the first of that name in W.) 18 Aug., 1648. From similarity of name of Richard's daughter—Hannah and Anna being interchangeably used—it is possible that this Anna was Richard Biddle's widow. "Goodman," is named in Old Church Records among those who died in same year as Richard above, viz., 1647; probably Richard's father.

The ancestor of Windsor Bidwells was John[1], proprietor at Hartford, Conn., 1640, "by courtesie of the town;" tanner; married Sarah (daughter of John) WILCOCKS of Hartford, both members of Second or South Church of Hartford, 1670. He died 1687; inventory £419, 10, 6. She died 15 June, 1690. (See Mem. Hist. Hartford County, I, p. 230.)

JOHN[2] (eldest son of above), married 1678, Sarah (daughter of Thomas and Hannah Tuttle) WELLES, thus granddaughter of Gov.

Welles and mentioned in his will. She died in 1708. He died 3 July, 1692; had six children, of whom the 6th, JONATHAN[3], born 1684; died 1712; married Martha Butler, born 1688; died 1735. Of their two children, the eldest,

JONATHAN[4], (first of the name at Wintonbury Parish, W.), married Hannah HUBBARD, born Aug., 1740, who died 26 Feb., 1794 (Wby. Ch. Rec.); he died 10 June, 1786, in 73d year; residence, Wintonbury. Bird Family in England

Names of animals have in all ages and among nearly all nations been applied as sobriquets to individuals and then, in modern times, have acquired the force of surnames and these have been handed down hereditarily. Bird, a nickname, is from the Middle English bird or brid, perhaps given to the original bearer because of his singing propensities.

The Bird family in England is very ancient and widely distributed. Birds are or have been numerous in the counties of Chester, Cumberland, Derby, Essex, Hereford, Oxford, Shropshire, Warwick, Yorke. The ancestry of the Birds of Penrith, County Cumberland, is traced to the year 1295. Father William Bird, a Benedictine monk, was a candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Divinity at Oxford in 1504. Wood thinks his church was at Bath, and that he died there May 22, 1525. His arms are curiously carved in stone in this old church. There have been many famous men of this surname in every generation of England since the earliest records. David le Brid was of County Oxford in 1273. Goeffrey Byrd was of County Salop in 1273. Henry le Brid was of County Somerset, 1 Edward III (1327).

The Bird pedigree is found in an old pedigree in vellum in the custody of Mr. James Bird, of Brogham. Henry Bird, of County Cumberland, England, married Joan Beauchamp, daughter of Thomas Beauchamp, of Little Croglin, County Cumberland. Their son, William Bird, of Little Croglin, County Cumberland, married Joan Tindall, daughter and co-heir of John Tindall, of Northumberland County. Their son, William Bird, of Pireth, County Cumberland, was living in 1295. He married Emma Gospatrick, daughter of Gospatrick, Knight, of Cumberland. Their son, Adam Bird, of Pireth, married Joane Threlkeld, daughter of William Threlkeld, of Yanworth, County Westmoreland. Their son, William Bird, of Pireth, married the daughter of Thomas Martindale, and had a son, Roger Bird, of Pireth. He married Jane Crakenthorpe, daughter of John Crakenthorpe, of New Bigging, County Westmoreland. They had three children, James, John and Hugh.

The Birds of Worcester derive from the old family of Cumberland. They bear arms similar to the arms of the Birds of County Cumberland. Henry Bird, of Bradforton, near Evesham, County Worcester, was originally of the Bird family of Lincolnshire. He married and was the father of William Bird, born early in the sixteenth century, who married Mary Rutter. From him descend the Birds of Gloucester and the family that continued in Worcester.

Among the collateral branches of the Bird family are the Birds of Gloucestershire, England, who descend from the Cumberland family. William Bird, of Bradford, County Worcester, married Mary Rutter, the daughter of Michael Rutter. Their son, William Bird, of Evesham, County Worcester, married Anne Cox, daughter of Robert Cox, of Castleton, County Worcester. Their son, Peter Bird, of Wooton-under-Edge, County Gloucester, was born about 1570. He married Mary Foster, daughter of Humphrey Foster, of County Gloucester. They were the parents of Mary, Anne, Susan, Anthony, Gyles, Richard and William.

The Birds of Cheshire trace to Randoll Bird, of Yowley, Cheshire, who married Anne Merbury, daughter of Thomas Merbury, of Merbury. Their son, Richard Bird, of Yowley, married the daughter of a Davenport, and had a son, Richard Bird, of Yowley, who married the daughter of a Hocknell, of Duddon. Their son, John Bird, of Yowley, married Anne Delves, daughter of John Delves, of Delves Hall, and had John, Thomas and Richard.

John Bird, son of John and Anne (Delves) Bird, lived at Yowley. His brother, Thomas Bird, established a branch of the family at Crew, Cheshire, and his younger brother, Richard Bird, was also of Cheshire. All of these sons of John and Anne (Delves) Bird were living about 1500.

Another family of Birds in Cheshire was represented in 1580 in the city of Chester by William Bird, Alderman and Justice of the Peace. Of him it is recorded: "In the which servyce (he) demeaned hym selfe in sutche wise that bothe of her Majesties Counscell in England and Irelande reported hym to bee a verey good subjecte, a wyse man and a readye further(er) of her Majesties services." He was the son of another William Bird, who was Mayor of Chester in 1557, whose wife was Jane Norley, daughter of Raffe Norley, of Eccleston, Cheshire. William (2) Bird married three times and had children as follows: John, born about 1640; Richard, Jane, Alice, Thomas, and Ellen.

The Birds of Yorkshire descend from George Burd (or Bird), of New Castle, merchant, and at one time Mayor of New Castle. He married Ellinor Harbottle, daughter of Sir Ralph Harbottle, and had a son, Anthony. Anthony Bird married Hilton, daughter and co-heir of Hugh Hilton, of Slingsby. Their children were: George, Mark, Hugh, Henry, Isabel, Anne, Alice, Eleanor, and Elizabeth; they were all born before 1600.

BIRDSEYE ANCESTRY

John Birdseye, the immigrant ancestor, was born in Berkshire, England, and according to the account of Rev. Samuel Peters in his "History of Hugh Peters, A.M.," printed in 1807, he was a Puritan in England in 1636, and "emigrated to New Haven, Conn., with his 2 sons, one of whom settled at Middletown on the Connecticut river, the other at Stratford." The name of this traditional brother of Deacon John Birdseye was probably Joseph (Edward). The Glastonbury, Connecticut, records state that John Birdseye died in 1649. He lived for a time in Wethersfield, Connecticut, but later removed to Stratford. The list of early settlers of Wethersfield also states that he died in 1649.

BISSELL ANCESTRY

The Coat-of-Arms described in Burk's "Complete Armory," and registered at the College of Heralds, is as follows:

Arms—Gules, on a bend, Argent; three escallops, sable.

Crest—A demi-eagle with wings displayed, sable, charged on the neck with an escallop shell, orl.

Motto—In Recto Decus—Variously translated, "In Rectitude, Honor," and "Honor is to be found on the straight road."

The Coat-of-Arms used by General Daniel Bissell and his descendants varies from the original Bissell Coat-of-Arms in the shape of the shield and the drawing of the eagle. These differences are accounted for by the fact that the descent is through a cadet house. The motto is Paratus et Fidelis—"Ready and Faithful."

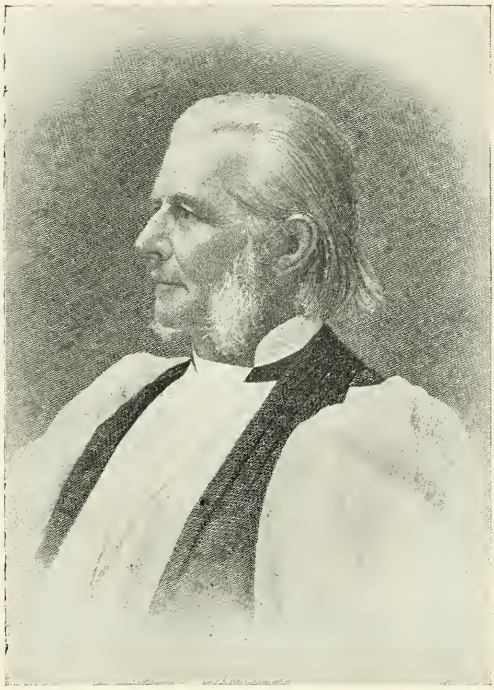
The name has many variations: Bisselle, Byssell, Bysselle, Bissel, Bessell; Buissel is found in the Doomsday Book; Buscel, commonly Bushell; Buscall, a Huguenot name in London, 1618; Bichell, Norman-French; Bushall, Bizzell, Bisley, Bixley, Beasley, Bussell.

It has been proved that the family of Bissell is of Huguenot origin. The author of the present record, in reading Volume II of Stiles' "Ancient Windsor," at the New York Public Library, found an entry in pencil, evidently made by some other searcher, reading, "John Bissell's Huguenot Bible in Weston, Pennsylvania."

The family of John Bissell, who settled in Windsor, Conn., is the only Bissell family definitely known to have come to this country and all the colonial families are descended therefrom.
("John Bissell, the Immigrant Ancestor and his family").

John Bissell was born in Somersetshire, Eng., 1590 or 1591, died at Windsor, Conn., Oct. 3, 1677. He married, first, in England. Neither the name nor the date of birth of this first wife is known and her death is variously recorded as 1640, May 21, 1641 and 1642. The "Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy," published by A. N. Marquis & Co., Chicago, gives the name of his first wife as Mary Drake, but this information may be erroneous, there being a possibility that the name was confused with that of Mary, the eldest daughter of John Bissell, who married Jacob Drake. John Bissell was married a second time, but the name of his second wife in unknown. In the "History and Genealogies of Ancient Windsor, Connecticut," by Henry R. Stiles, in the list of Deaths in Windsor in 1640, we find recorded the death of "John Bissell's wife," and, again in 1665, "the wife of John Bissell, Senior." In the "Genealogical Dictionary of New England," by James Savage, we find the following, relating to John Bissell, Senior: "His widow died 21st day of May following (the birth of Joyce in 164–) and his next widow died the 29th of November, 1665, but of both the names are unknown." Again in Stiles's "Ancient Windsor:" "Nathaniel doubtless resided on the river bank below the Scantic from the time of his marriage (1662)—John Bissell, Sr., evidently died here (at Nathaniel's).

John Bissell, of Plymouth, Mass., 1628, and Windsor, Conn., 1639/40, of Huguenot descent, came with wife Mary (Drake) Bissell, aged 26 years, and three children. Built the first ferry across the Connecticut River. He was made Juror at Hartford in 1640/43, October, 1645, March, 1647, 1648. He was Deputy to the General Court in 1642, and attended forty-six sessions of the General and Particular Court before the Union of New Haven and Connecticut Colonies, and served in all as Juror twelve sessions of the Court at Hartford. John Bissell was Proprietor of Stratford and Deputy there, 1645/59, and in 1654, Assistant Magistrate. See American Ancestry, Vol. II, p. 168. Some of the names of Soldiers found in an old book of Records; Capt. John Bissel, Nathaniel Bissel, John Terry, John Partee, and Thomas Moore. See State Archives, Hartford, Conn., Travel, 373/37, p. 196. John Bissell was the first Settler on the East Side of the Connecticut River at Windsor, Conn. He was a soldier in King Philip's War, in 1675; Capt. John Bissel and Nathaniel Bissel of Windsor, Troopers, in 1676. John Bissell in Troop of Cavalry of 60 members. In 1675, the Bissel House was used as the Garrison. See Col. Dau. 17th Century, p. 183; Index; John Bissel, 1591-1677, b. Eng., Served in King Philip's War in 1675, Deputy 1648-59, Windsor, Conn. See Soc. Col. Wars, p. 46, John Bissell was Quartermaster of a Troop of Horse at Hartford, Conn., in 1677. This is surprising, in view of the fact that John Bissell, Sr., would have been in his late eighties at this time. Yet in Stiles' account to King Philip's War, the statement is made, "In an old book of rates we find the following names of Windsor Troopers, who were in actual service and received 6s 8d each 'on war account': Captain John Bissell, John Bissell, Jr., and others. John Bissel, Jr., Capt. at Bolton, Deputy, 1751, Lieut., 1768. After King Philip's War, there seems to have been a



William Henry Augustus Bissell, DD.

Right Rev. Dr. William Henry Augustus Bissell, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church of Vermont, was born in Randolph, Vermont, November 10, 1814. The ancestry of Bishop Bissell is of the best British blood, and is characterized by the best traits of sterling Puritan piety and morality. John Bissell, first immigrant of the name and founder of the New England family, was a citizen of East Windsor, Connecticut, prior to the year 1648, in which he received the grant of a ferry across the Connecticut river. John Bissell, his son, of whom little is known, married a daughter of Israel Mason. His son, John Bissell, third of that name, married Sarah Loomis, by whom he became the father of a large family. Daniel Bissell, son of John Bissell, third, was born in 1698, and married Jerusha Fitch. His son, Daniel Bissell, second, was married twice, and by his second wife was the father of Ezekiel Bissell, who was a physician by profession, and who, on the 31st of May, 1796, married Elizabeth Washburn, by whom he became the father of three sons and three daughters. He died May 13, 1824.

William H. A. Bissell was the son of Ezekiel and Elizabeth (Washburn) Bissell.

Tradition preserves the following jocose ditty which John Bissell used to call his family:

"John, Tom, Sam and Nat,

Samuel Bissell, born 1636, died 1700; married (first) June 11, 1658, Abigail Holcomb, who died 1688; married (second) Mary (last name unknown) who died 1718.

The Right Rev. Dr. William Henry Augustus Bissell, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Vermont (Ezekiel[5], Daniel[4], John[3], John[2], John[1]), born in Randolph, November 10, 1814. Died at Burlington, May 14, 1895. He graduated from the University of Vermont in 1836, and then began the study of theology at the Vermont Episcopal Institute under Bishop Hopkins. He was ordained Deacon by Bishop Onderdonk of New York, September 29, 1839, and Priest by the same Bishop in Christ Church, Troy, N. Y., July 12, 1840. His consecrator was the Right Rev. S. A. McCoskey, Bishop of Michigan, assisted by the Bishops of Connecticut, John Williams; New York, Horatio Potter; Maine, H. A. Neely; and Western New York, A. C. Cox, who was the preacher for the occasion (Colossians, IV, V). Such is the bald recital of some of the principal items in the life of this Man of God, whose fatherly love and affection were ever given to the flock over which the Bishop presided. He organized the Vermont Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary.

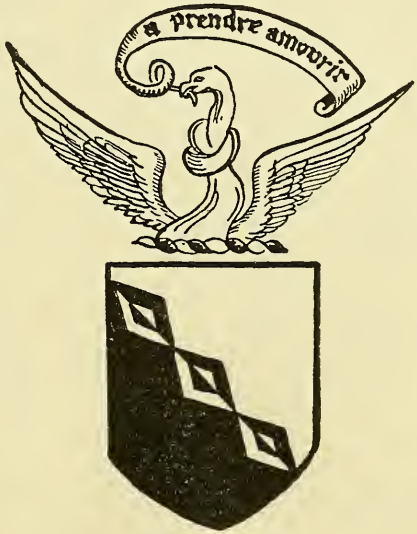
BROWNE ANCESTRY

Abraham Browne

In the Heraldic Journal (Vol. 4, 1868) is mentioned a family of Browns, resident chiefly at Watertown, Mass., which was entitled to coat-armor as being an off-shoot from a family of gentry settled at Swan Hall, Co. Suffolk. By the kindness of one of the family, we are enabled to present the annexed engraving of the arms, and also a transcript of the Original Grant as recorded in 1640. This copy is taken from the second volume of Grants, p. 627, in the Heralds' College and was made in 1860, by Albert W. Woods, Lancaster Herald. We are not taking the space to copy this Grant here but anyone interested can easily get same from above mentioned book.

Arms—Quarterly: first and fourth, per bend argent and sable, three mascles in bend counterchanged; second and third, sable, three mallets argent, two and one.

Crest—A stock's head, couped and nowed at the neck, between two wings expanded argent.



Abraham Browne (1590–1650), son of Thomas, of "Swan-Hall," Hawkedon, Suffolk Co., and descendant of John Browne (b ca. 1330), of the Borough of Stamford, Co. Lincoln, alderman, of Stamford, 1376–77; John Browne (d. 1442) whose munificence built All Saints' Church, Stamford; William Browne (d. 1489), of Stamford, alderman, sheriff of Rutland, founder of Browne's Hospital, Stamford; and Christopher Browne (d. 1518), of Stamford and Tolethorpe Manor, Co. Rutland, sheriff of Rutland; came from "Swan-Hall," Hawkedon, Co. Suffolk, Eng., in Winthrop's fleet, to Watertown, Mass., 1630; freeman 1631; married Lydia —— (d. 1686).

As Bond's "History of Watertown" is so easily accessible we will merely say that this family is traced to John Browne, Alderman of Stamford, Co. Lincoln, A.D., 1376. The family seems to have divided into three branches, settled respectively at Stamford, Tolethorp, Co. Rutland, and Swan-Hall, Co. Suffolk. The latter branch is descended from the Christopher Browne, to whom the foregoing Grant of Arms was made, and the descendants are therefore entitled to use this coat.

The Swan-Hall branch is traced through Christopher[2], who died 1531 (son of the Grantee), Christopher[3] (died at Swan-Hall, 1571), and Thomas[4], who died in 1590. Of his three sons, Richard[5] and Abraham[5] settled in New England, as did also John[6], son of his eldest son John[5]. Of these only Abraham[5] Browne, who settled at Watertown, Mass., has left descendants here of the name. He left sons Jonathan[6], and Abraham[6], of whom Jonathan[6] Browne married Mary Shattuck and had Abraham[7], Benjamin[7] and William[7], all of whom left descendants. In 1640 he was surveyor of the town.

Abraham Browne[5] was a very early settler, perhaps one of the first of Watertown. He was a Land Surveyor, and, as is manifest from the records, in the early Municipal Transactions of the town, he received important appointments, and trusts more numerous than were conferred upon any other person. He was Selectman from 1636 to 1643, inclusive. 1641 the General Court appointed him one of the Committee for laying out the 1000 acres of land granted to the Artillery Co. at its 1st organization. Surveyor of the town in 1640 to Oct. 7, 1641.

"N. S. D. A. C., 1921", p. 24—Abraham Brown, Marshal, 1654, born 1618, took the Freeman's oath, May 18, 1631. Lived in Hampton, where he died May 29, 1706. Abraham Brown, Selectman of Watertown from 1635 to 1641.

His widow, Lydia, married Nov. 27, 1659, Andrew Hodges, of Ipswich (Proprietor of Ipswich in 1639, where his wife, Ann, died Nov. 15, 1658). He died Dec., 1665 (A. Hodges), and his widow returned to Watertown, where she died Sept. 27, 1686. By wife Lydia, Abraham Browne had 6 children, of whom at least one, and probably two were born in England. The earliest record of a birth in Watertown was that of his daughter, Lydia (3rd child).

BROWN ANCESTRY

Descendants of Peter Brown

Peter Brown of Plymouth and Dorchester, Mass., born in England about 1600; died in Plymouth, Mass., 1633; was one of the Signers of the Compact on board the Mayflower, 1620, was one of the seven which remained of all the Company of the Mayflower, able either to nurse the sick or to bury the dead, took charge of digging the graves and burying the dead of the Mayflower. Married (first) about 1623, Martha Ford, a widow and had 2 children, viz.: Mary and Priscilla; married (second) about 1628, Mary, and had 2 children, viz.: Peter and John.

He was admitted a freeman in 1633. Mary and Martha Brown, probably his wife and elder daughter, had divisions of cattle with him in 1627. It is supposed that his first wife was Martha, and that Mary and Priscilla were her daughters and the two mentioned by Governor Bradford as married in 1650. In 1644, the daughters were placed in the care of their uncle, John Brown, a leading citizen of Duxbury. Peter Brown died in 1633, before October 10, and his estate was settled by the court, Nov. 11, 1633. Administration was granted to the widow Mary. He had several children, among whom was Peter mentioned below:

PETER[2], son of Peter[1] Brown, was born in 1632. He settled at Windsor, Conn., and lived to be nearly sixty years old. He died at Windsor, March 9, 1692, leaving an estate of four hundred and nine pounds to be divided among his thirteen children.

"Savage's Gen. Dictionary," Vol. I, A. C., also says that Peter, Plymouth, I suppose son of Peter of the same, born after 1627, as his name does not appear after the division of cattle that year, was with Gov. Bradford, with others among the first purchase of Dartmouth. Supposed to be the same Peter of New Haven.

The Order of the Court in the settlement of Peter[1] estate mentions his having had "divers children by divers wives;" Martha was probably his first wife in Salem, though he may have been married in England; Mary was his second wife and administratrix; he settled 15 £ on his two daughters, Mary and Priscilla; Mary was placed in care of John Dean, and Priscilla in care of Wm. Gibson, the remainder of his estate was devised to his widow, for the support of the young family; in 1644, Mary and Priscilla were placed with their uncle John Brown of Duxbury (Hinman, who collected the facts from W. R. Russell, Esq., Reg. Deed. and Old Colony Records).

Peter born 1632; married Mary Gillet, July 15, 1658; owned land in Windsor, in 1658-64; he died March 9, 1691/2, age 60; estate 409 £ 15s 6d.

BURT ANCESTRY

Descendants of Henry Burt

In my researches in English records I have found that the Burts were there an ancient family, their name being derived from the Anglo-Saxon word "beort," signifying "bright" or "illustrious." The earliest mention of the name I have found is in Bloomfield's great history of Norfolk county, where it is recorded that, in the year 1199, a manor in that county was granted to Sir Hamo de Burt which was alienated by his grandson, Sir Thomas de Burt, in 1290. I have found records of the Burts in several English counties, notably in Leicester, Dorset and Surrey, as also in London, and all in honorable connection, but to none of them could I trace our ancestor. Before leaving the English branch, I would mention the high character of Thomas Burt, the present member of Parliament for Morpeth, the first laboring man elected to that august body, and concerning whom you will hear more fully from our cousin, Mr. Henry M. Burt. I will add that the wife of the great German marshal, Von Moltke, was an English girl, Mary Burt, whose father, John Burt, had taken the marshal's sister for his second wife.

It appears from the early records of Roxbury, Massachusetts, that Henry Burt probably came to America in the ship James in 1635.

Whatever may have been Mr. Burt's original intentions as to the time of his moving to Agawam, they were suddenly decided by the burning of his Roxbury house, in September, 1639, and soon after that calamity he moved, with all his family, to the new settlement there, where he lived until his death, in 1662. He immediately took an active part in all the affairs, religious and secular. He was chosen one of the first selectmen, an office he held for several years; he was a member of the divers committees to lay out and allot the lands and "for the ordering of the prudential affairs of the Plantation;" he was elected "the Clarke of the Writs," an office analagous in its duties to those of our town and county clerks. In 1650, and at other times during a vacancy in the position of minister, he conducted the religious services of the town, receiving therefor a monthly stipend of thirty shillings. It is said that his residence was on what is now Main Street, between Union and Wilcox. Of his personal appearance and disposition we have no knowledge, but the several offices he held in town and church indicate his ability as well as the respect and esteem his fellow-townsmen entertained for him in entrusting to his management such important public affairs.

Appreciating the fact that the earliest town governments of New England were replete with every good democratic instinct, and contained within themselves the fecund and potent germ of all that is best in our political institutions, we may well be proud of the prominent part taken by our ancestor in one of the earliest of these famous nurseries of regulated political freedom.

The maiden name of Mr. Burt's wife is unknown, but her Christian name was Eulalia.

It is not true that all of Mrs. Burt's children were born in America, since the eldest one was married here in 1643, at most only eight years after the family left England. Of the nineteen reputed children I can find records of only twelve, being three sons and nine daughters. These children in order of their birth were:

1. Sarah, who married in Springfield, June 20, 1643, Judah Gregory, and a second time Henry Wakely.
2. Abigail, m. in 1644, Francis Ball, and second, April 12, 1649, Capt. Benjamin Munn, and third, Dec. 14, 1676, Lieut. Thomas Stebbins.
3. Jonathan, m. Oct. 20, 1651, Elizabeth Lobdell of Boston. He was an active townsman of Springfield, and the leading deacon of the church.
4. Mary, m. Oct. 18, 1654, William Brooks, by whom she had 19 children.
5. Elizabeth, m. Nov. 24, 1653, Samuel Wright, Jr. They moved shortly after to Northampton, where he was killed, with seven others, in an Indian onslaught, Sept. 7, 1675. He left eight children, one born ten days after his death. His widow, 9 yrs. later, m. Nathaniel Dickinson of Hatfield.
6. David, one of Founders of the town of Northampton, where, Nov. 18, 1654, he m. Mary Holton. Henry Burt of Springfield, in 1640, David[2], Joseph[3], Asahel[4], b. 1715; killed by the Indians in Northfield, Mass., April 15, 1747; Joseph[5] Burt, born at Northfield, Mass., 1738; Augustus[6] Burt, b. Jan. 30, 1781, Westmoreland, N. H., Judge of Franklin Co. Court many years; Henry Adams[7] Burt, b. Feb. 10, 1728, had three children: Henry Augustus[8], b. 1853; Mary[8], 1855; Ellen[8], 1862. Henry Augustus[8] Burt had one dau., Amy, b. 1873; Mary[8] m. —— Tobin and had one son Lyman Burt, b. 1886; Ellen[8] m. Edward S. Stone, D.D., of Swanton, who is eighth in descent from Capt. Miles Standish. Dr. Stone was Rector of St. John's Church, Highgate for seventeen years, where a bronze tablet was placed in his memory.
7. Dorcas, m. Oct. 28, 1657, John Stiles of Windsor.
8. Nathaniel, m. Jan. 15, 1662, Rebecca Sikes, and soon after removed to Longmeadow, where his descendants have been always foremost in good work.
9. Hannah, m. Dec. 24, 1659, John Bagg of Springfield.
10. A daughter, the record of whose birth in the town register is so defaced as to be almost illegible.
11. Patience, m. on Oct. 7, 1667, John Bliss of Springfield.
12. Mercy, m. Jan. 17, 1667, Judah Wright of Springfield, by whom she had nine children. Among her descendants were Gen. Ethan Allen of Revolutionary fame and Silas Wright, the distinguished statesman.

There has been much good-natured fun over the self-laudation and boastful speeches at the New England Society dinners; and Plymouth Rock has been jocosely called a second Blarney Stone.

Physically, the Burts are of medium stature, inclined to spareness rather than corpulence; blonde in complexion, and almost invariably blue-eyed; with great nervous activity and a more than average vitality. The proportion of those living beyond seventy years is very large, while there are many instances of much greater longevity.

I know of none of the family who have been highly distinguished in literature, art, science or statesmanship, and of none who have been oppressors, traitors, felons or outcasts. They have been good citizens in peace and good soldiers in war, unostentatiously discharging their duties towards each other, society and the state.

The men and women of our family have been peculiarly fortunate in that they have enjoyed

> "Domestic happiness, thou only bliss
> That has survived the fall."

In religious faith they have been for the most part Presbyterian and Baptist, and in political affiliations they have shown such a broad eclectic spirit that I should hesitate to denote where the majority rests, particularly as their independence has led many of them into the mugwump fold.

In fact, take them all and all, the Burts are a typical New England family with all the inherent qualities, good or otherwise, so well represented by their ancestor, Henry, one of the founders of this beautiful and prosperous city.

> "Do then as your progenitors have done,
> And by their virtues prove yourself their son!"

Without disparagement of the founders of the other original English colonies, it can be fairly claimed that the establishment of the Massachusetts colony was fraught with the greatest significance to the highest human interests. Virginia and other Southern colonies originated in the spirit of adventure or in the pursuit of gain; New York was settled under the auspices of a trading company, as Pennsylvania and Maryland were each through the enterprise of a single proprietor. But the Massachusetts colonists sought a field where they could practically demonstrate their religious and political convictions. The later English historians have appreciated the high character of these immigrants. Says Green: "They were in a great part men of the professional and middle classes, some of them men of large landed estates; some zealous clergymen, like Cotton, Hooker and Roger Williams; some shrewd London lawyers or young scholars from Oxford and Cambridge. The bulk were God-fearing men from Lincolnshire and the Eastern counties. They desired, in fact, only the best as sharers in their enterprise; men driven forth from their fatherland not by earthly want or the lust of adventure, but by the fear of God and the zeal for a godly worship."

CHAMBERLAIN ANCESTRY

Chamberlain Family of England and America

Chamberlane 1: Chamberlan 20: Chamberlayne or Chambers 8: Chamberlanne, Presbury, Co. Eng., Wickham, Co. Oxford, and Theroldby, Co. York, originally sprung from the Counts of Turkerville and founded by Richard Chamberlain to King Stephen, 1135, etc., who from his office, assumed his Sir Name: Gu an ass's of Woburn escutcheon or within an orle of Mullets or. Crest—Out of a ducal, or, an ass's head or . . . William b. ab. 1621 of Woburn, brother Edmund or Edward of Woburn, of Concord, Mass., Billerica, Mass., ab. 1654, d. May 31, 1706, age 85 yrs.; m. Rebecca; she d. in Prison, Sept. 26, 1692, of the preposterous charge of witchcraft; was mother of his four children and perhaps of more.

William[1] Chamberlain, the immigrant, was born undoubtedly in England about 1620, and died at Billerica, Massachusetts, May 31, 1706, "aged about 86 years." (Billerica Town Records.) After considerable effort to ascertain his parentage, his ancestry and his English home, they have not been discovered. The publication of the marriages in the English parish registers, now in process, is likely to enable us to identify him, provided he were married in England and the parish register where he was married is still preserved. Of the forty proprietors of Billerica and Chelmsford with whom he was closely associated from 1648 to 1665, at least six are known to have come to New England from East Anglia, one from the County of Surrey and one from Kent. An abstract of every Chamberlain will which was probated in East Anglia between 1620 and 1700, Cambridgeshire excepted, has been obtained, and from that number one abstract is given as follows:

"Francis Chamberlyn, senior, of Narburgh, Co. of Norfolk, made his will June 1, 1676, bequeathing to his sons William Chamberlyn and Clement Chamberlain x25 each when they arrive at the age of 21; to his grandchildren Mary Woodhouse, the daughter of John Woodhouse, and to Alice Chamberlyn each x5; to his son Francis Chamberlyn ten shillings; to his son Thomas Chamberlyn his mansion house and lands in Pentry, the said Thomas and his wife Mary to be executors and Noah Clarke of Narburgh to be supervisor. Witnesses: John Roberts and Noah Clarke." Will proved, Sept. 16, 1677, in the Consistory Court of Norwich.

William Chamberlain, the immigrant, probably first appeared in New England in Boston, Massachusetts, as early as October 30, 1647, when he took a deed of a house and lot of Francis Smith.

On the southwest corner of West and Washington Streets, William Chamberlain owned property from Oct. 30, 1647, to Jan. 4, 1648/9,—a period of about fourteen months.

Two days after William Chamberlain disposed of his property in Boston, he was admitted an inhabitant of the town of Woburn—ten miles northwest of Boston, admitted Jan. 6, 1648/9 "the 6 of 11 mo 1648" the Woburn town record shows.

"Parly" Meadow and "Drum" Meadow are in the eastern part of the present city of Woburn but it is doubtful if the exact spot where William Chamberlain built his house in Woburn can be identified.

"the 10 of 11 mo 1651: (Jan. 10, 1651/2) Thomas perce Edward Winn & William Chamberlain are appointed a committee to looke on the inlargement Allen Convars desirs neer his hous and looke on an inlargment John Parker desirs and make a Return whether it will not be prejuditiall to the Towne." (Ibid, p. 17.)

The town records further show that he and his wife Rebecca had two sons born there (not in Concord as Savage stated), viz., Timothy, b. Aug. 13, 1649, and Isaac, b. Oct. 1, 1650.

Sarah Shelley

From its genealogical significance the will of Sarah Shelley of Boston is reproduced verbatim et literatim:

"I Sarah Shelley of Boston in New England Spinster, being Sick in body, but through mercy of sound disposing minde Knowing the uncertainty of this present Life do hereby revoke all former and make and declare this my last will and Testament, etc.

It. I release unto my Brother William Chamberlin a debt of Six pounds which he oweth me and I give and bequeath unto my Sister his wife and unto her three daughters Twenty Shillings apeice in money: etc"

Chamberlain, Rebecca, dau. of William Chamberlayne, Eng., London. (See Pedigree XXXIX, "Burt's Royal Families.") (Lineage Book D. A. C., p. 73). Henry Chamberlain, d. 1674, was a grantee of the town of Hinman, Mass., 1638; m. Jane, she d. 1676 (N. E. H. Reg., p. 145). William Chamberlain, John Johnson, and Steven Taylor, "Abriham" from London, Oct. 24, 1635.

From the will of Sarah Shelley it is apparent that Rebecca, the wife of William Chamberlain, was her "sister." See Shelley Ancestry.

Rebecca Chamberlain was marriageable in 1648 and became the mother of thirteen children between Aug. 13, 1649, and Sept. 27, 1671. She was, therefore, probably born between the years of 1625 and 1634. She and her sister Sarah Shelley were of the same generation as Capt. Isaac Addington and his wife Anne (Leverett) Addington, and since they were not sisters of the latter, they were likely to have been either own sisters or half sisters to Capt. Isaac Addington who appeared in Boston in New England as a "single-man" before June 6, 1640, and lived here until his death in 1652.

In 1673 William Chamberlain was chosen constable of the town, serving for one year. At that time the New England town constables served warrants upon all freemen and freeholders for town meetings, warrants upon the selectmen for choice of jurors, warrants upon offenders against the laws; collected the country rates and the minister's rates and paid the latter to the settled minister of the township, who was for many years the only person in the township who received a compensation for his services at public expense. The accounts which William Chamberlain and other early constables rendered to the town of Billerica show that the rates were paid in rye, wheat, Indian corn and other New England farm products.

William Chamberlain married about 1648. This marriage may have occurred in England as no record of it has been found in New England. His wife Rebecca was the mother of thirteen children, twelve of whom reached maturity and ten of whom left descendants. In 1692 the witchcraft delusion spread from Salem Village to Andover, Haverhill, Reading, Lexington, Chelmsford, Billerica and other towns. In 1816, John Farmer, the pioneer antiquary of New England, in his article on the "Early History of Billerica" in referring to the death of Rebecca Chamberlain on Sept. 26, 1692, said that she was probably "a victim of the infatuation which prevailed at that time." An examination of every paper in the Middlesex County Court Files from 1670 to 1700 has revealed many witchcraft cases but nothing relating to Rebecca Chamberlain. The town records of Billerica state that she "died in ye prison at Cambridge." I have the documentary record of several of whom it was recorded that they died there on the charge of witchcraft. Both she and her husband were probably buried in the Old South Cemetery in Billerica. Here she spent forty years of her life and William Chamberlain about fifty-four years. He was the last of the original settlers of ancient Billerica to enter "into that peace that passeth understanding."

The family of Chamberlaine is one of great antiquity in the Palatinate of Chester; so far back as the year 1120, we find Phillipus Camerarius in the suite of Randle, Earl of Chester, and again in the reign of Edward I; Richard Chamberlaine occurs at disposing of the Manor of Little Barrow to Hugh Despencer, first one of an est, Earl of Winchester, who also purchased the interests therein of Robert de Chamberlaine. The annals of Chester attest that this ancient Family has successively given its members to fill many places of honor and confidence Palatinate.

Children, last nine born in Billerica:

1. Timothy[2] Chamberlain, b. at Woburn 13th 6 mo. 1649 (Aug. 13, 1649). Savage stated in his Genealogical Dictionary that he was born at Concord, but his birth is recorded at Woburn where his parents were then living. He probably d. young as no further reference to him has been found in many years of searching.
2. Isaac Chamberlain, b. at Woburn, Oct. 1, 1650; probably named for his uncle Capt. Isaac Addington; assigned to Sergt. Ralph Hill's garrison with his father's family, Oct. 8, 1675 (Hazen, 110); d. at Billerica, July 20, 1681, aged 30 years.
3. William Chamberlain, Jr., b. about 1652.
4. John Chamberlain, b. about 1654.
5. Sarah Chamberlain, b. Jan. 18, 1655/6 (18 d. 11 mo. 1655).

6. Jacob Chamberlain, b. Jan. 18, 1657/8 (18 d. 11 mo. 1657).
7. Thomas Chamberlain, b. Feb. 20, 1658/9 (20 d. 12 mo. 1658).
8. Edmund Chamberlain, b. July 15, 1660.
9. Rebecca Chamberlain, b. Feb. 25, 1662/3.
10. Abraham Chamberlain, b. Jan. 6, 1664/5.
11. Ann Chamberlain, b. Jan. 6, 1665/6; alive Feb. 2, 1686/7. The town of Billerica paid Clement Chamberlain £08:03 for "keeping" her and Dr. How 12s. for "doctering" her, Dec. 12, 1726, from which it is inferred that in her old age she became a town charge.
12. Clement Chamberlain, b. May 30, 1669.
13. Daniel Chamberlain, b. Sept. 27, 1671.

Grace E. Chamberlain's line of Detroit, Mich., is: William[1], Daniel[2], Thomas[3], ——[4], Reubin[5], Orson[6], George S.[7], Grace E.[8]. Her husband, Joseph Franklin[9] Chamberlain's line is: Richard[1], Benjamin[2], John[3], John[4], Benjamin[5], Ezekiel[6], Joseph[7], Mark Henry[8], Joseph Franklin[9].

CHAPIN ANCESTRY

It has long been known that Samuel Chapin, who was at Roxbury, Mass., about 1638 and settled at Springfield, Mass., about 1642, where he was a deacon and a prominent citizen and died in 1675, brought with him from England, a wife named Cicely and several children, Henry, Josiah, David, Catherine, and Sarah. There was a tradition that he was born at Dartmouth, Co. Devon, a great-great-grandson, John Horton, having written in 1779 that Samuel Chapin was born in Dartmouth in Old England; and, in an attempt to verify this tradition, the writer of this article caused a search to be made some twenty years ago, in the registers of the Church of St. Saviour's, Dartmouth, Co. Devon, from their beginning in 1582 to 1635, but only one Chapin entry was found, the baptism, on 17 Dec. 1593, of Englishe, daughter of Robt. Chapin. It seemed probable, however, that Samuel Chapin might have been born in some parish near Dartmouth, and that, either because Dartmouth was the nearest large town or because he may have sailed from that port, the tradition that he was born in Dartmouth arose. Lack of funds prevented at that time a search of the registers of the parishes near Dartmouth.

It seems probable that the Chapins of the two parishes of Paignton and Berry Pomeroy, which were in the hundred of Haytor, Co. Devon, were descended from, or at least related to, the Chapin family of the neighboring hundred of Coleridge. In 1524, Robert Chopyn and Christopher Chopyn were at Cornworthy in the hundred of Coleridge, and in 1525, Henry Chopyn and Thomas Chopyn were at Harberton in the same hundred. At Totnes, also in the hundred of Coleridge, the parish in which Roger Chapyn, who was probably the grandfather of Dea. Samuel Chapin lived, there was a Stephen Chapin as early as 1489, a fact which seems to indicate that the ancestors of Samuel Chapin were living at Totnes as early as the fifteenth century; and the appearance of the Christian name Stephen in the family at that date seems to point to a connection between the Chapin families of Totnes and Cornworthy, for a Stephen Chapin was born at Cornworthy in 1570 and moved to Dartmouth. Thomas and Christian also were names that were common in both families. The Chapin family is found in Coleridge as early as 1333, when Petro Chapyn was taxed 8d., and six years earlier, in 1327, a Nicholas Chopyn was taxed at the manor of Sheftbeare in the hundred of Haytor—the first appearance (so far as is known) of the surname in Devonshire.

There are many records, relating to Devon that have not yet been searched for Chapin items, and further search among them would probably bring to light much more information about the early Chapins. Indeed, it is reasonable to believe that by such a search the ancestry of Dea. Samuel Chapin might be traced back for several more generations.

Soon after this an American genealogist accidentally found, in the registers of Paignton, a parish in Devonshire, on the shore of Tor Bay, about seven miles north from Dartmouth, the record of the marriage of Samuel Chapin and Cicely Peny (Penny), 9 Feb. 1623 (1623/4); and the same registers were found to contain several other Chapin and Penny records, including the baptism of David, son of Samuel Chapin, 4 Jan. 1624 (1624/5), that of Samuel himself, son of John Chapin, 8 Oct. 1598, that of Cicely, daughter of Henry Penny, 21 Feb. 1601 (1601/2), and the marriage, 14 Sept. 1590, of John Chapin (Samuel's father) and Phillipe Easton. Henry Penny of Paignton, baker, in his will dated 6 Apr. 1630, made bequests to his daughter, Cicelly Chapin, his nephew (i. e., grandson), David Chapin, and to Katherine Chapin and Sarah Chapin; and thus the identity of the Samuel Chapin and wife Cicely of Paignton with the Samuel Chapin and wife Cicely of Springfield, Mass., was established.

Mr. Roy D. Chapin, of Detroit, Mich., then employed the English genealogist, Richard Holworthy, Esq., of London, to continue the researches in Devon by examining the registers of the parishes near Paignton and also any other Devon records that might throw light on the English connections of Dea. Samuel Chapin; and it is the purpose of the writer of this article to present a summary of the results of Mr. Holworthy's researches, which, by the courtesy of Mr. Roy D. Chapin, he is permitted to contribute to the REGISTER.

In the registers of Berry Pomeroy, Co. Devon, a parish a short distance west from Tor Bay, Mr. Holworthy found the baptismal records of six of Samuel Chapin's children, namely, two sons, Henry and Josias, two daughters, Sara and Honor, a son, whose name was illegible in the registers, and a daughter, whose name was illegible except for the last two letters, in, probably the ending of the name Katherin. As Samuel Chapin of Springfield had children named Henry, Josiah, Sarah and Katherine, the identity of Samuel of Springfield with Samuel of Paignton and Berry Pomeroy was established beyond any doubt. The daughter, Honor, and the son, whose name was illegible, though doubtless Samuel, probably died in England.

No earlier generations of Chapins were found either in Paignton or in Berry Pomeroy, but in another neighboring parish, Totnes, Mr. Holworthy found a most important item. On 16 Jan. 1632/3, John Chapin, son of Samuel, was baptized at Totnes. This one record is the only Chapin entry in the Totnes registers after Jan. 1619/20, although there are many early Chapin records, some of which antedate those of the Paignton and Berry Pomeroy registers. The question arises as to why Samuel Chapin had one of his children baptized in Totnes, and the thought occurs that Totnes may have been the home of his father. This possibility is still further strengthened by the fact that in 1566, John Chapin, son of Roger, was baptized at Totnes. While there is no actual evidence that John Chapin of Totnes, son of Roger, was identical with John Chapin of Paignton, father of Samuel, the fact that John of Totnes was baptized in 1566, about the probable time of the birth of John of Paignton, and the fact that John of Totnes disappears from the Totnes records before John of Paignton appears in the Paignton records, make the identity of John of Totnes with John of Paignton very possible. The additional fact of the connection of Samuel Chapin with both parishes increases the possibility into a most interesting probability, for, if John of Paignton came from Totnes, he was the son of Roger, and thus the ancestry of Dea. Samuel Chapin of New England would be carried back another generation.

It is highly probable that further research in Devonshire records will throw more light on this subject, and it is not unreasonable to hope that this suggested probability may be proved a fact. It is truly remarkable that the baptismal records of Samuel Chapin and Cicely, his wife, their marriage record, and the baptismal records of all five of the children that they brought with them to New England should have been discovered. Such important finds encourage further research.

There were other Chapins contemporary with Roger in Totnes: Katherine, Joan, Christian, Walter, who had a wife Agnes, and several children, and Emlen, who was the mother of John Chapin of Lawhitton, Co. Cornwall. They were probably relatives of Roger, and their names may serve as useful clues for the genealogist.

The following pedigree gives in genealogical form all that is at present known in regard to the English history and connections of Dea. Samuel Chapin.

ROGER CHAPYN, of Totnes, Co. Devon, was born probably before 1540, as he had a daughter baptized at Totnes in 1560. The name of his wife is unknown, but she survived him and was living 9 Sept. 1590 as "widdo Chapinne."

Children, recorded at Totnes:

1. JOHAN (a daughter), bapt. 30 June, 1560.
2. JOHN, bapt. 25 Sept., 1566.
3. MARGERY, bur. 31 Oct. 1569.
4. MARGETT, bapt. 10 Feb., 1570/1.

5. Luke, bapt. 8 May 1576; bur. 9 Sept. 1590, "in the pleague." Perhaps other children.

John Chapin (? Roger), of Paignton, Co. Devon, probably identical with the John, son of Roger Chapyn, who was baptized at Totnes, 25 Sept. 1566 (cf. 1, 2), was buried at Paignton, 3 June 1600. He married at Paignton, 14 Sept. 1590, Phillipe Easton, who married again, at Paignton, 26 Jan. 1600/1, George Stone of Paignton, who died between 20 Jan. 1614/15 when his will was dated, and 1 (?) Jan. 1616/17, when it was proved. George Stone's wife, Phillipe, probably survived him, for he made her executrix of his will and residuary legatee, and bequeathed to her and her son, Samuell Chapin, his "furnace and all the furniture thereunto belonging" and his "brassen crocke," and to Thomas Chapine, his wife's eldest son, the bedstead over the hall and the tableboard in the hall and the rest of his other "crockes."

Children, baptized at Paignton:

1. Joane, bapt. 26 June 1591; m. at Paignton, 9 July 1611, James Narracot. Her stepfather, George Stone of Paignton, in his will, dated 20 Jan. 1614/15, bequeathed to Johan Norracott 49s and to John Norracott, "my godsone," 2s. 6d.
2. Thomas, bapt. 8 Mar. 1596/7; bur. at Paignton, 27 May 1628; m. there, 7 Aug. 1620, Bridgett Hannaf(o)rd, presumably the Bridgett Chapin who m. at Berry Pomeroy, Co. Devon, 7 Nov. 1641, John Duport. Children, bapt. at Paignton:
   1. Phillip (probably a daughter), bapt. 6 July 1621.
   2. John, bapt. 1 June 1623.
   3. Samuell, bapt. 4 July 1624; bur. at Paignton 15 June 1628.
   4. Thomas, bapt. 14 July 1626; perhaps the "Thomas Chaplyn" who was bur. at Paignton 30 Nov. 1685.
3. Samuel, bapt. 8 Oct. 1598.
4. Margaret (posthumous), bapt. 16 Nov. 1600, bur. at Paignton, 11 Dec. 1600. (The record of her baptism reads: "Margaret daughter of Phillip Chapin, vid.," the i being evidently a slip of the pen.)

Dea. Samuel Chapin (John, ? Roger), of Paignton, Co. Devon and of Roxbury and Springfield, Mass., baptized at Paignton, 8 Oct. 1598, died at Springfield, 11 Nov. 1675. He married at Paignton, 9 Feb. 1623/4, Cicely Peny (Penny), baptized at Paignton, 21 Feb. 1601/2, died at Springfield, 8 Feb. 1682/3, daughter of Henry Penny of Paignton, baker. Dea. Samuel Chapin came with his family to reside in Springfield in 1642. It would rather appear that he resided in this country considerable time, perhaps eight or ten years before he came to Springfield, and perhaps the greater part of his children were born in this country, but record has been found of the birth of but one—the youngest, and we do not find any record of but one of his sons taking the freeman's oath. David, his son, was made a freeman in Springfield, 5th day 2nd month, 1649. He is supposed to be the progenitor of all who bear the name in this country, and I have not found one of the name who could trace their lineage to any other source. In 1652, 10th of October, Samuel Chapin was appointed one of the magistrates of Springfield, and in 1654 his commission was extended indefinitely. He was also much employed in other public business—a useful and highly esteemed man. In the records of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay in New England, the name of John Chapin is mentioned in connection with the building of a movable fort, March 4, 1633/4, and in July 1634, mention is made of a meadow a part of which "John Chapin hath mown." That is all the information I have found respecting him. Whether he is a brother of Samuel or not is a matter of mere conjecture.

(Copied from Chapin Family Genealogy by Orange Chapin, 1862), The opinion of Rev. Samuel Chapin, D.B., of Rockyhill, Ct. as to the native place of Dea. Samuel Chapin:

"Samuel Chapin is believed to be the progenitor of all who bear the name in this country. Respecting the history of the family previous to his landing here, or the precise time of his arrival, nothing is definitely known. It has not been found that one of the name could trace their lineage to any other source.

Samuel Chapin was a legatee in the will of his stepfather, George Stone of Paignton, dated 20 Jan. 1614/15, and was one of the four persons who took the inventory of the estate of Henry Penny, 18 May 1630. In his will Henry Penny bequeathed to "Cicelly Chapin my daughter, my second great pan," and mentioned three of Samuel Chapin's children, as appears below. Since Samuel Chapin's son Josias was baptized at Berry Pomeroy, Co. Devon, 29 Oct. 1637, the migration of Samuel Chapin and his family to New England must have taken place after Oct. 1637 but not later than 1639, when he is known to have been in Roxbury, Mass. The summer of 1638, the year given by Savage, seems to be the most probable time for the voyage, and Savage doubtless based the date of arrival in New England on the fact that the earliest New England record relating to Samuel Chapin is dated 1639.

"The Puritan" St. Gaudens' statue, in figure and costume is intended as an ideal of Dea. Samuel Chapin as given by tradition current among his descendants for there is of his face and features no oral or written records in existence. A striking physiognomy typifying that grand race who "feared God and kept their powder dry." This statue at Springfield, Mass. was unveiled Nov. 24, 1887.

"Memorial to Samuel Chapin," Chapin Book, Vol. I:

"Lives of great men, all remind us
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing, leave behind us,
Foot prints on the sands of time."

Longfellow.

(See Orange Chapin Genealogy of 1862), "The beginning of the Chapin family is altogether creditable. We may well be satisfied that it should start with this genuine old Puritan (Deacon Samuel Chapin) and what he did, with his fellow pioneers, to open the American Continent and on it to found a city and to establish a model Christian Republic."

The Rolls of Heraldry, even if they could show the name linked with royal or princely blood, would add nothing to the true nobility of its origin. It belongs pecularly to this country, and the sphere of its highest dignity and honor was no doubt ordained to be here. Our chief anxiety should be to maintain and advance its true nobility by lives and deeds worthy of such a father." By Pres. Aaron I. Chapin.

(Hist. of Hadley, Mass., by Judd, 1863, p. 955), Samuel Chapin Governor of Plymouth and Mass. Bay Colony for 15 years.

(Soc. of Col. Wars, 1922, p. 95), Deacon Samuel Chapin, 1598-1675, Springfield, appointed Governor of Mass. Bay Colony, was a participant in repelling an attack from fortified houses in King Philip's War.

CHENEY ANCESTRY

Descendants of William Cheney

"Cheney Family—Pope"—"The original Coat of Cheney," says Burke, "was, erm. on a bend sa. three martlets, or. Crest—A bull's scalp ar." Lord Toddington, Sir Henry Cheney, used this Shield with modifications, and had for his motto: "Le mieux que je puis."

Cheney.

William Cheney was a very early resident of Roxbury, in the colony of Massachusetts Bay, in New England (now included in the city of Boston). The oldest records of that town which have been brought down to modern times are contained in a volume whose opening sentence says that "The Book Was bought in 1639 for the purpose of recording various matters relating to the inhabitants . . ." These records demonstrate the fact that "William Cheney was a land-holder and resident in Roxbury before 1640," and they do no more.

The settlement at Roxbury was begun in 1630, a little later than those at Dorchester and Boston; but there was no church organization for a year (p. 18) and no pastor till 1632. In the records of the Church of Roxbury, written by the first pastor, who was that remarkable "Apostle to the Indians," Rev. John Elliot, there is a very interesting list of the members, giving many personal sketches.

(p. 20) "And an acre of land commonly called the wolf trapp bought of Humphrey Johnson lying on the north of the land of John Gorton, and west upon the highway. And halfe of sixteene accres of woodland lately the land of Richard Sutton, but bought by him of John Johnson."

The deed of this "Wolf Trapp" is not on record, though there are deeds recorded whereby lands adjoining this piece were conveyed and called "Wolf Trap," showing that the name applied to quite a large tract, perhaps a valley where many wolves had been taken. We find two deeds of William Cheney's, one of land he bought, the other of some he sold, and we give them here.

"29.3.1648. Humphrey Johnson of Roxbury granted unto William Chenie of Roxbury twenty Acres of land in Roxbury bounded Wth the highway that leads to the fresh meddow on the East, the land of the heires of John Levens south, the Schoole lands & Richard Peacocks north west, & Giles Pason & the highway northerly & This was by an absolute deed of sale 2(1)1647. Wth all priviledgs there to belonging.

Humphrey Johnson and a seale"

Nicholas Butler.

William Cheney of Roxbury and Margaret his wife sell to John Peirpoint "One entire quarter or fourth part of a Water Mill in Roxbury, and one quarter part of a piece of Parish ground esteemed to be one Acre more or less being all that is his, or that belongeth to his said part of the said Mill."

(p. 22) One of the offices that called for promptness and energy and for good faculty of dealing with men was the position of constable. He was the policeman on disagreeable occasions; the messenger of the selectmen sometimes; but his chief care was collecting taxes. He had a "rate" committed to him; with a sum to be obtained from each adult male inhabitant; and he had authority to pay out sums of money on selectmen's orders. At the end of the year he made a detailed report. If he did not possess a good education he must have a sharp faculty of reckoning and a strong memory of names and numbers. William Cheney was one of the two constables in 1654/5 and his final account was approved Feb. 13, 1655/6.

But the citizens were not content to have him simply perform the toilsome work of a constable. Jan. 19, 1656/7 he was elected a member of the board of selectmen, associated with men of education and rank.

Jan. 18, 1663, he was made one of a committee to inspect Peter Gardner's "leanetoo" and "the fence that doth range from it" to see that they did "not intrench upon the highway."

We have already seen that he was chosen one of the feofees of the Free School in 1664; and on the town record we find him written down "as Feoffee" in an agreement touching some money belonging to the school fund, and affixing (his W mark) to the page along with half a dozen regular signatures, Jan. 25, 1666/7.

May 23, 1666, he was made a "freeman of the Colony," which made him eligible to colonial office and capable of voting on matters relating to the general government. But he did not live to make use of this franchise. He fell sick in the spring of 1666/7, as we learn from the opening phrases of his will; and after a few weeks he passed beyond the reach of care or pain. The town clerk made this entry in his list of persons deceased:

"William Cheney aged 63 yeares died June the 30 day, 1667;" and the hand of Rev. John Eliot or Rev. Samuel Danforth wrote in the church book among the burials: "1667. Moneth 5 day 2 Willian Cheany sen."

His will is in the hand of some expert penman, one of the pastors, it may be, or some tried friend and associate in public affairs; but though he could not pen it, he gave it marks of individuality, showing that he really composed it.

(p. 32) Children of William and Margaret Cheney. 1. Ellen[2], b. in England about 1626; m. at Roxbury, Mass., March 20, 1642–3, Humphrey Johnson, a son of John and grandson of Isaac Johnson who was one of the chief men in the founding of Roxbury. Humphrey Johnson resided in Roxbury many years, then removed to Hingham; was a man of affairs, a soldier in Capt. Isaac Johnson's Co. in the war against King Philip in 1675. Children: (1) Mehitabel Johnson, bapt. at Roxbury, March 29, 1646, (2) Martha Johnson, bapt. Sept. 12, 1647, (3) Deborah Johnson, bapt. Jan. 20, 1649.

Marguerite Cheney Burges, widow of William Cheney, Roxbury, 1639.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, thirty-second President of the United States, is a direct descendant of William Cheney. (See p. 171, "Franklin D. Roosevelt's Colonial Ancestors," by Alvin Page Johnson.)

MOSES or MOYSES[1] CLEVELAND or CLEAVELAND, the common ancestor of all the Clevelands or Cleavelands of New England origin, came, when a youth, from Ipswich, Suffolk county, England. According to family tradition he sailed from London, Eng., and arrived in America in the year 1635. He first landed somewhere in Massachusetts, probably either at Plymouth, Plymouth co., or at Boston, Suffolk co., Mass.

(F) Peter de Cliveland gave to the church of Giseburne two bovates and four roods of land in Ormefby, and all his land in the valley of Marton, and all his land called Tunge, with other parcels of land enumerated in "Mon. Ang.," II, p. 151 (20, a). He alfo confirmed the grant of his uncle Ralph (fupra, E), and his deed is witneffed by Peter de Cleiveland ("Charlton's Hist., p. 185).

(F) (G) (H) These three brothers were benefactors to the priory of Giseburne or Gifburgh in co. Ebor. See "Burton's Monafticon Eboracenfe," p. 351. See also the fame writer for the two generations (I) and (K).

Ann, 4 R. Hen. IV." The name herein is written by the scrivener corruptly Clefland.

(M) See "Drake's History of York," fol. pp. 323, 344.

Moses[1] Cleveland was born probably at Ipswich, Eng., about 1624 (according to court files of Woburn he was 39 years old in 1663), died at Woburn, January 9, 1701–2; "Maryed in Woburn, ye 26th: 7th mo. (September) 1648 Ann Winn," born, according to family tradition, in Wales, or, according to another account, in England, about 1626, died probably at Woburn prior to May 6, 1682 (no record of dates and places of either her birth or death), a daughter of Edward and Joanna (————) Winn.

Children, all born at Woburn:

10. Joanna[2] Cleveland (again), borne 5th of 2d mo: (April) 1670.
11. Enoch[2] Cleveland, borne ye 1st of 6th mo: (August) 1671.

Moses[1] Cleveland arrived in this country, according to all accounts and traditions, about the year 1635, only fifteen years later than the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, 1620. (From a letter of inquiry written from Ipswich, Essex co., Mass., by his great grandson, Rev. John[4] Cleaveland, No. 233 (Josiah[3], Josiah[2], Moses[1]).

Perhaps Moses[1] landed at Plymouth, but more probably at Boston, where in 1635 there were far better docks. He likely remained from 1635 to 1640 in Boston or vicinity.

The earliest settlement was made in the part now called North Woburn, Middlesex co., Mass. Persons who of late years have had the pleasure of visiting Woburn (only a short distance from Boston) could not but admire the great beauty of this model New England town.

(Woburn Militia Muster Roll, 1663: "Moses Cleveland, aged 39 years": therefore he was born 1624.)

In Tax List—26 6mo 1666 Moyses Cleveland. Committee's report, 1659–60, assigns to each of the seven proprietors (Moyses Cleveland being one) of New Bridgefield his share of the fence to build.

Grover Cleveland, the Chief Magistrate of the United States, was of this family. He attended the 250th Anniversary of Woburn, Mass., in 1905.

Moses[1] Cleveland became a man of some prominence in New England and, it would seem, was identified with all the political movements of the day.

Moses[1] Cleveland is probably buried in the Old First Burying-Ground at Woburn near the grave of his son Aaron[2].

Mrs. Ann (Winn) Cleveland died probably previous to May 6, 1682, for at that date her father, Edward Winne, made his will mentioning her three youngest children, but not herself.

For Winn, Wynne, Wynn ancestry, arms and genealogy—see Chapter V, "Edward[1] Winn and Descendants," Jacob Chamberlin, Moses Cleavelan, Jr., Samuel Cleveland, William Reed, John Wilson, Jr., Increase Winn, Joseph Winn, etc., and Benjamin Wilson.

Moses[2] Cleveland (Moses[1]) was a Volunteer in King Philip's war, 1675–6, accompanied by his brother Samuel[2] Cleveland ("Sewall's Woburn," p. 113)—From the records (of Woburn and the original Journal and Ledger) of Mr. John Hull (Treasurer-at-war, and afterwards), Treasurer (Massachusetts) Colony. Forty-five others voluntarily enlisted in the service or were drafted for it by lot, some of whom are mentioned above.

COMSTOCK ANCESTRY

Descendants of William Comstock

There is a story of the existence in the Muniment office at Frankfort, Germany, of pedigrees of nine generations of Komstochks prior to Charles von Komstohk, a baron of the Roman Empire, who escaped to England in 1547, because implicated with other noblemen of Austria and Silesia in the von Benedict treason.

In Devonshire, England, there is a little village called Culmstock, with a few hundred inhabitants, lying on the small stream Culm, from which it derives its name. It is called Colmstocke in the Domesday Book in the time of William the Conqueror.

From this village the name Comstock is doubtless derived.

Exeter is about twenty miles from Culmstock. The Cartulary of St. Nicholas Priory, Exeter, No. 365, has as witnesses in 1241, Will. de Wideberre, Godefrido de Kelli, Petro de Columstock, Nicho, Bissoph.

The History of Taunton (ten miles from Culmstock) gives among the early priors of Taunton, Richard de Colmstock, elected 1325; Ralph de Colmstock, elected 1331, resigned 1338.

The parish register of Stoke St. Gregory (nineteen miles from Culmstock) gives:

"Thomas, son of Thomas Coomstocke baptised ye 30 day Oct. 1636.
"Thomas Cumstoke was buried 30 Sept. 1658."

The Harleian Society publications give among the burials of the church of St. Martin-in-the-Field, London:

"Joannes Combstocke, 26 Aug. 1597."
"Johannes Comstock, 1 Nov. 1603."

These quotations show that the name existed in England at the time of the settlement of New England.

About 1895, an examination at the Somerset House, London, of the Record of Births in England and Wales showed scarcely one birth per year. The name in England has therefore nearly died out.

Careful search at Frankfort-on-the-Main, and at Breslau, fails to find any trace of a Baron von Komstok, or of a von Benedict treason. Dr. John Lee Comstock of Hartford, Conn., accepted the story. His sister, quoting it, says 5 September, 1865, "from my deceased brother I received what I have written, who as he informed me, upon a visit to Frankfort-on-the-Main by a gentleman whose name I do not recollect, copied and gave it to him."

Dr. Comstock was probably misinformed by this unknown person.

Family 1. 1. William[1] Comstock, married (2) Elizabeth. Miss Caulkins (History of New London) says that he lived to old age on Post Hill near north corner of Williams and Vauxhall Sts., New London, Conn. Stiles (History of Wethersfield) says we may be pretty sure that William Comstock was among the 26 from Wethersfield, Conn., in the expedition commanded by Capt. John Mason which captured the Pequot Fort at Mystic, Conn., 26 May 1637, killing about 500 Indians. (Introduction pg. 3.)

That William[1] had children John[2] and Daniel[2], is shown by a deed of 4 December 1694, in which William[3] Comstock of Lyme (son of John[2] of Lyme) and Daniel[3] Comstock of New London (son of Daniel[2] of New London), convey "land at Nyantik which said land was given to our grandfather William Comstock deceased, by the town of New London," 20 acres. The same 20 acres were granted by New London to William Comstock, 21 June 1647. Savage (Genealogical History of New England) says John Comstock, who was at Weymouth, Mass., in 1639, sat down at Saybrook, east part, now Lyme.

Christopher Comstock of Fairfield (and later of Norwalk, Conn.) made an affidavit about visiting good wife knapp, charged with being a witch, at New Haven, 29 May 1654. He named three of his children, Elizabeth, Daniel and Samuel, these being the names of the wife and two sons of William[1] Comstock of New London. William[2] and Christopher[2] were sons of William[1]. Christopher[2] married Hannah Platt and died 28 December 1702.

Christopher[2] (William[1]) married 6 October 1663, Hannah Platt, who was baptized 6 October 1643. Her father was Richard[2] of Milford, Conn.

Christopher[2] lived in Fairfield and Norwalk, Conn. His will, dated Norwalk, 22 December 1701; proved 4 January 1702–3; Hinman says Christopher[2] brought with him from England a silver tankard with his coat of arms upon it. His great-grandson, Major Samuel Comstock, gave it to the church at Wilton, Conn., and it was melted up. Christopher was the father of eight children, the 4th Mary[3], born 19 February 1671; married 18 January 1693. Hannah Platte, wife of Christopher[2], was the 5th child of 7 children of Richard Platt (South Britain Sketches and Records, by W. C. Sharpe, p. 101). (Soc. Col. Ward, p. 116)—Christopher Comstock 1625-1706, Norwalk and Fairfield, Commissioned Deputy at the General Court 1686–Sergeant 1654-1702 (The first soldiers of Norwalk, Conn., Records, p. 19)—Christopher Comstock granted Home Lot. (D. F. P. A. 1913)—William Comstock, b. about 1590, d. after 1662, m. Elizabeth Daniel. (D. F. P. A., p. 100) Wm. Comstock, b. abt. 1590, d. after 1662. Came from England, settled at Wethersfield before 1641. Granted a lot in Pequot near London and built a Corn Mill there, 650.

Currie—George Morehouse Currie, Esq., 18th in direct descent from King Edward III, Pedigree CCV. He was Sexton 1662. Monticello, Conn.—William Comstock and wife Elizabeth 55 yrs. in 1663 and six children came to this community between 1630–1637 and settled near Boston. (See Comstock Families, pp. 132–133.)

COOKE ANCESTRY

The Cookes of Wheatley Hall were known in Kent, Devonshire and Yorkshire, since the Reign of Henry IV. Sir Anthony Cooke was a Tutor to Edward VI, and his daughter, Anne married Sir Nicholas Bacon, keeper of the Great Seal.

The Cooke family, originally spelled Cok, is very old in England. To it belong Richard and Walter Cook, crusaders, who went to the Holy Land 1191.

The Family of Cook came into England with the Conqueror, and has been for centuries seated in the highest respectability in the County of Worcester. Francis Cook was a Roman Catholic, who joined the Separatists, and early went to Leyden, where he married his Walloon wife, Hester. He was born at Dantry or Blythe, Yorkshire, Eng. He came on the Mayflower, with his son, John Cook, but left Mrs. Cook and three children to follow later by the Ann. He was excommunicated from the Plymouth Church, where he was Deacon, for taking the part of the Quakers. He removed to Dartmouth. Francis Cook was a "man of judgement, who could see both sides of a question." He was called in the Records "The Ancestor." (See Legends, Loves and Loyalties of New England, by Caroline Leonard Goodenough.)

Francis Cooke was born in England about 1583. He went to Leyden, Holland, where he was married, June 30, 1603. The marriage record at Leyden reads "Francis Cooke, wool comber, unmarried, from England, with Hester Mayhieu, unmarried, from Canterbury, Eng., accompanied by Jennie Mayhieu, her mother, and Jennie Mayhieu, her sister." The Mayhieus were Walloons and Huguenots. Francis and his son John, were on the "Speedwell" when it sailed from Delftshaven, July 20, 1620, with some of the Pilgrims bound for America. At Southampton, they joined the "Mayflower" and set sail on August 5. The "Speedwell" began to leak, but although the ships put into Dartmouth for repairs and sailed again August 21, new leaks compelled the "Speedwell" to return to London, with such immigrants as could not be taken in the "Mayflower," which then went on alone. Francis and his son were on the "Mayflower." He was about 10 years old and called Little John Cook, the child Mayflower Ancestor, and he was the seventeenth signer of the Mayflower Compact. His son John was living in 1694, probably the oldest male survivor of the Mayflower. His wife, Hester, and the rest of their children came in the "Ann" in 1623. Winslow recorded "The wife of Francis Cooke being a Walloon, holds communion with the church at Plymouth, as she came from the French, by virtue of the communion of churches." The Cooks were silk mercers by trade and probably brought a loom with them. Francis and John were naval architects. They were also connected with civil offices. He was freeman, 1633; a member of Myles Standish's Company, 1643; credit in King Philip's War, credit 2 items 04:04:04 and in the expedition against the Indians; on a committee to lay out roads in Plymouth. Bradford called him "a very old man" in 1650. He died April 7, 1663, aged 80, and was buried in the old Plymouth burying ground. His will of 1659 names his wife Hester and son John, executors. An agreement of the heirs in June, 1666, showed the surviving children were John, Jacob, Hester Wright and Mary Thompson. Hester, his widow, died in 1675.

Children, four born in Leyden, one in Plymouth:

JANE, b. 1608; d. before 1666; m. 1627, Experience Mitchell.

Mr. George Ernest Bowman, Secretary of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, compiled and published in "Pilgrim Notes and Queries," March, 1914, page 46, a list of "Presidential Mayflower Descendants." This list has had no additions since. It included five Presidents. John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, were descendants of John Alden. General Zachary Taylor was a descendant of Elder William Brewster, and of Isaac Allerton. General Ulysses Simpson Grant was a descendant of Richard Warren. William Howard Taft was a descendant of Francis Cooke.

When the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt is added to the above list, with five lines of descent from Richard Warren, two lines from Francis Cooke and John Cooke, and also descended from John Tilley, John Howland, and Isaac Allerton by one line each, the Mayflower passengers will again be honored.

Both of Franklin D. Roosevelt's parents were Mayflower descendants. His father, James Roosevelt, was a descendant of two of the signers of the famous "Compact," John Howland and John Tilley, both of whom were members of the third exploring party, which made the first landing on "Plymouth Rock," and also from two other passengers, John Tilley's wife and his daughter Elizabeth.

His mother, Sarah (Delano) Roosevelt, is a descendant of at least three of the "signers," Richard Warren, also one of those who first landed (by five lines), Francis Cooke (by two lines), and Isaac Allerton, and also probably from a fourth "signer," Degory Priest. She is also descended from three other passengers, John Cooke (by two lines), and Isaac Allerton's wife, and his daughter Mary. ("Franklin D. Roosevelt's Colonial Ancestors," by Alvin Page Johnson, pp. 204-5.)

COPLEY ANCESTRY

THE HERALDIC JOURNAL—Vol. 4, 1868, pp. 175–6

The Copleys and Pelhams of New England—In our third volume, pp. 84–89, our associate, Mr. Appleton, gave an account of Herbert Pelham and his family, which rendered it almost certain that none of the name, of this family, remain in this country. There are, however, many descendants remaining of Peter Pelham, an eminent artist and engraver, the founder indeed of these arts in New England. Our attention has been called to this pedigree by a curious statement in the last edition of Burke's Commoners or Landed Gentry. Peter Pelham was step-father of John Singleton Copley, having married Mary Singleton, widow of Richard Copley.

Burke says (p. 1379) of the Singletons, "This family is one of importance and station in the county Clare, descended from the Singletons of Lancashire. John Singleton, Esq., a scion of the Lancashire house, m. Jane Bruffe, and had, with an only son John, two daughters, viz., Anne, wife of Samuel Cooper, Esq., of Cooper Hill, co. Limerick, and SARAH, who m. 1st., Richard Copley, then of the Co. Limerick, but afterwards of Boston in America, and was mother by him of John Singleton Copley, R. A., father of Lord Lyndhurst; she m. 2nd., Henry Pelham, Esq., by whom she had Henry and Edward Pelham; the former m. Miss Butler, daughter of William Butler, Esq., of Castle Crine, and had issue, Peter and William Pelham, twin brothers, who d. unm."

There are errors in this account. Mary (not Sarah) Singleton's second husband was Peter Pelham, and by him she had a son Henry. We find no record of a child named Edward, and in fact Burke does not give any particulars of him. Henry Pelham, who m. Miss Butler, was an artist, was b. at Boston, 14 Feb. 1748/9, and was drowned in 1806, in the river Kenmare in Ireland. 1. John Singleton[2] Copley son of Mary Singleton and Richard[1] Copley, b. in Boston, 3 July, 1737.

COPLEY—The Rt. Hon. Sir John Singleton (Lord Lyndhurst), London, Oct. 12, 1863, in his 92d year. It is well known that he was a Boston boy and it is presumed that he was born in a house, which stood on the descent of Beacon Hill. His grandfather,

Richard Copley, was a tobacconist. After his death, the widow Mary, Lord Lyndhurst's grandmother, carried on the business, in Lindall's Row, "against the Quaker meeting house," near the upper end of King, now State Street. She married Peter Pelham, who became also a tobacconist. He also taught writing and arithmetic, as appears by an advertisement in the "Boston News Letter" of Sept. 12, 1748, which is copied into the Register, Vol. IV, p. 176. He was "sometime Dancing Master," also an engraver, in mezzotinto. He engraved a curious print of His Excellency Wm. Shirley, Esq. His widow died in Boston, 29 April, 1789.

John Singleton Copley, the father of Lord Lyndhurst, was born in Boston, in 1738. He began to paint at a very early age, visited Italy in 1774, and England, two years after, in 1776, where he met his wife and children, whom he had left in Boston, they having left Massachusetts from Marblehead harbor, on the 27th of May, 1775, in the Minerva, Capt. Callahan, arriving at Dover on the subsequent June, the vessel being the last, it is said, that left New England, bearing the British flag. He devoted himself to portrait painting in London, and was chosen a member of the Royal Academy, in 1770. He was patronized by Mr. West. His first picture, which may be called historical, was the "Youth Rescued from a Shark;" but the picture styled "Death of Lord Chatham," which represents the orator fainting in the house of lords, after the memorable speech in favor of America, and which contains the portraits of all the leading men of that house, established his fame. Mr. Copley pursued his profession with unabated ardor, until his sudden death in England, Sept. 25, 1815, age about 76 years. Many full length portraits painted by him remain in Massachusetts. In coloring and drapery he excelled, and his likenesses were faithful. See Watson's "Men and Times of the Revolution," p. 202, 2nd ed. His wife Susanna, was the dau. of Richard Clarke, a merchant in Boston, one of the consignees of the India company's tea. His dau. m. Gardiner Greene, who in 1818, presented to Harvard College a collection of all the proof engravings of Copley's historical paintings.

John Singleton Copley (Lord Lyndhurst) was born in Boston, May 21, 1772. He was three years old when he arrived at London with his mother and sisters. At the age of seven, he was sent to a boarding school at Clapham, near London, and after the lapse of a few years, was placed under the Rev. Dr. Horne, of Chiswick, with whom he remained until he entered Trinity College, Cambridge, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, in 1794, graduating with the highest honors. He became a lay Fellow of his College and in 1795, visited the United States under a travelling fellowship of the college and made arrangements with regard to family property in Boston, in 1798, he returned to England—commenced the study of law at Lincoln's Inn, and was, for two years, with Mr. Tidd, a distinguished special pleader. In 1804, when 32 years old, he was called to the bar. He took the Midland circuit, but his rise was slow though not, perhaps, slower than that of some other lawyers of equal talents. He attained to the leadership of the circuit in 1816. Mr. Copley was elected a member of parliament for Yarmouth in 1816. or as some accounts have it, in 1818. In 1819, he took the degree of sergeant-at-law and was M.P. for Ashburton, having been made Chief Justice of Chester, in 1818. He became Solicitor-General, in 1819, which office he held until 1824, when he was made Attorney-General. In 1826, after an arduous struggle, Mr. Copley was chosen M. P. for the university of Cambridge. A few months later, on the death of Lord Gifford, he was made master of the rolls; was promoted to the office of lord high chancellor of England, and created Lord Lyndhurst, in April, 1827. His title was taken from the parish of Lyndhurst, in the New Forest (Hampshire), a small place about 90 miles from London. It has been stated that the Chancellor was led to select that place to furnish his title, because it was there he first met his 1st wife. Lord Lyndhurst held the Chancellorship from April 1828 to Nov. 1830. In 1834, he became Lord Chancellor in the first Peel Ministry, and again for the 3rd time, in the 2nd Peel Ministry, in 1841. When the Whigs returned to power, in 1846, he left the office, and never afterward held that or any other public station, though he often spoke in the House of Lords, when great questions were under discussion. He was called "The Nestor of the House of Lords." His speeches were remarkable for their clearness, vigor and force, even when he had reached nearly to his 90th year.

Lord Lyndhurst was made an honorary member of the N. E. Hist. Gen. Society in 1863. He was twice married, his first wife being Mrs. Thomas, the widow of an English officer; and in 1836, he married Miss Goldsmith, a Hebrew lady of singular personal attractions. He had children by both marriages. The London "Morning Post," of May 22, 1863, noticing his 91st birthday, being the day previous, on which occasion was assembled a large circle of admiring friends, remarks, "We understand that the marriage of the Hon. Georgiana Copley, Lord Lyndhurst's youngest dau., with Mr. DuCane, M.P., will take place at the close of the ensuing month."

Lord Lyndhurst was one of the most eminent statesmen of England. He died the senior peer of the kingdom. "His mind," says "Blackwood's Magazine" of him, while living, "is a diamond of the first water." It has a solidity, an acuteness, which master with unerring ease and rapidity, everything, to which its energies are directed."

He had

"A brain, in whose clear depths facts ordered lay,
For the calm will to fetch and rank and use,
A mood that with life's business blended play,
Yet never play and business would confuse."

An excellent portrait of Lord Lyndhurst in his chancellor's robes, painted some twenty years since, by Mr. S. S. Osgood, is in the portrait gallery of the N. Y. Hist. Society, and in the same gallery, there is a portrait by his father, an admirable specimen of his style, which was painted before he left Boston. It is a curious illustration of the singularly unostentatious habits of Lord Lyndhurst, as well as of the permanency of English social life, that he continued to occupy until his death, the same house which his father had occupied before him.

CUTLER ANCESTRY

Arms—A Dragon's Head erased.

The family of Cutler, originally of Stainborough Hall, in the County of York, tradition asserts to have been of Saxon origin, and to have descended from Leo Fric, Duke of Mercia, the first authenticated ancestor of John Cutler, who resided at Wortley in Yorkshire, with his kinsman, Sir Nicholas Wortley, a Standard Bearer in the Wars of the Roses.

The New England Ancestors were James, Robert and John Cutler.

1. James was in Watertown, Mass., in 1634, and is the descendant to whom this Cutler line is traced. Robert first appears in Charlestown, in 1636, and was married, while John Cutler Sen., with a family was in Hingham in 1637. John is the descendant through the Hungerford line. It was stated that this American branch descended from Admiral Sir Gervase Cutler (who was killed in 1645, in defence of the Castle of Pontifiact) and a descendant of Sir John Cutler was knighted in the reign of Henry VI and was Standard Bearer in the "War of the Roses." But this tradition, extensively circulated, could not be proven. Rev. Robert Cutler, who graduated at Harvard College, in 1741, only 47 years after the death of his emigrant ancestor.

   James Cutler was born in England in 1606, settled as early as 1634, in Watertown, Mass., where the first record of the family in New England is to be found. He made his will Nov. 24, 1684, at Cambridge Farms and died May 17, 1694, aged 88. He was one of the Original Grantees of land in the northerly part of the town on the road to Belmont. James married Anna, sister of Capt. John Grout's wife, both of whom were so opposed, tantalized in England for their Puritanism, that they resolved to seek their fortunes in New England and came unattended by parent or near friends. He had, that year, 1635, passed all necessary probation, had been received an inhabitant of Watertown and had a house lot assigned him. Oct. 2, 1645, he was one of the Petitioners "In relation to Washaway Plantation," now Weston. He married for his second wife, Mary, widow of Thomas King, and for his third wife, Phoebe, daughter of John Page. He had four sons, James, Thomas, John and Samuel and eight daughters; his son Samuel, if ever, married, left no descendants.

About this time, he settled at Cambridge Farms (now Lexington), on what is now known as Wood Street, near the place where William Hartwell resides, not far from the Concord (now Bedford) line. A part of the farm has been in the family until recently, when it was sold by the heirs of Leonard Cutler. He, James, is supposed to have built one of the first houses at the Farms, vestiges of the cellar still remain. The house was located some 30 rods from the present highway, on an elevation commanding an extensive view. He and others signed a Petition to the General Court Oct., 1682, to be set off as a distinct parish, having no Ministry without going from 5 to 10 miles. The people of Cambridge opposed the separation and the passage of the petition was not granted. The oldest paper upon the records at Lexington is a subscription list in 1691, for the purpose of erecting a meeting house in the precinct. It was signed by 41 persons, among whom were James Cutler and Thomas and John, his sons.

2. Thomas Cutler, son of James, was born at Watertown, Mass., about 1648, died at Lexington, formerly Cambridge Farms, July 13, 1722, aged 74. He had Jonathan and three other sons and three daughters. He took an active part in suppressing the Indians and was honored in the Public Records with the title of Lieutenant. He served as Assessor, Constable and Selectman and was also active in Church matters and contributed to the erection of the first Meeting House at Lexington, in 1662.

3. Jonathan Cutler, son of Thomas, was baptized at Watertown, Mass., June 17, 1688, and died at Killingly, Conn., where an inventory of his estate was ordered June 10, 1746. He married at Watertown, Aug. 17, 1710, Abigail Bigelow. Nov. 5, 1709, he purchased of James Leavens, in Killingly, land lying near that of his cousin, Isaac, and "Five Mile Run." This he sold for £53 May 18, 1710 and removed to Colchester, Conn. In 1726, he was of Billingham, Mass., where he sold to Samuel Cutler of Killingly (formerly of Salem) all the right he possessed by virtue of his being a proprietor of Killingly. He had Abigail, Jonathan, Beach, William, Stephen, Wyman.

4. Beach Cutler, son of Jonathan, was born at Colchester, Conn., July 4, 1716, baptized at Lexington, Oct. 20, 1717, and died at Plainfield, N. H. He married successively Abigail Hodges, May 14, 1746, at Pomfret, Conn.; Miss Knight, probably of Killingly, Conn.; and Miss Hall, of Plainfield or Lebanon, N. H. Aug. 14, 1761, the Township of Plainfield, N. H., was granted to Benj. Hutchins and fifty others, the most of whom came from Connecticut and among whom was Beach Cutler. Prior to this time he had resided in Pomfret, Killingly and Plainfield. He was a farmer. His children were, Benjamin, William, Abigail, Hodges, Knight, Anna and Perley.

5. Hodges Cutler, son of Beach, was born at Plainfield, Conn., July 27, 1752, and died Feb. 4, 1857, aged 105? He moved to Plainfield, N. H., about 1756, and thence to Lebanon. He was a soldier in the Revolution, as were also his brothers William, Benjamin and Knight. Children: Joseph Beach born Dec. 22, 1779, died Dec. 18, 1861; Aodolphus, died 1842; Anna (Mrs. Hinckley), died 1852; Jesse, born April 5, 1789, died Jan. 21, 1878; Lucy, unmarried, age about 30, died 1823; Calvin, not reported.

6. Jesse Cutler, son of Hodges, was born at Lebanon, N. H., April 5, 1789. He married Delia, daughter of William Huntington, July 4, 1815 (at Middlebury, Vt., I think, at least the family has lived there since my remembrance). He settled in Highgate, Vt., immediately after his marriage, having previously spent a year or more there arranging for his new home. On May 29, 1827, Jesse Cutler raised the frame to a new home which was afterwards the Old Hotel (having a dance hall with a spring floor). His son Horace was born same day. For some years, he carried on the Carding and Cloth Dressing business in connection with the lumber business, having purchased a saw mill with a valuable water power at East Highgate, afterwards, April 12, 1844, sold out his saw mill, moved to Highgate and carried on the Carding business there. About 1836/7, he disposed of this property and settled on a farm known as the "Old Homestead" and now owned by the heirs of his son Horace. He was a prominent and highly respected citizen, in 1849, he represented the town of Highgate in the General Assembly, was frequently chosen as Selectman, and for many years served as Justice of the Peace. He died Jan. 21, 1878, aged 89. Children: Delia M., born June 28, 1816, died June 19, 1833; William H., born April 5, 1819, died May 21, 1867; Jane A., born March 10, 1822, died April 12, 1844; Catherine, born Aug. 21, 1824, died Oct. 13, 1828; Horace L., born May 29, 1827, died Dec. 28, 1885; James H., born Dec. 12, 1829; Benjamin F., born March 1, 1835, died April 15, 1836.

John Cutler Ancestry

John Cutler, first appears among the persecuted adherents of Rev. Robert Peck, A.M., of Hingham, who "sold their possessions for half their value, and named the place of their settlement after their natal town." (See Bloomfield's "Topographical History of Norfolk.") He embarked, it is believed, in the "Rose of Yarmouth," which sailed on or about April 18, 1637, the year in which D. Cushing, Esq., the Town Clerk of Hingham, certifies that he arrived. He was at Hingham by or a little before June 10, 1637, following, when land was assigned him. He came attended by his wife, Mary, 7 children and 1 servant, and settled at Hingham with his beloved Minister and brethren, and died there Feb., 1637/8, ere time allowed him to make any further mark.

He married (first) July 3, 1650, Olive, daughter of James Thompson, one of the Selectmen of Woburn, in 1644, and (second) Mary, daughter of Abraham Browne of Watertown. Captain John Cutting of Watertown, Mass., 1636; afterwards at Charlestown, thence removed to Newbury, Mass., about 1642, had Sarah, who married James Brown and Mary who married Nov. 9, 1657, Samuel Novely. He made 13 voyages and brought many, very many, passengers from England. He died Nov. 29, 1650; his widow Mary, married (second) John Miller, and she died March 6, 1667. William Cutting, a passenger on the "Elizabeth" from Ipswich, England, 1634, aged 26. It may be asked if he were related to Richard who came in the same ship with him, or to Capt. John who was Master of the "Francis" which sailed on the same day, from the same port, and both reached Boston, Mass., the same day, without loss of any passengers. Yet where the asnwer will come from or what it will be, is beyond conjecture.

Richard Cutting, born in England in 1623. When only eleven years of age, Richard Cutting set sail in the ship "Elizabeth," which left Ipswich, England, in 1634, and upon his arrival in Boston harbor he remained in that town for some time, but subsequently settled in Waltham, Massachusetts, where he was admitted a freeman in 1690, and died in 1696 at the age of seventy-three years. Died March 21, 1695/6. He was a wheelwright at Watertown.

Note: If he was 11 yrs. old when he came in 1634, as given in Shipping list of the "Elizabeth," he was born in 1623 and died 1695/6; he was about 73 years of age when he died (A. M. C. R.).

His will dated June 24, 1694, mentions sons Zachariah and James, daughters Susan, Nucom (Newcombe) and Lydia Spring; grandchildren, John Cutting and Elizabeth Barnard. Inventory 185£, 17 shillings. The births of only three of his children are recorded."

Children of Richard and Sarah Cutting

See "Ancestry of Seth Cutting" by Anna M. Chandler Reilly.

1. Zachariah (this name on all the records is spelled with a J instead of a Z). He was mentioned in his father's will, but in all the genealogies examined of this family, Zachariah, son of Richard and Sarah, is either passed by, or just the mention of his name, or else dropped out entirely making Zachariah, Jr., a son instead of grandson of Richard, but we find in Middlesex County Probate Records; Docket 3882; his will dated March 5, 1730, Probated Sept. 11, 1732, from which we find the names of his children and other items (A. M. C. R.).

2. James, b. Jan. 26, 1647/8; m. June 15, 1679, Hannah Cutter. Settled in Troy, N. H.
3. John, b. ——, d. before his father; m. Feb. 9, 1671, Susan Arrington. Their eldest son John was mentioned in Richard Cutting's will as one of the grand-children. (See Middlesex Records, Vol. 1, p. 253).
4. Susanna, b. ——; m. June 26, 1672, Peter Nucum (Newcombe).
5. Sarah, b. Sept. 2, 1661; m. March 5, 1682, John Barnard. She d. before her father, leaving a daughter Elizabeth Barnard, mentioned in his will.
6. Lydia, b. Sept. 1, 1666; m. abt. 1685, Henry Spring, Jr.
7. Richard.
   (Found this name in Vol. I, p. 253, Middlesex Records and also found date of his death, Jan. 28, 1678, and no mention of him elsewhere. This record stated that he was son of Richard and Sarah.
   It also gave the name Zachariah, son of Richard and Sarah. Bond's History of Watertown, Mass., stated that only the names of three children of Richard and Sarah were recorded (A. M. C. R.).

Second Generation

Zachariah Cutting, born 1645, son of Richard[1] and Sarah (——) Cutting, lived and died in Watertown. In his will, found in Middlesex County Probate Records, Dockett 3882, dated March 5, 1730, Probated Sept. 11, 1732, he mentions the following:

"Son-in-law Samuel Waring (Warren), and his wife Lydia, daughter of Zachariah."

"Daughter-in-law Elizabeth Cutting. my son Zachariah Jun. widow."

"Grandchildren:
Elizabeth Holding (Holden) wife of Isaac Holding (Holden), Susanna Waring wife of Nathaniel Waring (Warren), and Sarah White wife of William White."

John Whitney, Samuel Warren and daughter-in-law, Elizabeth Cutting were Executors of the will.

In the Executor's accounts, Elizabeth Cutting sends in an account "for keeping the deceased's house and Nursing Him."

Third Generation

Zachariah Cutting, Jr., son of Zachariah[2] (Richard[1]) Cutting, has several variations in spelling in old Records as Cutin, Cuttin, Cutten, etc. Zachariah Cutting, Jr., had two wives; the name of the first is not known, they had two or more children. He married (second) May 5, 1701, Elizabeth Wellington, daughter of Joseph Wellington. She was born April 27, 1683, and died Aug. 21, 1687.

Children of Zachariah, Jr. and Elizabeth (Wellington) Cutting:

1. Jonas, b. ——; m. March 6, 1719/20, Dinah Smith, dau. of Jonathan and Jane (Peabody) Smith.
2. Elizabeth, b. Dec., 1601; m. Oct. 6, 1726, Isaac Holden, Jr.
3. Susanna, b. Aug. 1, 1703; m. Nov. 30, 1725, Nathaniel Warren.
4. Sarah, b. Feb. 1, 1706; m. July 7, 1726, William White.

This Zachariah Cutting, Jr., died intestate. The papers of Administration are in the Middlesex Probate Records, Docket 3883; and in these are mentioned: Isaac Holden, Jr., of Watertown; Nathaniel Warren and William White, sons-in-law of Zachariah Cutting.

Fourth Generation

Jonas, son of Zachariah, Jr.[3], (Zachariah[2], Richard[1]), Cutting, was born in Watertown, Mass., about 1700. He married March 6, 1719/20, Dinah Smith, who was born Jan. 25, 1695.

Their children were:

1. Jonas, b. Sept. 9, 1720; m. 1764, Lydia Cutting. (Was he 44 yrs. old at time of marriage?)
2. Zachariah, b. May 28, 1722; by wife Elizabeth had:
    1. Lydia, b. Oct. 15, 1744.
    2. Jonas, b. June 1, 1746.
3. James, b. March 8, 1723/4.
4. Lydia, b. April 25, 1726.
5. Francis, b. April 24, 1728; m. May 11, 1750, Thankful Warren.
6. Dinah, m. May 18, 1752, Micah Pratt.
7. Absolom, b. Dec. 5, 1730.
8. Salmon, bapt. in Shrewsbury, Mass., July 13, 1735, on account of him (the father) having owned the covenant in another church. Hence it may be supposed he came to Shrewsbury with a family of children. (See Ward's "History of Shrewsbury, Mass.")
9. Eliphalet, b. July 12, 1738; m. March 24, 1760, Mary Hayden.

The last Deed given in Watertown by Jonas Cutting is dated, 1736. He evidently moved to Shrewsbury, Mass., prior to 1735. His will dated Sept. 22, proved Nov. 1, 1748. Mentioned wife Dinah, sons, Francis, Zachariah, Absolom, Salmon and Eliphalet, and daughters Lydia and Dinah.

This Absolom mentioned in the will was not included in the list of children, nor could a hint of him be found in the town or church records of Watertown. But he was mentioned in the will and must be found; and where least expected, among fragments found "Absolom b. Dec. 5, 1730, next Francis." It proved the old saying, "Attempt the end and never stand and doubt, there's nothing so hard but search will find it out."

"The History of Shrewsbury, Mass.," 258-259, states that "Jonas Cutting and wife Dinah Smith, perhaps from Lancaster, lived in the North Parish which was made into the town of Boylston, Mass., March 1, 1786. It was called the North Parish or Precinct, from Dec. 17, 1742 to 1786.

DANIEL ANCESTRY

Col. William Daniel (Ca. 1625–1698), of Wiggan, Co. Lancastershire, England; Col. of a Regt. of foot in Scotland, and Gov. of the garrison and citadel of Ayre, Scotland; to Portugal, served in battle of Evora against Don John of Austria; date of coming to Va. unknown, but after 1665; received land grant, Middlesex Co., 1669, in Lancaster, 1672; Justice Middlesex Co.; Capt. 1689; married 1st, Dorothy, daughter and heir of Hugh Forth of Wiggan, Co. Lancastershire, England.

The name Daniell appears among the earliest settlers of various parts of New England. Of those who settled in the vicinity of Boston were: Robert Daniell of Watertown, about 1636, whose descendants in one line are traced in these pages; Joseph Daniel of Dedham, whose name occurs in a list of subscribers to form the Medfield Society in 1649, and who probably removed to Portsmouth, N. H.; and William Daniell of Dorchester, who was admitted Freeman in 1648. There is no proof that these three were relatives, though there is some reason to think that Robert and Joseph were brothers.

The name is a common one in England, if we may judge from the long list in the Encyclopedia of Heraldry. In that list the name Daniell occurs twenty-six times, Daniel five times, and Daniels once. The various spellings of the name that are found in old copies of deeds, wills, etc., at least so far as the family under consideration is concerned, are undoubtedly owing to the caprice or carelessness of scriveners and copyists. A search for original autographs has shown that all whose names are here recorded, with a few unimportant exceptions, from the first Robert down to the present time, have spelled the name Daniell. It is probable that the addition of a final s in other branches of the family is a growth of comparatively recent times. There may be families, however, whose ancestors brought the name Daniels from the old country.

1. Robert Daniell, probably from England, settled in Watertown, Mass., previous to 1636. (Dates are given as they are found in the original records. Consequently all dates prior to 1752 are in old style.) He was grantee of five lots, and purchased the "homestall" of Nicholas Jacob—13 acres of land, lying not far from the present site of the U. S. Arsenal. He was admitted Freeman, March 14, 1638/9. His wife Elizabeth died Oct. 2, 1643. In 1651 he removed to Cambridge, where he married Reana Andrews, May 2, 1654. He was released from training, April, 1655, and died July 6, 1655. His son Samuel was executor of his will. His children were:

1. Elizabeth; 2. Samuel; 3. Joseph; 4. Sarah; 5. Mary, b. Sept. 2, 1642; m. June 14, 1660, Samson Frary of Medfield, and Hadley; and they had children as follows: 1. Mary, b. July 24, 1662; 2. Hitte, b. Jan. 16, 1664; 3. Susanna, b. 1668; 4. John, b. 1669; 5. Nathaniel, b. 1675. Removed to Deerfield, Frary being the first English planter there. He was killed by Indians, Feb. 29, 1704. She was taken captive and killed on the way to Canada. (See Morse's Gen. Sherborn and Hilliston.)

DICKINSON ANCESTRY

Vert, a cross between four hinds, heads couped or. Crest—A hind's head couped or. Motto—Esse quam vidiri. Of the arms, the Dickinson Memorial says they date from the reign of Henry III, and were used by John de Caen of Kenson, temp. Edward I, and have an interesting story to tell. The green fields and the hinds' heads signify that the bearers were rangers in royal forests, most likely Epping in Yorkshire. The cross was not added until the time of the last crusade, and shows the Dickinsons to have been engaged in that holy war. These arms were borne by Hugh Dickonsen, who lived about 1422, the supposed ancestor of John Dickinson, a younger son of Lord Kenson, alderman of Leeds, the progenitor of the American Dickinsons and deceased 1525.

"MORTON MEMORANDA," By J. Granville Leach

Dickinson Family, Pages 131–7

Nathaniel Dickinson, Esq.[1] = Mrs. Ann Gull.

Obadiah Dickinson[2] = Mehitable Hinsdale.

Mehitable Dickinson[3] = Nathaniel Frary.

According to tradition, Nathaniel Dickinson sprang from a family which traced its descent to Walter of Caen, a kinsman and companion of William the Conqueror, and through him to Rollo, first Duke of Normandy. Tradition also relates that Walter wedded the daughter of the last Saxon Lord of Kenson, and was afterward known as Walter de Kenson. Just when the family took the anglicized form of the surname is unknown, but it was probably early in the fourteenth century. The two most ancient forms were Dickensen, then Dicconson. Dickensen appeared in the reign of Henry VII, but it is not until a century later that the second syllable is spelled with an i, which is clearly a corruption of the original orthography.

The date of Nathaniel Dickinson's arrival in America has not been ascertained. He was doubtless of the Massachusetts colonists who removed to Connecticut in 1635 and founded Wethersfield, where, in 1637, the first record of him is found, and where, in 1640, he was chosen to the important office of recorder, which he filled until 1659. He was on the board of selectmen in 1646, and the same year was sent to represent the town in the Colonial Assembly, and was honored by his fellow-citizens with re-election for ten years, serving through the administrations of Governors Haynes, Hopkins, and Wells. He was also active in religious affairs, and was one of the deacons of the Wethersfield church. Owing to ecclesiastical dissensions, pertaining to matters of practice rather than belief, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Russell, the majority of his church in Wethersfield, together with many of the Hartford church, resolved to return to the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. The agreement for removal was made at Goodman Ward's house in Hartford, 18 April, 1659, and Mr. Dickinson who was one of the fifty-nine signers to the engagement, was active in promoting the removal to and the founding of Hadley, and became one of the most trusted men in the town. He was on the committee to "lay out the boundaries and highways," and was one of the seven men, answering to the present selectmen, chosen 9 November, 1659, "to order all public occasions that concern the good of the plantation for the year ensuing." He was the first recorder of Hadley, was prominently identified with its church, as he had been with that of Wethersfield, and was elected its first deacon and one of the committee to build the first meeting-house. Mr. Dickinson was a member of the Hampshire Troop under Captain John Pynchon at its formation in 1663. In 1667 he was one of those chosen to lay out and bound the two meadows granted for the perpetual use of a grammar school, and was one of the committee appointed by the town and the trustee of Edward Hopkins, Esq., in 1669, to have full disposition and management of the estate given by Mr. Hopkins, and of any other estate that might be given by the town, or individual donors, for the benefit and maintenance of a grammar school in Hadley. This school is now known as the Hopkins Academy.

As further showing Mr. Dickinson's high standing in the community, it may be stated that Major John Pynchon, upon purchasing the Hadley tract of the Indians, opened an account with William Lewis, Nathaniel Dickinson, and Nathaniel Ward, as representatives of the planters, and the final settlement, 29 October, 1663, is acknowledged and attested by Dickinson and Ward.

To the town of Hadley belongs the distinction of being for several years, the residence of Generals Edward Whalley and William Goffe, two of the judges who passed the death sentence upon Charles I. Here, after they had been hunted from town to town throughout New England, by the minions of Charles II, they found a haven of rest in the house of the pastor, Rev. John Russell.

Doubtless Mr. Dickinson, as the intimate friend and next neighbor of pastor Russell, was in full possession of the secret, and met the noted regicides from time to time in the pastor's home.

As one of the founders of a great commonwealth, Mr. Dickinson spent a full and well-rounded life. Referring to him, M. F. Dickinson, Jr., Esq., of Boston, President of the Dickinson Association, in an address of welcome at the reunion of the Dickinson family, Amherst, Massachusetts, 8 August, 1883, said: "The records of such a life, which filled so important a place in the settlement of this country, and which appears to have been enriched by useful and honorable deeds, deserve to be perpetuated. No pencil of artist has preserved to us the semblance of his features. Nothing remains from which we can even imagine how he looked. Not a single word that he ever spoke has come down to our day. No gravestone marks his resting-place. We only know that he sleeps in the old burial ground in Hadley, but 'no man knoweth his sepulchre unto this day'."

He died at Hadley, 16 June, 1696. He mentions Wm. Gull in his will. He married Mrs. Ann Gull, whose maiden name has not been ascertained, nor the date or place of marriage.

DRAKE ANCESTRY

(Page 582) Arms—Argent; a wivern with wings displayed; gules. It is a maxim with the heralds that the more simple a coat of arms, the more ancient it is; this is too obvious to need any other proof in support of it, than the repetition of the maxim; which eminently applies to the arms of Drake.

The crest of this coat, as given by Guilim, is an "Eagle displayed," which seems to have been laid aside for the "dexter arm erect, holding a battle-axe," some ages ago, but wherefore does not appear. The motto has always been: Aquila non capit muscas.

The figure in the shield, or escutcheon, is called by heralds a Wivern, which is another name for the fabled Dragon of antiquity. Draco or Drago, is the Roman name of Drake, and as late as the time of Sir Francis Drake, writers frequently coupled his name with that of Dragon. Lope de Vega calls him by no other name throughout his long poem of ten books, which he composed about him; and Sir Winston Churchill (who married a Drake) says, Sir Francis found no Dragon more terrible than himself to guard the treasures of the Spaniards; and surely the Spaniards had reason, if any people could have, to imagine that Sir Francis Drake was descended and that, too, in no remote degree, from the old master of all that was terrible.

The Romans had among their legions DRACONARII, who were the bearers of their standards; hence the name DRAKE may have been derived from that Roman officer. The Romans got the name from the Greeks, and it seems to have been known other than an ideal one, from the Mediterranean to the Baltic, in earlier and later times.

We find that the DRAGON was displayed in the banners of the Britons as early as 1448, and that churches have borne the emblem from time immemorial.

Another coat of arms was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Francis, the great navigator.

The family of Drake has been distinguished in England from the earliest ages by a long array of noble men—soldiers, navigators, clergymen, martyrs and authors. But our limits forbid us from entering more into details; the curious reader will find these items in the little work from which we have made the preceding extracts. It is sufficient for our purpose to say that among the many noble families of the name, in Great Britain, the family who held their seat at Ashe were ever prominent, and from them it is supposed that the Drakes of New England were descended.

Of this family was JOHN, one of the Council of Plymouth, a member of the original company established by King James, in 1606, for settling New England. Several of his sons came hither and settled, viz.: Richard, who came over with two or more sons, and nine daughters, and settled at Hampton, N. H.; and John, who came to Boston in 1630 and settled in Windsor. From these are descended all of the name in America.

John married Elizabeth Rogers.

JOHN DRAKE, SR. (1640), had a lot granted to him twenty-two and one half rods wide. He had three sons and two daughters, all born before he came to Windsor. His son Job had a lot granted to him. He married Mary, daughter of Henry Wolcott, 1646, and had two sons and five daughters. The second son, John, had a lot granted to him. He married Hannah, daughter of Deacon Moore, and had five sons and six daughters, 1649-1674. The third son, Jacob, married Mary, daughter of John Bissell, and had no children. He had the homestead.

JOHN DRAKE, JR.[2], married Hannah Moore, November 30, 1648; was one of the first settlers at Simsbury; inventory presented September 12, 1689; Simsbury property amounted to £393/15s.; had a son John (now of Danbury) who in 1708 chose a guardian; she d. February 16, 1686.

Children:

JOHN[3], b. Sept. 14, 1649.
JOB[4], b June 15, 1651.
HANNAH, b. Aug. 8, 1653.
ENOCH[5], b. Dec. 8, 1655.
RUTH, b. Dec. 8, 1657.

JOHN DRAKE, the father of Ruth, was descended from the illustrious English family of that name, which had its seat at Ashe. In England the name has long been borne by many distinguished as navigators, clergymen, martyrs and authors. Among the foremost of these English families is that which has its seat at Ashe, County Devon, and from it descended the greater portion of the Drakes of Massachusetts and Connecticut. The line of ancestry of the Windsor (Conn.) Drakes may be thus summarized:

ENO ANCESTRY

The Eno Family in France

Arms[1]. Azure, a chevron argent, two estoiles d'or in chief, crescent argent in point.

Hennot

The first of the name of whom we have authentic record[2] was Collard Henno, of Mons (the capital of the ancient county of Hainault), whose presence at the reception of Burghers, in Valenciennes, is given in the Registry of Burghers of that city under the date of February 7, 1463.

[1]Copy certified by Public Librarian at Valenciennes, and by the Alderman (April 6, 1903), and stamped with the seal of the Public Library, seal of the City, and the seal of the French Government.

[2]Records of Threadneedle Street Church, published by the Huguenot Society of London; and extracts from documents relating to the Huguenot immigration of the 16th and 17th centuries in the British Museum.

The immediate ancestor[3] of the American family, was, however, his great-grandson, Jacques Henno, who was lieutenant of the guard formed by the Huguenot citizens of Valenciennes to resist the Spaniards; and who, after the capture of the town, fled to England, toward the end of the 16th century.

With him, at the time, was his son, Jean Henno, who afterward married Catherine Jone, and whose son (the grandson of Lieutenant Jacques Henno), Jacques[2] (or James) Henno, 3d, emigrated to America in 1648, and settled at Windsor, Connecticut.

1. Collard Henno.

2. Jacques Henne married —— Pesquier, daughter of Nicholas Pesquier, Bailiff of Gand.

3. Jean de Henne married Isabelle Jeanne Caille, daughter of Toussaint Cail and of Jossine Pellerin.

4. Jacques de Henne married Jeanne Doye, daughter of Antoine Doye, Bailiff and Receiver of Gommegines, and of Rose Dugardin, daughter of Alard Dugardin and Jeanne Roger.

5. Jean Henno married Catelaine Jone.

6. Jacques (James) Henno married Anna Bidwell at Windsor, Connecticut, America, in 1648.

References: Collard Henne. 1. Collard Henne, of Mons, is mentioned as father of Jacques Henne at the Reception of Burghers, Feb. 1, 1463[4].

[3]Jacques Hennot, late lieutenant of the military guard of Valenciennes, surrendered twice at Tournai, the first time with Guy de Bres (the celebrated Huguenot preacher, executed there in 1567), the second time after the death of the latter. He was then taken under guard toward Lisle, but escaped through the intervention of a band of Huguenot horsemen, after which escape all trace of him was lost by the authorities. He was pursued by order of Theodore Cresia, commandant of the Italian Cavalry (under the Duke of Alva), who gave instructions to capture the body of Jacques Hennot wherever he might be found, promising an honorable sum to any one who should deliver him dead, or a double amount if the said Hennot should be delivered alive. ("Confiscations et ordonnances concernant les troubles survenus a la fin du VXI Siecle," Royal Archives, Brussels, where, also, is found the decree confiscating all the lands and goods of said Jacques Hennot, and branding him as an outlaw.) The next trace of him is in the documents of the British Museum relating to the religious wars of Flanders. There among the names of the refugees is found that of Jacques Hennot, late lieutenant of the military guard at Valenciennes. This Jacques Hennot settled in an English Province; his son John, however, repaired to London, where we find the record in the archives of the Threadneedle Street Church of the baptism of James Hennot, son of John Hennot, on August 21, 1625. This last-named James Hennot is inscribed in the Historical Record of the British Museum as having left London for North America in 1648. "Archives Threadneedle Street Church," Vol. ii, pp. 1576–1624. State papers, etc. 32091-32096 (from 1086 to 1760), and especially 1571-1624. British Museum MSS.

The name is spelled variously Henne, de Henne, Hennot, Henno, and later, in America, Enno. It was not spelled Eno until about 1700.

Jacques Henne (1st). His father-in-law is given as Nicolas Pesquier in the will of his nephew, Francois[5]. He was alderman (echevin) of Valenciennes, in 1466 and 1491, and Prevot (Royal Governor) in 1480[6].

Jean Henne: Jean Henne is given as the deceased husband of Isabelle Jeanne Caille in her will, September 13, 1559[7], and as the son of Jacques Henne in the will of his brother, Francois, September 23, 1547[8]. He was alderman of the city in 1536–1539 and 1542[9].

Jacques Henne (2). His father-in-law is given as Antoine Doye, Receiver of Gommegines[10]. He is mentioned as the son of the late Jehan Henne and Isabel Guaille, in a deed of sale[11]. He was alderman in 1560–61–1566, and Treize Homme in 1577[12].

The Eno Family in America

The name has been variously spelled on this side of the Atlantic; Enno, Eno, Enos (Enoe—rarely).

I

6. James Enno, son of Jean Henno and Catelaine Jone, who founded in America the family that bears his name, was a native of London. He was baptized August 21, 1625, in the Threadneedle Street Huguenot church. He sailed for America in 1648, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut. The final "s" was added by Major General Roger Enos, but was always silent. There has always been a tradition that the family came from France. That word "always" is to cover a period of nearly 250 years, 1646–1891. It is worthless unless the tradition was written down by some one early in the 18th century. The name "Ennew," pronounced "Ennoo," has long existed in Colchester, Co. Essex, Eng. The Rhode Island family of Enos pronounced their name with an "s." It is found written in the 18th century Ennis, and "Eanoss." The Delaware Enos family doubtless descend from the Rhode Island family. James Enos's trade of a barber is as much English as French. In his day no man in London could vote unless he was a member of one of the trade guilds of that city. Nor could he be elected Alderman, Sheriff, or Lord Mayor of London until he had served his apprenticeship in a trade guild. The Lord Mayor was required to be a member of one of the twelve great Livery Companies. James Eno had probably learned his trade of barber-surgeon in the Barber-Surgeon Company of London, of which Sir Astley Cooper and other eminent surgeons were apprentices. New England, Maryland, and Virginia were largely settled by men who had thus learned their trades as apprentices to the English Craft Guilds. Isaac Allerton of the "Mayflower," whose descendants are among the most distinguished of New England and Virginia people, learned his trade in the Merchant Tailors' Company, London. John Gedney of Salem, Mass., "Vintner" and "innkeeper," and his son, Bartholomew Gedney, "ship carpenter," ancestors of the noble family of Fairfax in Virginia had learned their trades there.

The first American mention of James Enno is a record in "Windsor Church Records" of his marriage to Anna Bidwell, August 18, 1648. There has been found no record of his arrival in this country, but his grandson, Samuel Eno, of Windsor, who seems to have been a man of property and influence, and who was nineteen years old when his father died, and thirty-three years old when his mother died, was therefore probably familiar with the history of his grandfather, and caused a tablet to be erected to his memory in the Old Windsor burying ground with the following inscription:

"In memory of Samuel Eno, Esqr., and Eunice, his wife. He died Aug. 17, 1778, in the 83d year of his age. She died May 7, 1792, in the 84th year of her age. And also Eunice, daughter of the deceased, who died March 23, 1757, aged 9 days. And also Sam'l Eno, son to Mr. Samuel Eno, junr., who died Feb. ye 27, 1789, in the 4th year of his age; and also Mr. James Eno who came from England and settled in Windsor A. D. 1646, and died July 11, 1682. His wife died Oct. 7, 1679. Also James Eno 2d, who died July 16, 1714—his wife died March, 1728, and was buried in Simsbury, old burying ground. Also Lieut. Dan'l Eno, died Dec. 9, 1797, in the 56th year of his age."

He received a grant called Massacoe[13]. He lived in Windsor, as did his son James 2d, but both owned lands in Massacoe or Simsbury, which was an appendix of the plantation of Windsor and was not incorporated as a separate town till the year 1670. He owned an island in Simsbury River, near Scotland, about twenty-one acres, which he gave to his sons James and John. This island with fifty acres of land, was granted to him in 1660, "by Mr. Henry Clark and Mr. Matthew Allyn appointed by the Cort," and John Moses and others had also land then granted them in like manner (Simsbury Records, lib. 1, p. 90).

"In the year 1660, James Enos had fifty acres of land and an Island granted to him within the limits of Simsbury by Mr. Henry Clark and Mister Matthew Allyn apoynted by the Cort and John Moses and others had also land then granted to them in like manner, a true coppy. I, Mathew Grant[14], do testify that James Enos had this grant made to him as above sd. taken out of a coppy I had by Mister Henery Clark and Mister Mathew Allyn."

[13]Among other records of property deeded to James Enno is the following: "Also had given in the Palizado a stray of land on rodd in breadth and in length from the four side of his shop as it now stands back to the line of Walter Taylers land and bounded North by the land of Tahan Grant and east by the Towne Common. Nov. 28, 1663" (Windsor Records).

"a Book of town wages in Windsor begun by Matthew Grant in 1654."

[14]Mathew Grant was the ancestor of General U. S. Grant.

In April 1666, James Enno and John Moses, acting as agents for the town of Windsor, bought from Nassahegan, sachem of Poquonnoc, a tract of twenty-eight thousand acres, for which service the town granted him lands known as Tilton's Marsh, situated under the Simsbury mountains.

In W. Ld. Rec., under date of 28 Nov. 1663, is rec. gt. of "a stray (i.e., a strip, or small, unused piece) of ld." to James Eno, "in the Palizado, to build him a shop upon, to barber in, and he has now built it"—see also chapter on "Early Settlers and Distribution of Home-Lots." (In corroboration of this hint at James Enos's business, there still exists in the possession of a member of the Eliphalet Eno family of Torrington, Conn., a very curious shaving, or barber's bowl, such as were used by the surgeon-barbers of olden times, and are even now used in Spain and some other European countries. This bowl is of coarse crockery, grayish-white; 38 inches on its outside, and 24 inches on its inner circumference, and has on one side of its rim a circular indentation, intended to fit around the neck and under the chin of the person being shaved, while nearly opposite to it is a hold, or dent, in the rim, evidently for the thumb. There is, also, another hole in the rim of the bottom of the bowl, for the purpose of inserting a string which encircled the waist of the customer, to hold it in place. The inner face of the bowl is decorated with representations of the various utensils and adjuncts of the barber's trade (viz., scissors, razor, combs, soap and brush, and the date 1663) done in blue and under-glazing, as is, also the conventional ornamentation of the border.

In 1664, James Enno with six others presented a petition to the court asking for church privileges and baptism for their children. Signed by William Pitkin, of Hartford; Michael Humphreys, of Windsor; John Stedman, of Hartford; James Enno, of Windsor; Robert Reeve, John Moses, of Windsor, and Jonas Westover, of Windsor. This petition, written and signed, is still preserved at the State Library in Hartford.

Inventory of his estate offered at Hartford by his widow, and his son James and relict Hester Enno appointed administrators July 19, 1682. His children agreed to the distribution of his estate, and John Mandsley, Return Strong, and John Moore set out to the widow her £20, given by jointure to her and housing and lands according to the jointure (she being his 3d wife), and the remainder ordered to be delivered to his children forthwith, the children agreeing to pay the duties against the estate.

Record of deeds to James Enno and John Enno occur from 1660 to 1690, but the following record indicates that John afterwards moved to Jersey. mill at Pequonnock. He lived at Windsor, but owned lands in Simsbury, not only those derived from his father, but lands acquired by himself[19/20].

James Enno, 2d, deeded most of his lands to his children before he made his will. He gave his half of the island to his sons, James, William, and John, of Simsbury, and Samuel of Windsor. His will is dated June 24, 1709. Inventory dated August 5, 1714. Estate £642/17/6. His wife died in 1728, and her son-in-law, Joseph Case, presented the inventory of her estate.

In the same family is kept a very ancient Eno baptismal blanket and "fixings," thus described by the present owner, Mrs. Henry J. Jackson, age 70, a grand-daughter of Eliphalet Eno of Torrington, Conn.: "This baptismal robe is a piece of cloth, of mixed cotton and silk, quite thick, with stripes of various colors and shades (drab, green, blue, and red), very gay. It is 3 feet 4 inches in length, and 2 feet 8 inches wide, of two breadths; a pair of little sleeves of the same material, 8 inches long; a pair of mitts (very small) of drab linen, embroidered upon the back and around the thumb with silk thread, and tipped at end with red silk; then a tiny little cap of silk of darker stripes and trimmed around with same as robe." In the hands of Mr. John S. Eno of Brewsters, N. Y., is an ancient sword said to have been brought from England by the Emigrant Eno, which has been handed down for several generations in the line of the eldest son. (h. r. s.)

In 1664, James Enno, with six others, presented a petition to the court, asking for church privileges and baptism for their children. The original petition is still preserved in the State Library at Hartford. See also p. 192–194, Vol. I.

Married, December 26, 1678, Abigail Bissell, daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Holcombe) Bissell. She was born July 6, 1661, and died April 19, 1728. It is probable that the Bissell family is of Huguenot origin, but the founders of the American branch came directly from England. John Bissell was in Windsor, Conn., before 1640, and died October 3, 1677. Samuel Bissell, third son of the preceding, was born in Windsor, and died May 17, 1697. FANTON ANCESTRY

Compiled by Elizabeth Rixford

James and Joseph Fanton, brothers, probably came to Vermont with the first Settlers, Willard Farrand, James Hawley (great grandfather of the author of this book) and others who attended the organization Meeting in the town of Georgia in 1788, on their way to Northern Vermont. In February, 1804, James[1] Fanton bought 125 acres of land at East Sheldon, which is still owned by his great granddaughter, Mrs. James McFeeters of Swanton. A great-great-granddaughter of James[1] Fanton, Miss Anna McGowan of Burlington, still has in her possession, the "old letter" written before the days of postage stamps, April 12, 1814, from Huntington, Conn., to Mahala T. Fanton, thus proving that a sister must have also have come to Vermont. Miss McGowan also has in her possession the original Deed of land granted to her great-great-grandfather, dated Feb. 28, 1808, and signed by James Hawley, Collector and Eben Marvin, Justice of the Peace, Witnesses, Bradley Barlow, Stephen Royce, and also the inventory of his personal estate left to his widow Rachel Fanton, June, A. D., 1837, written before the District of Georgia, and signed by the Hon. William Bridges, Judge.

Miss McGowan also has an old letter written before the days of postage stamps and envelopes, by David Fanton of Huntington, Conn., brother of James[1], who came to Vermont (14 years old then), his brother Joseph with him. Joseph returned to Connecticut. Nothing has been heard of David since the letter.

Great Great Grandfather, as James[3] remembers the story as told him by Father: ~~John or~~ Jonathan Fanton, came to Mass. with early Settlers. Married to a Spanish woman—name unknown. Do not know how many children were born to this marriage, but there was one son James, who was married twice. Do not know the name of first wife, but four sons were born.

His second wife was ~~Prudence~~ Louise Hawkins, who also had a previous marriage to a man by the name of Sears. Louise Hawkins was a Tory, and had a grant of 12,000 acres of land in Conn., which was confiscated after the Revolution. James and the four sons of his first wife, died in English Prisons.

Three sons were born by the second marriage, namely: James, Joseph and David. Joseph came to Vermont with James but staid only one summer and returned to Conn. Not much was known of David. He was expected in Vermont at one time, but never came, and no more was heard of him. James came here at the age of 14 years from Conn. He met Rachael Collier in Highgate. James staid in Vermont and married Rachael Collier. Rachael Collier's mother was a Wilcox.

Fanton, now a retired farmer, purchased part of his Father's Estate at Fairfield Station, when the Estate was settled. On account of the Earthquake of a few years ago, the old home (Mansion) had to be torn down. There is probably not an old home in the country that had more beautiful fire-place mantels and wood-work. There is a legend connected with this old home, "that the ghost of the builder, Diamond (called Demon) Barlow, was often seen sitting on a cider barrel, in one of the rooms in the cellar." Nellie Fanton, is the daughter of Albert Kittle of East Sheldon. Her father's farm was part of the landed property, owned by her great-grandfather, James Hawley, and is still owned by one of her brothers.

In unnumbered instances during her life time, she helped others along the road of bereavement and affliction. She was always active in community affairs. She was at the time of her decease, Treasurer of Trinity Episcopal Church, also of the local branch of the Red Cross, and of the Village Improvement Society. FERGUSON ANCESTRY

The Arms which are always given as those of the clan, are azure, a Buckle argent between three boars heads couped, or.

The Suaicheantus or badge given by the books is the little sun-flower (or rock rose), Helianthymum Marifolium or in Gaelic Ros-greine. It has however, been said that the poplar and also the bog-myrtle was used as a badge.

In an interview with King James VI, David Fergusson, the Reformer, was discussing the feuds between the great families. "If you go to surnames," said he jocularly, "I will recon with the best of you in antiquity; for King Fergus was the first king in Scotland, and I am Fergus-son."

Early Notices of the name of Fergus, Ferguson or Fergusson.—Tradition has it that the clan and name Fergusson or Ferguson is among the very oldest of the Highland septs, and that in conformity with the name the race owed its origin to King Fergus. The traditionary pedigrees of the royal house of Scotland, handed down by the mediaeval historians, and associated with warfare waged with the "auld enemies of England" by the pen as well as with the sword, place the first Fergus, "the founder of Scotland's monarchy," whose legendary death by drowning off the Irish coast gave its name to Carrick Fergus, as early as three hundred years before the coming of our Lord. Modern research has, however, conclusively established that this Fergus is a mythical personage; but it has as certainly confirmed the fact that the first substantial settlement of the pure Scottish race in Scotland was led by a Fergus who was of royal blood, and whose house had for generations enjoyed regal dignity in Ireland, and was destined to produce, in St. Columbia, the founder of the Celtic Church in Scotland. The arrival on the Scottish shores of the real King Fergus—Fergus Mor MacEarca—took place in the year 498, A. D. He was the true first of the long line of Scottish kings, the attachment of their people to whom is so quaintly expressed by the old Covenanter Baillie:—"Had our throne been void and our voices taken for the filling of Fergus's chair, we had died ere any other had sitten down on that fatal marble but Charles alone."

FIELD ANCESTRY

Field Family in England

In a roll of Arms, attributed to the reign of Henry III, and which is considered the most ancient in England, of which any copy exists. The Coat of the de Segraves is given—Sable, three garbs on. A little later the Earls of Chesterboro—Azure three garbs on. John born in Ardsley, England, 1568. John Field born abt. 1525, East Ardsley, England; m. 1560, Jane Amyas, dau. of John, d. Aug. 30, 1609. He died May, 1587. Res. Ardsley, England. Richard Felde, b. at East Ardsley, Eng., m. Elizabeth ——, made his Will, Aug. 19, 1542; proved Dec. 8, 1542.

The name is derived from a locality. Field-Del field in the earlier Port of Wakefield Rolls, in 1400. The simplicity of the family Arms, aside from the early date on the Monument in Madley Church, show they were among the most ancient in the United Kingdom.

The family of Del Field descends from the ancient Counts of La Field, Alsace, who long resided at the Chateau that still bears their name, situated in a pass of the Vosges Mountains, three days journey from Colmar. There were previous to 1533, Stately Monuments to two of the Counts of La Field in the Cathedral Church of Strasburg.

Roger Del Field, born Sowerby, England, about 1240; married ——. He was descended from Sir Hubertus De la Field and the head of the family which settled in Lancester and Kent counties, England. Resided Sowerby, England.

Children:

1. Richard, b. abt. 1276; m. ——.
2. Thomas, b. abt. 1278; m. ——.

Thomas Del Field, son of Roger, born Sowerby, England, about 1278; married ——. He was of Sowerby, a Juror in 1307. Named in the Wakefield rolls in 1314, and also in 1322, when he was at "Halifax Court." Resided Sowerby, England.

Children:

1. John, b. 1300; m. ——.
2. Adam, b. ——. He was of Sowerby. Named in the rolls in 1349, and then called "son of Thomas de Feld." Mentioned again in 1393.

John Del Field, son of Thomas, born Sowerby, England, 1300; married ——. He was named in the Wakefield Manor rolls in 1326, 1334 and in 1336, when he had land at Sowerby. Called "son of Thomas del Feld." Resided Sowerby, England.

Children:

1. Thomas, Jr., b. 1330; m. Annabelle ——:

Thomas Del Feld, son of John, born Sowerby, England, 1330; married Annabelle ——. He was named in the rolls in 1364 and was elected this year to supervise the "agistment and pannage." Constable of Sowerby in 1365, and greave there in 1370. He hired Sowerby mill in 1380, with Thomas de Helilee, and was a special juror in 1384. In 1370, he took a piece of land of Thomas Wade, in "Dedewyferode," and I think later went to Bradford. The name of Thomas del Feld occurs frequently in the Wakefield rolls between 1348 and 1391, without the addition of senior or junior, so that it is impossible to say which one is referred to in these entries. Both senior and junior are mentioned in 1384, after which date there is but one entry, in 1391, when the name is simply Thomas del Feld. Probably both senior and junior died about this time. Others of the family mentioned in the lifetime of the two Thomases who cannot be placed with certainty, are Elena del Feld, in 1329 and in 1333, and Margaret, who paid heriot in 1357 on a cottage and land in Sowerby, "after the death of John Tomson, her uncle." She is called daughter of Thomas del Feld, but of which I am unable to state. He died about 1391. Resided Sowerby and Bradford, Eng.

Children:

1. THOMAS, b. 1360; m. Isabel ——.

THOMAS DEL FELDE, son of Thomas, born 1360; married Isabel ——. On the 12th of March, 1429, "Thomas del Felde de Bolton" made his will, leaving to his wife, Isabel, all his lands and tenants "in villa and tertory de Bynglay" for life, remainder to his heirs. After the death of "Anabelle my mother" his son Robert is to have his lands "in villa and tertory of Bradford," and if Robert die without issue, remainder to William, his brother. He died 1429. Resided Brandford, Eng.

Children:

1. ROBERT, b. ——.
2. WILLIAM, b. ——; m. Katherine ——.

WILLIAM FELD, son of Thomas and Isabel Felde, b. possibly Bradford, England; married Katherine ——. Letters of administration granted his widow April 21, 1480. She was administratrix of the estate. He died April, 1480. Resided Parish of Bradford, England.

Children:

1. WILLIAM, b. ——; m. ——.
2. JOHN, b. ——; m. ——.

WILLIAM FELD, son of William and Katherine Feld, born Bradford, England; married ——. Resided East Ardsley, England.

Children:

1. RICHARD, b. ——; m. Elizabeth ——.
2. THOMAS, b. ——; Thomas Felde, supervisor of his brother Richard's will in 1542. In 1545 he is assessed for lands in East Ardsley. His brother Richard refers to him in his will, "Mr. Thomas Felde, my brother."
3. JOHN, b. abt. 1519; m. ——.

RICHARD FELDE, son of William, born probably East Ardsley, England; married Elizabeth ——. Richard made his will Aug. 19, 1542, and it was proved Dec. 8, 1542. He describes himself as "husbandman of the parish of Ardeslowe," and desires his wife, Elizabeth, and John Felde, my son, have the take of the farmhold, and makes them executors. He adds "also I will that my children have their portion and that Mr. Thomas Felde, my brother and Christopher Nowell be my supervisors." He died December, 1542. Resided East Ardsley, England.

Children:

1. JOHN, b. abt. 1525; m. Jane Amyas.
   Other children.

JOHN FIELD, son of Richard and Elizabeth Felde, born about 1525, East Ardsley, England; married 1560, Jane Amyas, daughter of John, died Aug. 30, 1609. He died May 1587, Resided Ardislawe, England. John Felde has been styled "the proto-Copernican of England," inasmuch as he was the first to make known in that country by his writings the discoveries of this remarkable man, who delayed for a long time the publication of his famous work "De Orbium Coelestium Revolutionibus," which was completed in 1530, but not printed till 1543, when its author was on his death-bed. Works based on the new system, which revolutionized the science of astronomy, had appeared in Germany a few years earlier, but the "Ephemeris" of John Field for 1557, which was published in that year, was the first opportunity afforded the people of England of becoming acquainted with the true motions of the heavenly bodies. In the following year, he issued a similar work, calculated for 1558, 1559, 1560. Probably these were not his only publications, but no others have come down to us, and only two copies of these are known to exist, the British Museum and Bodleian Library, at Oxford, each possessing both works.

By a patent, dated Sept. 4, 1558, the heralds formally recognized his right to the family arms; Sable, a chevron between three garbs argent, and at the same time they granted to him the following crest: A dexter arm issuing out of clouds fesseways proper, habited gules, holding in the hand, also proper, a sphere or. This appropriate crest may be considered a recognition of his services to the cause of astronomy.

We assume that it was about 1560 that he married Jane, daughter of John Amyas, of Kent, as she is described in the Herald's visitation of Yorkshire in 1584/85. The Herald's visitation of Yorkshire, 1585, records the names of himself, wife and children. His will, dated Dec. 28, 1586, was probated May 3, 1587. Jane, daughter of John Amyas, of Kent, executrix of her husband's will. Her own is dated July 17, 1609. Buried at East Ardsley, Aug. 4, 1609.

Children:

1. RICHARD, b. 1563. Richard Field, aged 22, in 1585, disinherited by his father. He had a daughter, Mary, in 1609; not then 21; mentioned in the will of her grandmother, Jane.
2. JOHN, b. 1568; m. ——.
3. MATTHEW, b. 1563; m. Margaret ——.
4. CHRISTOPHER, b. 1565. Christopher Field and John Field, his brother, not named in their mother's will; probably went away from home.
5. THOMAS, b. 1572; named in his mother's will; called third son.
6. WILLIAM, b. 1570; m. Mrs. Jane (Sotwell) Burdette.
7. JAMES, b. 1574; named in both his father's and mother's wills.
8. MARTIN, b. 1577; named in both his father's and mother's wills.
9. ANNE, b. 1580; prob. d. young, but named in her mother's will.

JOHN FIELD, son of John and Jane (Amyas) Field, born Ardsley, England, about 1568; married ——. He was born in Ardsley, but evidently moved away before reaching his majority, for he was not mentioned in his father's will. Osgood Field is of the opinion that he died young, as he was not mentioned in the wills of his father or mother. Resided Ardsley, England.

Children:

1. JOHN, b. abt. 1590; m. ——.
2. ZACHARIAH, b. abt. 1596; m. Mary ——.
3. Other children.

Among their Descendants are not only Judges, Senators, Congressmen, Clergymen, Lawyers, Physicians, but men of business and one, Marshall Field of Chicago, the largest leading dry goods merchant in the world. (See "Field Genealogy," Vol. I, pp. 70, 73, 76, 97–98.)

ZACHARIAH FIELD, son of John and grandson of John Field, the Astronomer, born at East Ardsley, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, about 1596. He probably came to England through Wales and sailed from Bristol and arrived in Boston and settled in Dorchester, Mass. He settled in Hartford on Sentinel Hill. He was one of the 42 men furnished by Hartford, to take part in the Pequot War. The early Historians of Connecticut, speak of these emigrants as among the earliest planters in the State, and were all well to do persons. In 1658, after the death of Rev. Thomas Hooker, the first Minister in the Church of Hartford, a serious controversy arose in that and the neighboring Churches. He was one of the 25 persons who engaged to settle what is now Hatfield. The Hartford, Conn., land records show large conveyances granted to Zachariah Field (1639-1662). Original Proprietor 1639; constable, 1652.

In "Compendium of American Genealogy," Vol. III, p. 661—Zachariah Field (1606-1665) from England 1629, later at Dorchester, Mass., thence to Northampton, 1659, to Hatfield, 1666; settled finally at Hartford, Conn., about 1641. He married Mary, daughter of Christopher Stanley, of Boston. Zachariah Field served in the Pequot War, 1637, under Capt. John Mason. FLINT ANCESTRY

"Descendants of Thomas Flint of Salem" by John Flint and John H. Stone, 1860

We find there were four individuals by the name of Flint, who had migrated to this country and settled in Massachusetts before 1650, namely: Thomas and William, of Salem; Henry, of Braintree; and Thomas, of Concord.

Flynt, Flint Ancestry, Rev. Henry[1], b. Matlock, Derbysh., Eng., Bost., 1635; Braint., ord. Mar. 17, 1640; m. Margery Hoar[2], Rev. Josiah[2], b. Aug. 24, 1645, H. C., 1664, Dorchester; m. Esther Willett[2], b. July 10, 1648; Dorothy[3] Flynt m. Edmund Quincy[4]. Mr. Quincy was b. Oct. 21, 1681, d. London, Feb. 23, 1738. ("Cleveland Family," E. J. and H. G. Cleveland, Vol. I, p. 493.)

Thomas and William, of Salem, were brothers and arrived here probably before the year 1640. William is mentioned in the Salem records in 1642, at which time there is some evidence to show that he had a mother living in this country. Hanson, in his History of Danvers, says that William landed here about 1640. Flint Street, in Salem, is said to be over land he once owned, and near to where his dwelling-house stood. By a plan now extant it is shown that he owned the land from the corner of Flint and Essex streets, running through to Broad Street, and from thence easterly, nearly or quite, to Pickering Street, and from thence to Essex Street. He also owned land in the Southfields. The first deed to him on record is dated July 23, 1652. He died February 2, 1673, aged 70 years. His widow Alice Flint, died Oct. 5, 1700. The inventory of his estate amounted to £911 15s.

He had six children, namely:

EDWARD, THOMAS, ELIZABETH, MARGARET, ALICE, and HANNAH. They were all married, and all lived in Salem, excepting Elizabeth, who married —— Woodis, and resided in England. His daughter Alice was arraigned before the Essex County Court, in 1652, for wearing a silk hood; but, proving she was worth £200, was discharged. She subsequently married John Pickering, and lived in a house in Broad Street, which is now standing, and owned by one of her descendants.

1. THOMAS FLINT, the emigrant ancestor, came to America, as tradition reports, from Wales, in Great Britain. The first mention made of him in the town records of Salem is in 1650; but there is reason to believe that he came to this country much earlier; and there is also some evidence to show that he had a mother here as early as 1642. He was among the first settlers of Salem Village, now South Danvers. The spot in the wilderness which he selected for his home is situated on the Salem and North Reading road, about six miles from the present Court House in Salem, and five miles from the town of North Reading, and near Phelps' mill and brook. He acquired his land by purchase. The first deed to him on record, "containing one hundred and fifty acres of meadow and pasture land, and lying within the bounds of Salem," he bought Sept. 18, 1654, of John Pickering. The price paid for this land is not mentioned; but quite a good opinion can be formed of its value, from the fact that John Pickering, three years before, gave Mr. John Higginson thirteen pounds for the same land.

The second lot recorded, containing fifty acres, he purchased 1st January 1662, of Robert Goodall, for which he paid twenty pounds sterling. It is described as situated in Salem, and as being "near upon a square," and bounded southerly by land of Henry Phelps, westerly by Phelps' Brook, and northerly and easterly by land of said Goodall.

The farm of the old patriarch has always remained in the possession of his descendants. It is now occupied by the heirs of Elijah Flint (238), and may truly be called the old homestead, it having been in the family more than two hundred years. He died April 15, 1663. His wife's name was Ann.

They had six children:

1. THOMAS.
2. ELIZABETH, b. April 30, 1650.
3. GEORGE, b. Jan. 6, 1652.
4. JOHN, b. Oct. 3, 1655.
5. ANNA, b. Dec. 25, 1657, d. April, 1663.
6. JOSEPH, b. 1662.

Sergeant George Flint, 2nd son of Thomas (1), born Jan. 6, 1652. He went to Reading before the year 1682, and settled on land he acquired by inheritance from his father and was the first of the name in that town. He was a farmer and resided in the North Precinct, in that part which now constitutes the village of North Reading. His house stood on a gentle eminence, commanding a fine prospect of the river and the adjacent meadows, which to the early settlers was the chief attraction of the town. Tradition says that his was the first framed house built in the precinct, and that it was used as a garrison house while there were hostile Indians in the colony and that upon the doors of which were seen marks, said to have been made by the bullets of the Indians. Another circumstance connected with this family, and which was frequently related by the older portion of it, is, that on a pleasant Sabbath all the family were absent at church but two of the daughters of Sergeant Flint, who were left at home in charge of the house. During the absence, one of the daughters took a pistol, and, aiming it at the other, said: "Suppose you were an Indian, how easily I could shoot you!" At that moment the pistol went off, and lodged its contents in the shoulder of her sister, which crippled her for life. Her father in his will mentions his "unfortunate daughter Mary," and makes suitable provision for her proper maintenance. Her grandfather, Nathaniel Putnam, gives her a double portion, "because she hath a lame arm." The old garrison house was taken down several years since, and one of modern construction erected in its place. He was one of the Selectmen of the town for several successive years; was a member of the Salem Village church, and was quite active in religious matters, as appears by the interest he took in the organization of the North Parish and church. He presided as Moderator of the first meeting of the parish and ever after, as long as he lived, took a leading part in the management of its affairs. He gave the parish one acre of land, on which the first meeting-house was built.

The first minister of the precinct church, Rev. Daniel Putnam, was his nephew.

He died June 23, 1720, aged 68. Married Elizabeth, daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Hutchinson) Putnam, who was born Aug. 11, 1662, and died March 6, 1697. Married (second) March 2, 1699, Mrs. Susannah Gardner, by whom he had no issue. She died March, 1720.

Had ten children, by first wife:

1. Elizabeth, b. Aug. 19, 1685; m. Ebenezer Damon.
2. George, b. April 1, 1686.
3. Ann, b. April 18, 1687; m. Jonathan Parker, Dec. 21, 1706.
4. Ebenezer, b. Dec. 16, 1689.
5. Nathaniel, b. Oct. 21, 1690, d. in infancy.

9. Hannah, b. Feb. 12, 1695; m. John Hunt, July 10, 1716.
10. John, b. March 4, 1696, d. in infancy.

Ebenezer Flint, 2nd son of George, born Dec. 16, 1689; and died Sept. 18, 1778.

Farmer, and lived in North Reading, on a farm that was given to him by his father, and which was taken from the northern end of his own land, near the Andover line. It has always been in the possession of his descendants, and remains to this day, the same in quantity as when it was occupied by the first settler. An interesting fact connected with it is, that it is a part of the land Sergeant George inherited from his father Thomas Flint (1) the old patriarch, and which was called by him, in his will, "the land I bought beyond Ipswich River."

Married, May 18, 1714, Tabitha Burnap, who died July 30, 1734.

7. Jacob, b. 1729.
8. Hepzibeth, b. June 18, 1732.
9. Ann, b. July 30, 1734, d. same day.

Capt. John Flint, 2nd son of Ebenezer, born 1720, and died Feb. 15, 1802. Farmer, and lived in North Reading, on the homestead of his grandfather, Serg't. George Flint. It is now owned by Mr. J. Gowen, having passed out of the name of the family several years since.

Rev. Dr. James Flint, in his Centennial Address at Reading, in speaking of him, says that "he was a man of stern aspect, and of temper inflexible to a fault;" and relates this circumstance as illustrative of his character. In speaking of public worship in his boyhood, he says: "The hymn was read by the deacon, a line at a time, and so sung by the choir. This usage ceased when a new collection of hymns was introduced, together with a bass-viol, to aid the choir of singers. To this innovation Capt. John Flint was irreconcilably opposed. I well remember to have seen this venerable white-haired man, with his long cane, walk doggedly the whole length of the broad aisle of the house while the hymn was reading, and taking his stand during the singing at sufficient distance to be out of hearing of the profane viol. Yet I remember this man taking me, out of pure kindness, when a child, a bee hunting."

Married, June 6, 1744, Joanna Farnham, who died Feb. 22, 1753. Married (second) Tamar Hunt, who died Jan. 29, 1802.

FORD ANCESTRY

In the early part of the 17th Century there were, in New England, several families of Fords, that, as far as is known, were not related; however, it is probably that they sprang from a common ancestor living in England, where the Fords, who came to America about that time, were originally located.

There was the Widow Ford, 1621.
Thomas of Dorchester, who came on the ship "Mary and John," 1630.
Timothy of New Haven, 1637.

Thomas of Milford, 1646.
Andrew of Weymouth, 1654.
Charles of Charlestown, 1664.
Mathew of Bradford, 1681.

The Widow Ford came over from England in the year 1621, in the ship "Fortune" which was the next vessel to arrive after the "Mayflower." The "Fortune" reached Cape Cod, Nov. 9, and arrived at Plymouth, Nov. 11, 1621. She brought 35 persons for the Colony, among them being a Widow Ford with three children. In a letter sent back by the "Fortune" which returned to England about a month after its arrival, the statement is made that "Goodwife Ford was delivered of a daughter, Martha, the night she landed, and both are doing well." Widow Ford's children were William, John and Martha. William was born in England, in 1604. His wife's name was Anna. He died Sept. 23, 1676, and was buried in the old Winslow Cemetery.

FRARY OR FRAIRY ANCESTRY

John Frairy[1]. = Prudence ——.
Sampson Frairy[2]. = Mary Daniels.
Nathaniel Frary[3]. = Mehitable Dickinson.

1. JOHN FRAIRY or FRARY, came from England with wife Prudence and one or more children and settled in Dedham, Mass., of which and the church there he was one of the founders, and was made freeman, 1639. In 1650, he was among those who founded the adjoining town of Medfield, and was on the committee to make the first division of house-lots among the original proprietors. The block of land included by North, Dale and Frairy streets was owned by Hon. Timothy Dwight and Mr. Frairy; Dwight had that portion situated on North Street, and Frairy the remainder. He was a selectman in 1651, 1653, 1654 and 1661. According to the valuation of property in Medfield in 1660, he was one of the wealthiest men of the town. He died at Medfield in July, 1675, a few months before its burning by the Indians. He describes himself in his will as of "great age," and mentions his wife Prudence and sons Theophilus, Eleazer and Sampson. His house and house-lot were bequeathed to Theophilus and given by him to the town and church in 1695 The lot was afterward divided between the town and church, and a plan of it is inserted in the town records.

Prudence Frairy died in Boston, at the house of her son Theophilus, 1691, "Aged above ninety."

Children of John and Prudence Frairy—1. Theophilus[2]. 2. John[2]. 3. Isaac[2]. 4. Sampson Frairy[2], born at Dedham about 1639; killed by the Indians, 29 Feb. 1704; married 14 June, 1660, Mary Daniel. 5. Hon. Eleazer[2]. 6. Samuel[2].

2. SAMPSON FRAIRY[2], fourth child of John (No. 1) and Prudence Frairy, was born at Dedham about 1639, and resided either in Dedham or Medfield until 1668, when he removed to Hatfield, and shortly afterward settled in the now historic town of Deerfield, being one of its two earliest inhabitants. When, in May, 1671, the Dedham committee laid out the town street, they found "Sampson Frairy's cellar on the north." In 1672, he, with Samuel Hinsdale, petitioned the General Court for a committee to supervise the affairs of the new settlement. The petition was granted the following year, and Deerfield's prosperity seemed assured; but the horrors of Indian warfare two years later nullified the energy and struggles of the early settlers. Sampson Frairy escaped the massacres of King Philip's War, saw his home and the once hopeful plantation laid in ashes, and was one of the brave spirits who, through the following calamitous winters, still clung to the hope of re-settlement. Between September, 1675 and 1683-4, he doubtless lived with his brother in Hatfield, where, at least, he took the oath of allegiance in 1679. He, however, returned with the permanent settlers to Deerfield, where, on the land alloted him in 1671, he rebuilt his homestead before 1698, which is still standing and in the possession of one of his descendants; and it is without doubt the oldest house in the Deerfield valley, and one of the oldest in New England.

Mr. Frairy was a selectman in 1691. He was slain on the memorable night of 29 February, 1704, when the French and Indians, led by Hertel de Rouville sacked the town, killed forty-seven of the inhabitants, and carried away captive, one hundred and twelve.

He married at Medfield, 14 June, 1660, Mary Daniel, born at Cambridge, Mass., 2 Sept., 1642, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Daniel (p. 115, Robert Daniel was an early inhabitant of Cambridge, where he owned lands and was freeman 14 March, 1639. He died 6 July, 1655. His will mentions children Elizabeth, Samuel, Joseph, Sarah and Mary)—She, Mary Daniel, was captured 29 Feb., 1704, and killed by Indians on the march to Canada.

(1923, Colonial Daughters of 17th Century, p. 208), Robert Daniel, father of Mary, born in England, died 6 July, 1655, Constable; Watertown, Mass., 1651.

Children of Sampson and Mary (Daniel) Frary—8. Mary Frary[3]. 9. Mehitable Frary[3]. 10. Susannah Frary[3]. 11. John Frary[3]. 12. Nathaniel Frary[3] (my ancestor) born at Hadley 29 Nov. 1675; died 30 April 1737; married 1715/16, Mehitable Dickinson.

3. NATHANIEL FRARY[3], youngest child of Sampson (No. 2) and Mary (Daniel) Frary, was born at Hadley, 29 November, 1675. He removed with his father to Deerfield in 1683, and as the only surviving son and heir succeeded to the homestead and lands there in 1704. He died 30 April, 1737; married 26 Jan., 1715/16, Mehitable Dickinson, born at Wethersfield, Conn., 1696, daughter of Obadiah and Mehitable (Hinsdale) Dickinson. (See Dickinson Family, No. 8). She survived her hubsand many years and was living at Northampton in 1752, when she sold the Frary house to Joseph Barnard.

FULLER ANCESTRY

"Early Fuller Families in New England"

Fuller, Benjamin Rehoboth, son of Robert of Salem. Benjamin, Salem, s. of Thomas, m. 15 Dec. 1685 . . . Bacon had Samuel, Benjamin, Sarah, Ruth, Abigail and Hannah. He liv. in the vill. wh. became Danvers; was freem., 1690. Daniel, New Haven, 1640. Edward, Plymouth, br. of the famous Samuel, came with him in the Mayflower, 1620, bring. w. Ann and s. Samuel, and leav. Matthew on the other side, wh. was elder; d. early next yr., as did his w. but his son Samuel outliv. the hardships. Edward, Boston, 1630, whose s. John, says Lewis, sett. at Lynn. But I believe we kn. no more than that the name has much prevail. there. Edward was employ. in 1643 to bring, with others, the cattle of the Colonists, taken near Providence, under the absurd pretence of being spoil of war. No doubt he was of the true, or popular faith, or he would not thus have been trusted; and this may, perhaps, render it less prob. that he was the same Edward subject. in 1639, to cens. by the Gen. Ct. for distemper. with wine. Edward, Lynn, freem., 1691, was, perhaps, s. of Robert of the same. Giles, Hampton, 1640, d. 2 Apr. 1673. Jacob, Salem VIII, now Danvers, freem., 1690. James, Ipswich, by w. Mary, had James, b. 2 Dec. 1673; Mary, 30 May 1675; John, 20 Feb. 1677; Eliz. 25 Feb. 1679; Daniel, 24 Feb. 1681; Nathaniel, 18 Feb. 1681; Nathaniel, 18 Feb. 1683; and Dorothy, 18 Dec. 1684. His wid. prob. liv. to 16 Oct. 1732, aged 85. Jeremiah, Newton, s. of the first John of the same, was Lieut. had bur. four ws.: Mary, wh. d. 17 Aug. 1689; Eliz., wh. d. 1700, in which yr. he took Thankful, wh. d. 1729; and Rachel, d. 1742; by first and last had no ch. but by Eliz. had Eliz., b. 14 Apr. 1694; d. soon; and Jeremiah, 3 July 1697; d. young; and by 3d. w. had Thomas, 12 Sept. 1701; Joshua, 12 Apr. 1703; Thankful, 23 Dec. 1704; Jeremiah, again 1 Nov. 1707; d. young; Eliz. again, 24 Aug. 1709; d. at 2 yrs.; and Josiah, 2 Dec. 1710; and d. 23 Dec. 1743. JOHN, Ipswich, 1643, perhaps one of the first sett. at Salisbury, 1639 or 40. JOHN, Lynn, 1644, may be the same as preced., was rep. 1655 and 64; had s. John, William, and James, and d. 29 June 1666. JOHN, Cambridge, in that part now Newton, may seem the youth wh. came with John Winthrop, jr., in his sec. voyage in the Abigail, 1635, call. 15 yrs. old. but that Jackson, wh. perhaps quotes the gr. st. says he d. 7 Feb. 1699, in 87th yr. and he was freem. 1690, tho. his first four s. were together made frem. ten yrs. earlier. His wid. Eliz. d. 13 Apr. 1700. He had John, b. 1645; Eliz.; Jonathan, 1648; Joseph, 10 Feb. 1652; Joshua, 2 Apr. 1654; Jeremiah, 4 Feb. 1658; of wh. two were in Capt. Beers' comp. in Philip's war, 1675, and still, after his d. serving in Apr. 1676; (and JOHN wh. is call. of Dedham, and prob. not one of these, was a corporal of Moseley's comp. and wound. in the gr. Narraganset fight, 19 Dec. 1675); Bethia, 23 Nov. 1661; and Isaac, 2 Feb. 1665, wh. d. 5 Oct. 1691. All the other five s. liv. from 74 to 98 yrs. Bethia m. 27 Feb. 1685, Nathaniel Bond; and Eliz. m. 1663, Job Hyde; and d. 28 Nov. 1685.

Prob. he had been driv. in Philip's war from enjoym. of his est. and would encourage his s. to ascertain if it might be profit. in peace. By the rec. at R. his w. Sarah was bur. 14 Oct. 1676; and w. Margaret, wh. may not have been mo. of any ch. d. 30 Jan. 1700; and he d. 10 May 1706. Abigail, perhaps his d. m. at R. 16 Oct. 1679, Thomas Cushman. ROBERT, Lynn, freem. 1680, may be the same as preced., but not prob. SAMUEL, Plymouth, 1620, one of the most valu. pilgrims of the Mayflower, the first physician that came to sett. in our country. He had been a deac. at least 8 yrs. at Leyden, tho. his w. Bridget, wh. came in the Ann, 1623, with a ch. that I think liv. not long, may have been m. but short time bef. he left Holland. DESCENDANTS OF JOHN FULLER

WILLIAM FULLER, age 25, and John Fuller, age 15, embarked in the "Abigail" in May 1635, or New England. This age of John does not correspond with the age of the first John Fuller, of Newton, who d. Feb. 7, 1698/9, age 87. Perhaps there is an error in one of these dates. Elizabeth, widow of John Fuller, of Newton, d. April 13, 1700.

The family and descendants of John Fuller, of Newton, are very intimately associated with Watertown families. That large tract of land called the Fuller Farm, and upon which most of the families of this name have resided, was situated in the bend of Charles River, opposite to Waltham Plain. It included nearly all the land lately taken from Newton, and annexed to Waltham. It was however, more extensive, extending farther down, and farther back from the river. For a view of the topography of this farm, and a more copious account of this family, see Jackson's excellent History and Map of Newton, Mass.

Robert Fulwood, of Tamworth, was son of Richard and grandson of Robert Fulwood, of Cley Hall, Co. Warwick (temp. Hen. VII) descended from John Fullwode, of the same place. (temp. Tich. II) Her. Vis. Zu. Coll. MS. Dugdale. See Warwickshire Arms and Lineages compiled from The Heralds Visitations and Ancient MSS., by the Rev. Fred W. Kittermaster, M.A., p. 41.

To the "Register," Vol. LXXX, pp. 446-447 (October, 1926), the contributor of this article, Mr. Lemuel Aiken Welles, M.A., LL.B., of New York City, communicated a note, which, in addition to certain Welles items from English records, contained a brief abstract of the will of John Tomes of Marston Sicca, Co. Gloucester, England, father of Alice Tomes, the first wife of Gov. Thomas Welles of Connecticut, and also an account of the timely aid given to the royal fugitive, Charles II, after the Battle of Worcester, in 1651, by John Tomes, half brother of Alice (Tomes) Welles. In that note the writer expressed the hope of being able to communicate to the Register an article on the ancestry of Alice Tomes; and, when he was in London last summer, he was informed by Maj. Alfred Trego Butler, Portcullis Pursuivant at the College of Arms, that he had prepared, from what he called "original evidences," tabular pedigrees showing several generations of the Tomes and Gunne families, for a descendant who died about the time when the pedigrees were completed. According to Major Butler, Ellen (Gunne) (Phelps) Tomes, the mother of Alice (Tomes) Welles, was descended, through her mother, Anne Fulwood, from many of the best-known families in Warwickshire. Major Butler stated that these pedigrees had not been registered at the College of Arms, but were in such shape that they might be registered there if anyone desired to have it done. The writer, therefore, arranged to procure from Major Butler these pedigrees, and they are given in this article in the genealogical form customary in the Register, having been rearranged from the chart form in which they were compiled.

The sources (other than wills and parish registers) from which the pedigrees were compiled are, according to Major Butler, "The Register of the Guild of Knowle in the Co. of Warwick," by W. B. Bickley, 1894; "Men and Armour for Gloucestershire in 1608," by John Smith, 1902; Lay Subsidy Roll, 116/490, 20 James I (1622/32), preserved in the Public Record Office, London and the Tomes pedigree published in Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica, New Series, Vol. 3, pp. 273/279, which is based in part on manorial documents in the possession of the Tomes family and has been used by Major Butler in so far as he has been able to verify it. In the pedigrees that follow words enclosed in brackets are additions made by the Contributor or by the editors of the Register.

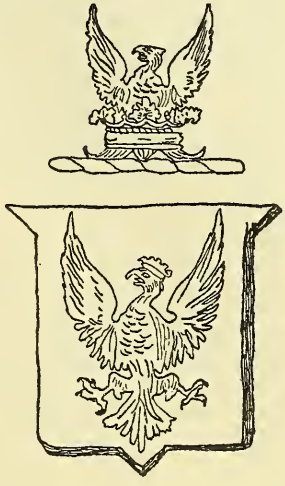
GRAVES ANCESTRY



The distinctive arms of the Graves Family are "Gu. and eagle displayed or ducally crowned arg."

The crest—"A demi-eagle displayed and erased or enfiled round the body and below the wings by a ducal coronet arg."

By the alliance of members of the family with other families, and the marshalling of different arms in the same composition, variations are frequently found; they almost invariably retain, however, as quarterings, the distinctive arms of the family, the eagle displayed or.

Various mottoes have been adopted, some of which have been used by the members of the family exclusively, and others by this and other families.

The following are the mottoes used, as far as can be ascertained, and translations. There are fourteen mottoes, one of which is: "Suprema Quaero." I seek the highest.

Sketch of the Graves Family in England

The family of Graves is one of the most ancient in England. It went in with the Norman army, and its members have been De Grevis, De Greves, Greve, Grave, Greaves, Greeves, and Graves. In the portion of Doomsday Book for Lincolnshire it is recorded:

The family lived in early days in that part of England now known as counties Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby and York, occupying the northern part of the three first named and the southern part of York. The first recorded family seat was known as Greves or Greaves, in the parish of Beeley, near Chatsworth, in the northern part of Derbyshire, and a few miles from the southerly boundary of York, where the family resided as early as the reign of Henry III (1216–1272). John Greaves, a descendant, in the reign of Elizabeth (1558–1602), became a purchaser of "Beeley," a quaint old house with an enclosed court, on the hill above Beeley, and now known as "Hilltop," and it was occupied as a family seat until about 1664, when it was sold to John, Earl of Rutland.

In the little church at Beeley, within the altar rails, is a fine flat stone on which are cut the coat of arms of the family, the motto "Suprema Quaero," and the following inscription:

"This marble stone doth presse but not oppresse the body of John Greaves of Greaves, Esq. The 13th day of October in the year of our Lord (page XI) 1694. Ann his wife, b. of Geo. Bird, of Stenley Hall, Gent, ob. May 25, 1700."

John Graves[1], born in England, came to the American Colonies with his wife in 1635 and settled in Concord, Mass. He soon after became a member of the church of which Rev. Peter Buckley was teacher. He was one of the signers of the petition to the General Court in 1643 in favor of Ambrose Martinmand; in 1644, his name was attached to a document pledging to signers nearly every head of a family in Concord, to the support of the Government. One of these signatures, probably the first, is now in the New England Historical Society in Boston. He had two sons, Benjamin and John.

Benjamin, born in Concord, Mass.; married Mary Hoar, daughter of John Hoar[2] was a member of Captain Wheeler, Vs. Co. John[1], of Concord, against the Indians, in Vol. 38, "New England Genealogical and Historical Register." He was given credit September 28, 1675, and again February 29, 1676, for service in King Philip Vs War. He and John Graves, of Sudbury, Mass., with others purchased on May 20, 1681, from Christopher Hall, "all the mines and minerals of one kind and another, found or that may be found on his land in Groten, Mass., at a place called Cold Spring, near William Longley Vs. house with Liberty to dig, delve or use the land and to errect buildings, etc. He moved to Saybrook, Conn., in 1703 when he purchased January 25, 1703, of Nicholas Stoughton by consent of William Shipman at a place called Pottaconk, whatever the division of whichever part is agreed upon is made, Stoughton to have first choice." Also the one-half of eleven acres of planting land, 10 pounds, 10 shillings.

"Now a resident of Killingworth, a messanger or tenament at Pottaconk with all the buildings, etc., bounded westerly by land of Joseph Graves, it being understood that Benj. is to retain the life use of the same." March 18, 1715, Benjamin Graves "for love and affection, to son, Joseph" deeded "one half the farm I now dwell upon the Westerly half."

Benjamin Graves[2] (John[1]), married October 21, 1668, Mary Hoar, daughter of John[1].

Their children were:

Mary Graves, b. Jan. 18, 1669; m. April 1, 1691, Benjamin Rice, b. Dec. 22, 1668, son of Edward and Anna Rice, of Sudbury.
Ruth Graves, b. Nov. 25, 1671; m. Jan. 15, 1699, John Webb.
Benjamin[3], b. Mar. 2, 1676–7; d. 1752; m. (1) Mary Sterling; (2) Mary Haynes.
Joseph, b. Sept. 2, 1679.
Johanna, b. Feb. 2, 1681.
John, b. 1683.

Benjamin[2] moved to Saybrook, Conn., where he died between 1716 and 1724.

Benjamin[3] (Benjamin[2], John[1]), born March 3, 1676–7, in Concord, Mass. He was descended as from New London, Conn., in a deed given to him of lands, purchased at Colchester, Conn., in 1709 where he had just moved. He was admitted inhabitant of latter place at town meeting January, 1716, chosen lister at town meeting December, 1727. He lived two and one-half miles from the village of Colchester on the road to Lynn. He held several Colonial offices. He was buried in the churchyard in the village, the tombstone after standing 150 years (when visited by J. C. Graves), was in as good condition as it naturally would be after exposure of but a few years.

The children of Benjamin[3] and first wife, Mary Sterling, were:

Benjamin[4], b. 1699; m. (believed) Mary Jones, dau. of Thomas Jones.
Ruth Graves, bapt. Oct. 25, 1702, New London. Her parents owned the Covenant at Lyme, Conn.
Mary, bapt. Oct. 29, 1704, New London; m. Oct. 29, 1724, Ebenezer Daniels.
Jonathan.
Jedediah, b. 1708; m. 1728, Jerusha Ackley, East Haddam.

Children of Benjamin[3] and second wife, Mary Haynes, were:

Deborah.
Abigail, m. Oct., 1785, Nathan Dodge.

GREENE ANCESTRY

Inquire I pray thee of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers.—Job VIII, Verse 8.

Arms—Argent, on a fess azure between three pellets, each charged with a lion's head erased of the first, a griffin passant between two escallops or.

Crest—A Woodpecker picking a staff couped, ragules, and erect, all proper.

All branches of the family, are entitled to use the three Bucks Trippant, Or, on an azure field, as it was borne by the Founders of the Line. The Crescent, a mark of cadency denoting the line of a second son, is used by all the Warwick and Quidnessett Greenes.

Greene

All that we really know of the first Lord de Greene may be summed up in this brief paragraph. Alexander, a Knight at the King's court, was the great-grandson of one of the Norman nobles who invaded England with William the Conqueror, 1066. King John bestowed the estate of Boughton in Northampton upon him in 1202.

Those who like to get as far back as possible toward Noah have only to count the generations between John of Quidnessett and themselves, and add to the above. This will show the number of generations in all, back to the fountain head.

John Greene, of Quidnessett, had nearly eight centuries of certified noble and royal blood behind him. There are lords, dukes, counts, and kings enough in his line to enthuse any title hunter.

John Greene (Surgeon John), 1597–1658, from England in the James to Boston, 1635. A founder with Roger Williams of Providence Plantation, where he lived till 1643. With twelve other men purchased Narragansett from the Indians; a founder of Warwick, 1643; magistrate, deputy commissioner, etc. Married in England, 1619, Joan Tattersall; married second, Alice Daniels; married third, Philippa, who died in 1687, aged 87 years. See "Compendium of American Genealogy," Vol. II, p. 401.

John Greene, Charlestown, Freeman, 1642, came to New England, 1632, born in London, he was an elder of the church, and died April 22, 1658. (See Alden's "Col. of Epitaphs." 2 Colt. His.

Sec. II, p. 179—His son Jacob in Artillery Co., 1650. See "Ancient and Honorable Artillery," by Whitman).

Children:

1. Robert Greene, of Gillingham, in the year 1543, was an elderly man with grandchildren.
2. Richard Greene, son of Robert.
3. Richard Greene, who m. Mary ——.
4. Surgeon John Greene, of Warwick, fourth son of Richard and Mary Greene, b. in 1585, at Bowridge Hall, Gillingham, England. He m. Nov. 4, 1619, Joan Tattersall (Joane Tatarsole) at St. Thomas' Church, Salisbury, England. With his wife and five children he set sail from Southampton, in Apr., 1635, in the good ship James and arrived at Boston, May 3, of the same year. He d. at Warwick in 1659. Children of John and Joan (Tatersall) Greene:
   John, bapt. Aug. 15, 1630.
   Peter, bapt. Mar. 10, 1622.
   Richard, bapt. Mar. 25, 1623.
   James, bapt. June 21, 1626.
   Thomas, bapt. June 4, 1628.
   Joan, bapt. Oct. 3, 1630.
   Mary, bapt. May 19, 1633.
5. Mary Green, of Narragansett, bapt. May 19, 1633; m. before June 6, 1671. Thomas Hungerford, b. 1648; d. 1714. Their third son named Green. See Hungerford Ancestry.

In 1642, John Greene bought land called Occupassnatuxet, or Minantouomi. This land remained in occupation of his heirs until 1782, when it was sold to John Brown, of Providence, and is now occupied by his heirs ("Spring Green Farm"). September 12, 1643, he and ten others bought Minantouomi, for 144 farthings of wampum, tracts of land called Shawomet (Warwick). (See "Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island," by Austin, 1887.)

Mr. George Fuller Green of Kansas City, a direct descendant of the Royal Family of Green, after much research (and with the assistance of eighty-five pages of manuscript from Mrs. Maltby, historian and Genealogist of Missouri D. A. R.) has drawn up a chart 31" x 54" on cloth embellished with 70 odd arms and sketches of costumes and armour, called "Ye Ancient Green Tree."

GRISWOLD ANCESTRY

Griswold

The Arms of Griswold are described as: Arg. a Fess, Gu. between two greyhounds courant sa; within bordine or as a difference.

These heraldic terms are defined as follows: Argent—silver, in color white Abbreviation Arg. Fess—A figure formed by 2 horizontal lines drawn across the shield. It is 1/3 of the field in width and it is always placed in the center.

Gules —Red—abbreviated Gu. The crest is a Greyhound, passant proper. The motto—"Fortiter et celeriter" (Strongly and quickly).

(Gen. Conn., Vol. I, p. 28), Griswold is an ancient English surname derived from the name of a place, like a large proportion of British patronymics. The ancient seat of the family was at Solihull, Warwickshire, prior to the year 1400. The ancient coat-of-arms is: Argent a fesse gules between two greyhounds currant sable.

John Griswold about the middle of the fourteenth century came from Kenilworth and married a daughter and heiress of Henry Hughford, of Huddersley Hall at Solihull, and the family has been known as the Griswolds of Kenilworth and Solihull. Solihull is on the northwest border of Warwickshire, and Yardly in Worcestershire is on the south and west. It is but eight miles from Kenilworth to the westward and twelve miles northwest of Stratford-on-Avon, and was a place of importance before the Norman Conquest. The two American immigrants, Edward and Mathew, came to Connecticut from Kenilworth. Mathew came over in 1639 and settled at Windsor, Conn.; died at Lyme, Conn., Sept. 21, 1698, and was buried at Saybrook; assisted in the settlement of Lyme and was a large landowner; was deputy to the general assembly in 1664 and afterwards.

THE GRISWOLD FAMILY IN ENGLAND

The history of the Griswold family in this country finds its source, as does that of most of the old families of New England, in Old England, and a brief sketch of the Griswold family in England from its earliest record, to the settlement of this country will afford a background for the generations that have carried on the name in this new land.

"The English Griswolds were an ancient county family established at Solihull, Warwickshire, England, prior to 1400: The name being generally written as Greswold but without doubt the "e" in the first syllable had the Latin sound as "i" short for it was often written Griswold or Gryswold and sometimes with a final "e." The family had a pedigree and were entitled to a coat-of-arms, viz.: Arg. a fesse gu. betw. two greyhounds current Sa.

They were descended from a John Griswold who came from Kenilworth about the middle of the 14th century, married and settled in Solihull, later acquriing Langdon Hall; and by Burke, the family is called Griswold of Kenilworth and Solihull."

The same authority goes on to say, "The family was of local distinction they held county offices, were summoned by the Sheriff with the other gentlemen of the county to be present at the proclamation of Acts of Parliament and sworn to defend them. They sought and obtained wives from the local families, and an alliance with their daughters was considered honorable. They were not of the nobility, but belonged to the middle class landed gentry, that debout, patient, and, above all, valiant race, which has contributed so much to make England for centuries the foremost of nations."

The Family of Griswold descended from Humphrey Griswold of Greet, Lord of the Manor, are mentioned in English history as an honorable family in the sixteenth century. The Griswold family came into possession of the Malvern Estates about 1600 and have continued to be in possession of them thru all the changes of English law for over three hundred years. "It is a stately manor house in the style of Inigo Jones, set in the midst of a large park surrounded by a moat; and over the stone gate-way is carved the family crest."

The English records show the Malvern Estate and Coat-of-Arms in 1659 belonging to Humphrey Griswold of Malvern Hall, who died in 1671. His brother, Rev. Henry Griswold, who succeeded him, died about 1720.

The Connecticut Griswolds are descended from the brothers Edward and Matthew who came to Windsor in 1639, and from Michael, possibly another brother, who came to Wethersfield. There has been no positive proof offered of the relationship of these three, but the Rev. F. W. Chapman, whose extensive research in Griswold Genealogy was never published, is quoted as having written, "I have documentary evidence that he was a brother of Edward and Matthew; also of Francis, who settled in Cambridge, Mass., and died without male heirs."

In this same connection Mr. B. Howell Griswold of Baltimore supplied the following note from papers of the late Rev. F. W. Chapman, whose "genealogical labors will long preserve his name in memory." He said: "Michael Griswold of Wethersfield was undoubtedly a brother of Edward Griswold of Windsor and of Matthew of Lyme. He afterward removed to Killingworth and was one of the founders of that town. Isaac, a son of Michael, also settled at Killingworth and in a conveyance of land speaks of his Uncle Edward af the same place."

Said Frank Farnsworth Starr on this subject, ". . . Of the early Griswold family, Edward of Windsor, 1639-40, Matthew of Windsor and Saybrook, 1639-40, Michael of Wethersfield, 1640, Francis Grissell, Greshold or Gresshould of Cambridge and Charlestown, 1639, it is claimed that Edward and Matthew were brothers but whether proof is positive I do not know." Savage gives these different spellings of the name—Grissell, Grisill, Grisold, Gresold, Greshould, Griswold.

The Griswold Family is described as "Men tall of stature, strong of limb and stout of heart, men of affairs who brought to the new land a capacity for government and statesmanship." "And the rest of the acts which they did and their might and how they warred and overcame, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of Ancient Windsor?" In his Ancient Wethersfield he speaks of them (Styles History of Ancient Wethersfield) as "A family that has furnished many mariners but more soldiers."

Francis Griswold of England.

George Griswold (Son of Francis Griswold), of Kenilworth, England, was baptized April 28, 1548. Children: Edward, born 1607; Matthew, Michael, Thomas.

(From the Stiles' History of Windsor, Conn.), Edward and Matthew Griswold came from Kenilworth, County Warwick, England, in the year 1639, in company with Rev. Mr. Huit's party, who came to Windsor, Ct., that year. They had lived at Kenilworth and owned property there. They had a brother Thomas, who continued to reside there, and the record of his marriage in 1634, is still to be found in the old Kenilworth records, also the baptisms of several of the children of Edward, and the burial of a daughter; but the old church records of Kenilworth suffered so greatly from the ravages of the war of the Great Rebellion, it has been found impossible to find any other connecting links between that parish and the two emigrant brothers. It has been claimed, though not proved, that they belong to the ancient family of Solihull, near Kenilworth, and such entitled to the use of the family arms. Whatever their local antecedents and connections in England, it is certain that the emigrant brothers Griswold were men of education and property; and after their arrival in the new colony were styled "Mr.," which was then equivalent to "gentleman," as distinguished from yeoman or tradesman.

Edward Griswold settled at Windsor where he held a prominent position in the town's affairs where he was representative to the General Assembly 1658-61, and Deputy to the General Court, 1662. In 1663, he deeded his land to his sons and removed to Killingworth which settlement he is believed to have given the name of his old home in Warwickshire. In 1667, he is enrolled as "Mr. Edw. Grissell." a Deputy, and as "Mr. Edward Griswold," a Commissioner for Kenilworth.

A grant of 200 acres of land was made to him in 1674 and in 1682 it was laid out "at the north end of Lyme bounds."

He was Deputy "for Killingworth" in 1678, his name being spelled this time "Mr. Edward Griswould." This same year he was nominated for election as Assistant, and as Commissioner and represented Killingworth in every Court from 1678 to 1689. He was repeatedly made Commissioner and in 1678 was on the committee for establishing a Latin school at New London. He was the first Deacon of the Killingworth Church.

His first wife, Margaret, who came with him from England died in 1670 and is buried in the little old cemetery known as The Indian River Cemetery, Clinton. A rude shaft of fieldstone marks her grave with just the initials M. G. and the date 1670, roughly cut upon it. It is the oldest stone standing in the cemetery today.

Both brothers, though young when they came to this country (Edward being then 32 and Matthew 19 years old), speedily allied themselves with the best social element of Windsor, took positions of commanding influence, and quickly became prominent in colonial affairs. Besides, if it be a principle of heredity that the characteristics, physical, intellectual, moral and social of a strongly marked ancestor are repeated in his descendants, so that from the offspring may be inferred what was the progenitor then apart from all we know of the first generation of the Griswolds of New England, the qualities developed by succeeding generations of the family have been an accumulating proof that its emigrant ancestors were high-minded, intelligent Christian gentlemen.

Mr. Edward Griswold came to America at the time of the second visit of Mr. George Fenwick, at which date also came a large number of new settlers to the Connecticut settlement. It was at a time when many of the gentry of England, and wealthy persons connected with the Warwick patent, were intending removal hither, but the breaking out of the Scotch rebellion compelled King Charles to call a Parliament, and they stayed at home to carry out their struggle with the King and Archbishop Laud. Mr. Griswold undoubtedly came in the interest of some of these patentees. He was attorney for Mr. St. Nicholas, of Warwickshire, who had a house built in Windsor, and also a tract of land impaled (fenced), as had Sir Richard Saltonstall. The Rev. Ephraim Huit, who came also 1639, was from the same parish, as also the Wyllys family, who settled in Hartford. His first location in Winsdor is not known; but he had a grant of land in Poquonock, to which he removed in 1649, accompanied by a few families, who there found an "outpost" settlement. His residence at Poquonock was on the site of the present dwelling of the heirs of the late Eliphalet S. Ladd, who, on the female side, are Griswold descendants. The spot is a beautiful knoll which overlooks the brook on the west, and the Tunxis River on the south and east. As soon as he had fairly established his home he began to take that active part in public matters which was natural to a man of his character. In 1650, he built the "old Fort" at Springfield for Mr. Pyncheon. In 1656, he was a deputy from Windsor to the General Court, and continued, with the exception of one session to represent the town until the reception of the charter from King Charles. At this time he was the principal promoter of a new settlement authorized by the Court, called Hommonoscett, which lay immediately west of Saybrook, Ct., and to which, about 1663, he removed with his younger children, deeding to his sons, George and Joseph, who remained behind, his Windsor lands, reserving a small life annuity therefrom. The settlement was organized as a town in 1667, and received, probably from him, the name of his old English home, "Kenilworth," afterwards corrupted to Killingworth, and now known as Clinton. He was the first deputy from Killingworth and continued to be its Magistrate and Representative for more than twenty years-1662-1678-'89—and was succeeded by his son John. The Colonial Records show him to have been a very active, influential member of the legislature—prominently one of those men who, in the first half century, did so much to make the small colony of Connecticut so important a factor in American affairs. As a member of Sessions he had the pleasure of meeting his brother Matthew, and his own son Francis; both Governors of Connecticut, and there has since that time rarely been an Assembly, in which some lineal descendant has not been a member. He was frequently a Commissioner and in 1678, was on a committee for establishing a Latin School in New London, and was first deacon of Killingworth church. He died at Killingworth, it is said, in 1691, in eighty-fourth year.

HALL ANCESTRY

William Hall of London

1. William Hall, immigrant ancestor, was on a list of fifty-nine persons admitted inhabitants of an island on the coast of Rhode Island, now called Aqueedunk, Aug. 8, 1638. In 1639, he was an inhabitant of Newport, Rhode Island, and on May 27, 1644, a grant of land was given him by the town, in Portsmouth, Rhode Island. He was on the list of freemen of Portsmouth in 1655, and sold, July 6, 1654, to Richard Sisson, of Portsmouth, one three-hundredth of an island called Caononcut, and one three-hundredth of Dutch Island. He was commissioner to general court from Portsmouth in 1654/56/60/63, and he was deputy from Portsmouth to general assembly in 1665/66/67/68/72/73. In 1673, he was appointed on a committee for the purpose of treating with the Indians about drunkenness, and to seriously counsel them, and agree on some way to prevent excess of Indian drunkenness. Five chiefs are mentioned, among whom is the name of the famous King Philip, of Mount Hope. There may be foundation for the following statement by the late James Usher, genealogist of 9 Murray Street, New York. He says: "We have the transatlantic trace of William Hall, clergyman. He is believed to be the same William Hall who was a writer in London and continued the 'Fab you Chronical' begun by Sir Thomas More. And there is reason to believe a connection existed between William Hall and the Lord Chancellor's family. William Hall, of London, went out of record there in 1638, the same year that Will Hall began record in Portsmouth. Thomas Clement, a connection of the Mores, was an original founder of Portsmouth, R. I., and was a neighbour of William Hall, and the administrator of his estate." There is a tradition that "William Hall was one of five brothers who came over, one of whom settled in Exeter, R. I." He made his will Nov. 20, 1673, and it was proved Feb. 19, 1676. He appointed his wife, Mary, his sole executrix, and bequeathed the whole estate to her until her death. He also says, "considering the weakness of my said wife, I do appoint my two younger sons, viz.: William and Benjamin, to be assistants to their mother in the managing of whatever business she shall have need of during her life." He also disposes of his property among his children, after his wife dies. Children: ZURILL, WILLIAM, BENJAMIN, ELIZABETH, REBECKA, DELIVERANCE.

HAWLEY ANCESTRY

Arms—Hawley, Bart, Kent.

Crest—A dexter arm in armour proper, garnished or, holding in the hand a spear, in bend sinister, point downward, proper.

Services:—No. 220 N. S. D. F. & P.—Joseph Hawley (1603-1690) came from Porwick, Derbyshire, Eng., to the Mass. Bay Colony, landed near Boston in 1629, then to Wethersfield, Conn. and in 1646, settled in Stratford, Conn. The oldest existing land records of Stratford were recorded by him, as were also the vital records and town acts. The charter of the town of Stratford was also drafted by him. His public services were almost continuous from his settlement in Stratford until his decease, May 20, 1690. He was the town Clerk or recorder for sixteen years, town treasurer, on committees to survey land and purchase land from the Indians; deputy to the General Assembly of Connecticut twenty-nine sessions; and commissioner for Stratford for eight years. He was a large land owner in Stratford, and portions of his lands were in the possession of his descendants for more than 200 years. "Mass. Soc. Col. Dames of America"—Joseph Hawley (p. 404) (1), born about 1603-1690, Stratford, Conn. Deputy to General Court, 1661-1664-1667-1671-1673-1674-1675-1677-1678-1680-1685-1687. (N. S. F. P. says came to America with wife and one child. He married, probably in Wethersfield, Catharine (tradition says) daughter of Edward Birdsey, about 1636, and came to Stratford soon after and purchased the right of Richard Mills in the township. (See Sketch, p. 118.)

(Genealogies of the Town of Stratford, Conn., p. 1149)—Birdsey, Dea. John, said to have come from Reading, Berkshire, England, to America in 1636; came to Weathersfield, Conn., where he married Phillipa, daughter of Rev. Henry Smith. Tradition says his brother came with him and remained in Wethersfield, and that the brother's children were all daughters and one of them married Joseph Hawley, the first of that name in Stratford. John Birdsey came to Milford, Conn., where his son was baptized in 1641. On Feb. 7, 1643, that town voted that he might use certain land provided he would "pay the charges or rates for it as other men do for theirs." He probably came to Stratford in 1649, see pages 127 of this book, only what is said there about his being brother-in-law to William Willcoxson is erroneous. The term "brother" was then frequently used of members of the churches. He married (2) Alice, widow of Henry Tomlinson. She died Jan. 25, 1698. He died April 4, 1690, aged 74 years.

Stratford & Bridgeport, Conn.—Orcutt, Vol. 2, (History of Stratford Huntington Burying-place), p. 967—Inscriptions in the Huntington Village Burying-place.—There are in this burying-place three hundred and twenty or more graves without inscriptions; most of them marked by small field stones set at the head and foot of each. It is said to be difficult to make a new grave in this yard without digging into a former grave.

The yard has an elegant iron fence around it and is finely and creditably cared for.

Ancestry traced by Elizabeth Rixford.

JOHN SMITH, born in England, a settler of Milford, Ct., in 1640, he is presumed to have been one of several from Hertfordshire who could not leave Eng., in 1637, when the Rev. Peter Prudden and others from that section of England sailed in the company of the Rev. John Davenport, Gov. Theophilus Eaton, Dept. Gov. Stephen Goodyear and other persons from London and Hertfordshire, who came to this country in the ships "Hector" and "Martin" in 1637; it is probable he came direct from England to New Haven in one of the three ships which sailed in 1639 to New Haven, viz., the "St. Johns," Capt. Russell, the "Fair Weather," which reached New Haven before July 28, 1639, and the third ship (name unknown) which arrived soon after, probably bringing the company which settled in Southold, Long Island. (See Atwater's History of New Haven Colony, pp. 162-3). From the amount of property (£ 513, 3s. 9d.) left by him at his inventory was taken Dec., 1684), it is probable that he belonged to a family of some wealth in England. It has been suggested that he may have been one of the Smiths of Haddon Hall, some of whom came to this country; he married, 1642, Grace Hawley (d. 1690); she is said to have been a sister of *Joseph Hawley of Stratford. (American Ancestry, Vol. 7, p. 78). There is a large box in the Tombs in London, which bears a little brass Plate with inscription saying, "Wife of Capt. John Smith, Governor General of New England and Jamestown." This box has rested in these tombs for over 300 years, witnessing many prisoners and criminals, passing this chamber on their way to be executed. This box is going to be opened soon (1932). Scientists believe that the remains of Pocahontas are in this box.

Among the well known descendants of Joseph Hawley, residing in the United States, I will call attention to the following:

Ephraim, son of Samuel[1] and Patience Hawley, married Phebe Curtiss, Oct. 5, 1711. He settled in the southern part of New Milford—now Bridgewater— he and Joseph Benedict being the two first settlers in that part of the town. Jehiel, born Feb. 14, 1712; residence, New Milford and Vermont. Matthew baptized Feb. 14, 1713; residence, New Milford and Canaan, N. Y. Ephraim, residence, New Milford. Nathan, residence, New Milford. Patience, Abel, residence, Woodbury and Vermont. David, residence, New Milford and Vermont. Josiah, residence, Woodbury and Vermont; married here and had Moses, baptized Oct., 1748, and Silas, baptized Dec., 1750. Gideon. Phebe.

Helen Miller Gould (Mrs. Finley Johnson Shepard), of "Lyndhurst," Irvington-on-the-Hudson, New York, the beautiful estate high above the Hudson, with its mansion and towers, and its extended view of the river and hills, whose descent is—Joseph Hawley, died 1690; married Catharine Birdsey; Ebenezer[2] Hawley, born 1654; married Hester Ward; Elizabeth[3] Hawley, born 1679; married Joseph Wakeman; Katharine[4] Wakeman, born 1703; married John Burr; Elizabeth[5] Burr, born 1732; married Abraham Gould; Abraham[6] Gould, born 1766; married Anna Osborn; John[7] Burr Gould, born 1792; married Mary More; Jay[8] Gould, born 1836; married Helen Day Miller; Helen[9] Miller Gould, married Finley Johnson Shepard. Mrs. Shepard is a member of the Magna Charta Dames and belongs to many other Societies and Clubs. She is endowed with those qualities that make for success, an active mind, trained to high ideals of duty and responsibility, with abundant resources to carry into active operation these ideals. Material wealth does not necessarily denote the highest attainment, but when it is employed in the interests of moral ends its possessor shows a high standard of intelligent appreciation of its value to humanity. Somewhere in New York a silver tablet is placed, with the inscription "God Bless Helen Gould Shepard."

Dorothy Canfield (Mrs. John Fisher) of Arlington, Vt., author and internationally known as a woman of letters. She is a granddaughter of Rev. Eli Hawley Canfield, D.D. Her father was Prof. James Canfield of Oberlin, Ohio. During the World War, she and her family went to France in relief work; her late book, "The Deepening Stream," deals somewhat with that experience.

Dorothy Canfield Fisher is a member of the Board of Trustees of Bennington College for Women, chartered in 1925, and opened in September, 1932, at Bennington, Vt. Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher's descent is: 1. Joseph Hawley, pioneer; 2. Samuel, Sr.; 3. Ephraim; 4. Capt. Jehiel; 5. Andrew; 6. Zadoc H.; 7. Almera Hawley Canfield; 8. Rev. Eli Hawley Canfield; 9. James H., her father; Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

Hon. Thomas Hawley Canfield, son of Samuel and Mary Hawley Canfield, resided for a time in Burlington, Vt. He was one of the earliest and most active promoters of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and therefore, identified with the growth and development of the Northwest. He was born in 1822. His descent is: Joseph[1], the pioneer; Samuel[2], Sr., Ephraim[3]; Capt. Jehiel[4]; Andrew[5]; Eli[6]; Mary Hawley Canfield[7].

Mr. Samuel B. Hawley, lawyer, a resident of Yonkers, N. Y., Yale University, 1844; member of the American Association for the advancement of Science; member of the American Geographic Society; member of the Westchester Historical Society; member of the Executive Committee of the Hawley Family Society. His descent is: Joseph[1], the pioneer; Samuel[2] Sr.; Ephraim[3]; Capt. Jehiel[4]; Curtis[5]; David[7]; David'; Samuel B.[8].

Mary Elizabeth Hawley, Life Member of the Hawley Family Society, Inc., died May 11, 1930, in her 72 year, at her home, "Hawley Manor," Newton, Conn. This beautiful N. E. Village has been the birthplace of many well known persons, but not one made so large a contribution to this town as Mary Elizabeth Hawley.

Among the descendants of Ephraim Hawley through his son Nathan Hawley, is the late Rev. William Hawley, Rector of Historics St. John's Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., many years President John Quincy Adams and President William Henry Harrison sat under his ministry. In the War of 1812, he, being twenty-eight years of age, and residing in New York City, commanded a Company of the Venity Students at New York, enlisted for the protection of the city. Dr. Hawley's grandson is Mr. Allen Ramsey Hawley of New York City, Broker, Club-man, pioneer in the field of aviation, traveler; member of the Hawley Family Society. His descent is: Joseph[1], pioneer; Samuel[2], Sr.; Ephraim[3]; Nathan[4]; Jabez[5]; Rev. W.[6] Hawley; Peter H.[7]; Allen R.[8] Hawley. Among the descendants of Ephraim Hawley through his son Gideon, I will mention two eminent men; Prof. Julius Hawley Seeley, late President of Amherst College, Mass., and his brother, Prof. L. Clark Seeley, first President of Smith College, Northampton, Mass., 1875-1910.

The Protestant Episcopal Church in Roxbury, Conn., and adjoining town, was organized in 1740 and Capt. Jehiel Hawley was elected "lay reader" and annually elected to that office for twelve years or more. Roxbury was the birthplace of Col. Seth Warner in 1743 (son of Dr. Benjamin Warner of Woodbury, Conn.). Also the birthplace of Col. Ethan Allen (according to Allen's own narrative of his experiences when captured by the British and carried to England, published after his death).

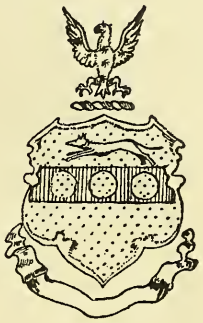
Capt. Jehiel Hawley was to become better acquainted with these Revolutionary heroes before he died. It seems well-nigh incredible that Capt. Jehiel Hawley could retain his loyalty to the Crown amid such defenders of Republican principles.

The exodus into the State of Vermont must have been attended with some difficulty for they traveled in a most primitive way through a wilderness. Capt. Jehiel and family were first settlers at Arlington, Vt. He was known as the "Father of the Town in both State and Church." He built the first frame house in Arlington in 1764, in which he established "Divine Worship" on the Sabbath Day, conducted by himself, later by his son Andrew Hawley and his brother Abel Hawley. The erection of a church edifice was delayed by the Revolutionary War until 1784; it was dedicated as St. James Episcopal Church, Arlington, Vt. The present edifice, erected in 1831 and extensively remodeled in 1900, contains ten memorial windows; the triple-chancel-window is a memorial to the patron Saint James and to Capt. Jehiel Hawley and Hon. Nathan Canfield. See "The Hawley Family Society, Inc., 1930-1931, Bridgeport, Conn."

BIRTHPLACE OF THE CHURCH IN VERMONT

Capt. Jehiel Hawley, son of Ephraim Hawley, built this, the first frame house in Arlington (1764), whither Sunday after Sunday for many years the people from all parts of the surrounding country came for public worship, conducted by him or by some member of the family reading the (lay) service of the Church of England and a sermon.

HAYNES ANCESTRY



HAINES

Arms—Or. on a fesse gules three bezants, in chief a greyhound courant azure, collared argent. Gold shielf; on a red center three Byzantium coins. At the top a blue greyhound, with a silver collar, running. Crest—An eagle displayed azure semee of estoiles argent. A blue eagle sprinkled with silver stars with waving points.

Heraldry probably dates from the use of armor which covered the person of knights in battle, and rendered necessary some sign by which the person might be known. Armorial bearings were used in the time of Henry I, (876-936) and were common during the Crusades. In 1300, coats-of-arms were well systemized, and were in common use. Sometime in the twelfth century, they were made hereditary, and were highly valued, as no person in England below the dignity of a Knight of the Bath had a right to them.

In the Herald's College in London, where the record of the arms legally born was made, we learn that on the first visitation of the Kings-at-arms to Shropshire, A. D. 1569, the Haines blazonry is described as "Or. on a fesse gules three bezants; and in chief a grey-hound courant azure collared argent" (a golden shield with a horizontal red band across the middle, on which are three gold coins, and in the upper part, a blue greyhound running, who wears a silver collar). It is probable that Sir Hynns took part in the wars of the Crusades in which Edward engaged before he became King, as the three bezants signified that the bearer was a Crusader. Bezants were old Byzantian coins of gold.

In the second visitation of the King's officer to examine the arms in Shropshire, A. D. 1584, a crest appears of an eagle displayed azure, sprinkled with silver stars.

In a blank space on a leaf of the Bible brought to New England by Samuel Haines, in 1635, is a well drawn greyhound courant and collared, which doubtless is an index to the arms which his family had borne. The greyhound is an emblem of loyalty, dating from 1194, there being a traditionary account of the greyhound, Gelert, a favorite of Llewelyn, having saved the infant son of Llewelyn by killing a wolf which had entered the room where the child slept.

Origin of the Family Name

The history of the Haines (Haynes) family runs back in Montgomeryshire through Sinion to Owyn, Lord of Guilsfield, son of Griffity, son of Beli, descendant from Brockwel Yschitrog, who reigned over Powyaland (Wales) A. D. 607. Einon, Prince of Powys (Wales), was distinguished in the wars against Henry I of England, A. D. 1100-1135. He had a son whom he named after himself, but by distinction and according to the Welsh custom of the times, he was familiarly called Einws, which was pronounced Eins. This son of Einon had a son John, who was called John Winws, afterwards written John Eines of Bausley, in the parish of Alderbury, which parish was both in Shropshire and Montgomeryshire. Shrewsbury was the market town for this Alderbury parish. Among the ancient records of that town the name frequently occurs, and in the fifteenth and early part of the sixteenth centuries it was variously written as Eines, Eynes, Heynes, Heanes, Haines, Haynes. The pronunciation probably was the same. Few people were able to write their names in those days, and when names were written it was easy to write the "a" in place of the "e" and the "y" in place of the "i." Thus the same name would be written in various ways, but probably all pronounced the same.

It seems to have been a legend among two or three generations immediately after Samuel Haines that he was of Welsh extraction, and his family undoubtedly starts with the Prince of Powys (Wales).

The family of Haines became numerous in England, and its members have held and are now holding important positions in church and state. They have been men of character and have taken part in the great events of the times in which they lived.

Quite early in the great movement westward across the waters, were individual members of the Haines (Haynes) family. Notable among these was Samuel Haines, who reached the shores of the new world August 15, 1635. From him descended John Russell Haynes, whose ancestry and descendants are described in the genealogy "Ancestry and Descendants of John Russell Haynes." The genealogy of John Russell Haynes is given as starting from Deacon Samuel Haines.

Charles Haynes, Inventory was presented in 1685. This is all the information obtained respecting the period of his decease. His marriage is not recorded.

Children, by wife Mary:

1. James, b. March 1, 1664/5.
2. Peter, b. Nov. 21, 1666.
3. Charles, b. Sept. 25, 1669.
4. Jonathan, b. June 29, 1674.
5. Mary, b. Oct. 29, 1678.
6. Hercules, b. April 29, 1681.

James and Jonathan Haynes settled in New London, and left descendants.

Mary (Haynes) Graves, was possibly a daughter of James and Margaret (Stallion) (Foote) Haynes, of New London. See Note at bottom of p. 12, with Graves Family, in The Nebraska and Midwest Genealogical Record.

HENCHMAN OR HINCKESMAN ANCESTRY

("Deane's History of Scituate, Mass., Family Sketches," p. 282). Joseph Henchman (or Hinckesman) appears in Scituate, 1680. He owned a considerable tract of land at Henchman's corner, half mile west of the South Meetinghouse, adjoining Dea. Joseph Cushing's and Philip Turner's land. His house stood twenty rods east from the parting of the roads, on the north side of the street. He sold it to Rev. Mr. Eels, 1714. It was a spacious house. Thirty years since it was taken down, and a slight habitation built with its ruins, and the whole removed, 1826.

The family of Henchman on record are: Elizabeth, born 1685 (married Amos Sylvester, 1706); Mary, 1689; Thomas, 1691; Deborah, 1692; Joseph, 1694; William, 1696; Hannah, 1698;

Edmund, 1700; Sarah, 1702. He had also a sister Elnathan, who married Eliab Turner, 1694. This family came from Massachusetts and returned thither; probably to Chelmsford. We take him to have been the son of Thomas Hinchman, Esq., of Chelmsford. There was, however, a Mr. Hinckesman in Marshfield, 1653, who may have been his father.

(D. A. C., Vol. II, p. 26). Hinchman or Henchman, Joanna, d. 1661; m. Charles Hoar; Margaret married Edward Griswold, England, 1630.

HILDRETH ANCESTRY

Hildreth Family in England

FIRST GENERATION

The Hildreths were among the earliest settlers who migrated from England to North America. Allen's "History of Chelmsford," published in 1820, quotes in full a petition dated May 10, 1653, by Richard Hildreth and 28 others to Hon. John Endicott and other honorable magistrates at Boston for certain grants of land for Chelmsford "on the river Merrimack at a necke of land next to Concord River, near to Pawtucket," it being "a very comfortable place to accommodate a company of God's people upon; that may with God's blessing and assistance live comfortably upon and do good in that place for church and commonwealth."

In the old colonial records is noted the admission, May 10, 1643, of Richard Hildreth as a freeman of the colony of Massachusetts Bay. He settled first at Woburn, then called Charlestown Village, and his name appears as one of the petitioners of that place and of Concord for a township.

Chelmsford town records show that the sergeant received, prior to March 3, 1663, from the Great and General Court of Massachusetts grants of eight separate lots of land amounting, in the aggregate to one hundred and five acres, quite a fair allotment according to the frugal usages of those times. In the records of the year 1664, the favor of the court granted him one hundred and fifty acres additional, he being "greatly disadvantaged, partly by ye hand of God of the use of his right hand whereby wholly disabled to labor." This grant is recorded in the public records of the "General Court (Legislature) of the Colony of Mass. Bay in New England." Vol. IV, part 2nd., p. 100, confirmed 12 October, 1669. This additional grant seems to justify the belief that some extraordinary reason existed for the favor, such, perhaps, as land grants or pensions to soldiers disabled in our military service.

If Sergeant Richard Hildreth, the contemporary of King Charles I, of Oliver Cromwell (died 1658), of Charles II, ever was a fighting military man, he ceased to be such after the loss of the use of his right hand and bore no active part in the expedition against the Narragansett Indians, 1675/6, nor is his name chronicled as having borne arms against the Pequod Indians, "King Philip's War," which terminated at Mount Hope, Aug. 12, 1676.

Richard Hildreth, the ancestor of the New England Hildreths, was born in the north of England in 1605, the year of the Gunpowder Plot, a date fixed by the inscription on his gravestone in Chelmsford, Mass. He was therefore fifteen years old at the sailing of the Mayflower.

When Winslow returned from Plymouth to England to procure supplies, Richard was nineteen years old. It is evident that he entered with enthusiasm into the reforms of his day, and we may assume that he read Winslow's tract about New England.

In 1625, the year that Charles I came to the throne, was born Elizabeth, who afterwards became the second wife of Richard. Richard was then twenty years of age. He married Sarah, his first wife, probably the very year in which his second wife was born, certainly not later than 1627. The colonists at Plymouth then numbered three hundred souls.

The first child of Richard and Sarah was Jane, born, probably not later than 1628, for even at this date she would be only seventeen at the time of her marriage, in 1645. Their second child, James, was born in 1631, a date fixed by a noted lawsuit hereafter mentioned.

Between the births of these two children, the colony of Massachusetts Bay had been founded. Without expressly renouncing the authority of the Church of England, the settlers, after the manner of Plymouth, constituted themselves into a church of their own, dropping the English ceremonials and liturgy. Fifteen ships presently arrived with a thousand emigrants and four ministers. Boston was founded (1630), and Charlestown, Dorchester, Watertown, Roxbury, Medford, Lynn and Cambridge were soon settled. Each town became a little republic. Each constituted itself a distinct church, which admitted its own members and chose its own officers. Boston soon had a shop and a tavern.

Migration to New England

By 1634, the colony, under Winthrop's four years' administration had made much progress. Boston had three ferries and a fort. The towns had water-wells and windmills. Ship-building had been begun at Medford on the Mystic. The colonists used for money grain, beaver-skins, bullets, and wampum. In Virginia, they traded in corn and cattle. At Manhattan they gave the Dutch fur in exchange for West Indian goods. Eight churches had been established, formed, as was supposed, on a pure Bible model; theatrical display, not to be reconciled to a good conscience, had been laid aside. The English Puritans admired and longed for the land where the soul might be at peace. Emigrants came in thick and fast. The towns of Newbury, Ipswich, Weymouth, Hingham, Marblehead, Dedham and Concord were soon settled.

The family antiquarians have been unable to find the exact date on which Richard Hildreth came to this country. We know, however, that the town of Southampton, on Long Island, was founded in 1640, by some forty families from Lynn, who went filibustering against the Dutch.

Richard Hildreth brought with him his wife, Sarah, and his two children, Jane and James. He settled first at Cambridge. What became of Thomas Hildreth and how he fared with the Dutchmen, let those tell who know. Thomas is supposed to have been a brother of Richard and to have emigrated with him.

When Richard Hildreth arrived in New England the state of affairs was as follows: A governor and board of assistants—called the magistrates—carried out the laws, and held courts to settle disputes. They were elected yearly by the freemen. The laws were made by the General Court, consisting of the magistrates with deputies from each town, elected yearly by the freemen. No one could be a freeman unless he was a church member, and not a fourth part of the adult population ever were church members.

The Sabbath began Saturday afternoon. Sunday morning the blowing of a horn announced the hour of worship. Service began at nine, and continued eight hours, with one hour for dinner. The sexton escorted the minister to church. The congregation sat on rude benches arranged according to their age, importance and social standing. These places were assigned at the annual town meeting, and it was a hard business to seat the meeting-house, owing to the pride, envy and jealousy in the hearts of the saints. The service consisted of a preliminary prayer, a chapter of the Bible read and expounded, a psalm in metre dictated line by line to the congregation by a deacon, the long prayer of an hour and a half, the sermon of a hundred or a hundred and fifty pages. At the close of services baptisms took place, and sinners were put on trial and obliged to confess before the congregation. After the benediction, the minister passed out of the church, bowing to the people on each side of the aisle, nor did a person stir till the minister and his family had gone out.

In 1643, Richard Hildreth was admitted as a freeman of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay. This is the first direct notice that we have of him. His friend, Robert Proctor, who had an eye on Jane, his eldest daughter, was admitted a freeman at the same time. The next year, Sarah, the first wife of Richard, died, having been married sixteen to twenty years. The following year Richard married his second wife, Elizabeth, who was twenty years old. Richard was forty, just old enough to be her father. This very year, Robert Proctor married Jane (Dec. 31). This year also, Richard was chosen one of the five selectmen, or townsmen, as they were called, of Cambridge.

A saint, a member of the ruling aristocracy, raised to the highest office in the town of his residence, married to a young wife, what else could be lacking to fill his cup of happiness in the memorable year, 1645!

During the next sixteen years, he became the father of nine children: Elizabeth (named after her mother), Sarah (evidently named in memory of her father's first wife), Mary, Ephraim, Abigail, Joseph, Persis, Thomas and Isaac.

Jane Proctor, the eldest daughter of Richard and Sarah, was about the same age as her step-mother, Elizabeth. These two young women vied with each other in the size of their families. In 1661, at the birth of Isaac, the ninth child of Elizabeth, poor Jane had only seven children, but, though seemingly defeated, she made up for it by the end of the next five years, when her children were equal in number to the tribes of Israel.

In 1647, the first schoolhouse in Cambridge was built. Henry Dunster, first president of Harvard College, owned a lot on the west side of Holyoke Street, about midway between Harvard and Mount Auburn Streets. The schoolhouse was to be built on this lot, and an agreement was drawn up between President Dunster and certain masons to build it. To this agreement, Richard Hildreth was the witness. It is thought by many that there is some mysterious connection between witnessing this agreement for the first schoolhouse of Cambridge and the subsequent literary career of certain members of the family.

As long as Richard Hildreth remained in Cambridge, he was appointed almost every year to some office of trust by the selectmen or by the town meeting.

Besides filling various civil offices, Richard Hildreth was also Sergeant of Militia. This fact comes out in the records of the town of Cambridge, for the year 1654. The clerk writes that Ensign Winship and Sergeant Hildreth were appointed to view fences.

Richard Hildreth removed to Chelmsford in 1656, and was received into the Church, of which Rev. John Risk was minister.

Richard Hildreth attained the age of eighty-eight. His grandchildren numbered fifty-eight, most of them born in his lifetime. Richard died in 1693, Feb. 23d. His wife, Elizabeth, followed him a few months later. James his eldest son, joined him two years after, aged sixty-four, and in two years more Robert Proctor took the long journey to the land where meadow boundaries are of little consequence.

Saint Richard lies buried in the ancient graveyard of Chelmsford. It was long thought that the gravestone was not in existence, but Henry O. Hildreth found it, and steps were later taken to preserve this gravestone.

HINDS ANCESTRY

The origin of the surname "Hind," "Hinde" and "Hinds" is doubtless to be referred to the word-root "hyne" or "hine" of the old English and Scotch languages. This root, which in one form or another is found in most of the ancient tongues included in both the Germanic and Celtic families of languages, occurs in the Anglo-Saxon in the term "hina-man," an expression meaning a tiller of the ground or farmer. With a "d" suffixed, the same root appears in early English in the word "hind," meaning in general, a peasant, farmer or dweller in the country, and in this form and with essentially the same meaning, it has continued in the language of England to the present day, as shown in the lines:

> The hind, that homeward driving the slow steer
> Tells how man's daily work goes forward there.

This surname then, sturdy English in origin as shown by its form, and closely related to similar names found among all the nations of northwestern Europe today, has a history that reaches far back through the dim vistas of the past, and may well be believed to be one of the earliest names to have been commonly used as a surname.

As surname originally designated occupation, estate, place of residence, or some personal trait or peculiarity, we infer that this name had its origin in the large body of English "freeholders," or small land-owners, usually designated collectively by the term "yeomanry," that "bold peasantry, their country's price," their sinewy arms equally skilled to guide the plough or bend the tough bow in defense of Saxon liberty under the standard of the king. And is it to be esteemed a greater honor that one's ancestors should have come to old England with William the Norman, than to have been found stubbornly fighting around the standard of the "Golden Dragon of Wessex," when the stout-hearted Saxon yeomanry, with fierce cries of "Out! Out!" repelled their onslaughts against Harold, the "Last of the Saxons?"

Another explanation of the origin of this surname, transfers it from the class including those of Smith, Baker and Carpenter to that containing Bird, Fish, Lamb, etc., in other words, refers its origin to the Anglo-Saxon word, "hind," the name applied to the female of the red deer. This noble animal, "goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind," was in early days very common in England and a much sought object of the chase. Another spelling of the name is shown in these lines from an old English song:

As I came frae hynd-hunting
Sweet music reached my ears.

That this surname, as well as that of Hart and Roe, did in some instances as least, originate in this manner, seems to be indicated by an old English coat-of-arms belonging to the family of

"Hynde. A hind's head couped, ppr., collared, or, in the mouth a rose, gules, leaved vert."

Whether or not this early bearer of the surname of Hynde rejoiced as did one of old when he exclaimed, "Thou makest my feet like hind's feet and settest me up upon my high places!" he certainly showed taste in the selection of this emblem, for not only is this animal swift and sure-footed, but is often possessed of instincts so nearly human that it was no exaggeration when King Solomon spoke of "the loving hind and pleasant roe," or when the poet Campbell sang the praises of "Wiesbaden's Gentle hind" that watched the sleeping child

As if it were her own.

This explains the fact that the term "hynd" early came to have the meaning, courteous or gentle attached to it, as in the case of the old English ballad of "Hynd Horn," from which two stanzas are quoted:

Near the King's court was a young child born,
With a hey lillelu and a how lo lan;
And his name it was called Young Hynd Horn,
And the birk and the broom blooms bonnie.

Seven Lang years he served the King,
With a hey lillelu and a how lo lan;
And it's a' for the sake o' his daughter Jean,
And the birk and the broom blooms bonnie.

In connection with the statement made above the coat-of-arms of the family of Hinde of Northumberland is both interesting and significant, giving expression as it does to the irrestible power of courtesy and kindness.

"On a rock a dove, azure, wings, or in the beak an olive branch. Meseris succurrere disco." (I study to relieve the distressed.)

But the following are more warlike:

"Hynd of London. A hand, gules, holding an eagle's claw, ppr."
"Hind. An ensign in full dress, with cocked hat, holding aloft the standard of Britain."

Although it is customary at the present time to think of the surname of "Hind" and "Hinds" as being radically different from that of "Haines," "Haynes" and ever "Hine," and although it appears probable that these different forms were originally derived from different sources, it is still doubtless true that all of these as well as several others, are frequently applied to descendants of a common ancestor. People were very careless about spelling two hundred years ago, and it is by no means unlikely that a similar license existed in matters of pronunciation. Indeed, it is evident that many of the common surnames of families in colonial times, were persistently mispronounced, till in some instances they were radically changed. Haskins and Hoskins, Stetson and Stutson, Kempton and Kimpton, Barnes and Burnes, and scores of others might be named as illustrations for it is common to find both spellings very early, and referring to persons known to be of common descent.

So it would not be strange if the surname "Hinds" should have had similar liberties taken with it, and have been pronounced with its predominant vowel sound, either long "i" or long "a", according to the habit or fancy of the speaker.

But we may feel positive that when the name was spelled "Hind" or "Hinds" in town or church records, that the writer, at least, was accustomed to pronounce it with the vowel sound of long "i" for all words of that form in the language, as bind, find, kind, etc., and there are many of them, were then, as now, thus pronounced. The only present exception is the word "wind" used as a noun, and this was no exception in early times and still retains its ancient pronunciation in music and poetry.

But when the name "Hinds" appears in public records as "Hains" or "Haines," as it frequently does, we cannot feel the same degree of certainty as to the pronunciation that the writer intended to express, and we suspect that the "ai" in the name as thus spelled was, sometimes at least, pronounced as in "aisle" although today the vowel sound given in the word "gain" would be intended.

This seems to be the simplest explanation of the fact that the surname of James Hinds of Salem, 1637, so frequently appears as "Hains," "Haines," and "Haynes," in the early records of that town, and parish, though Savage and other genealogists agree in giving the correct spelling as "Hinds" or "Hindes." Otherwise, we are forced to the more probable conclusion first suggested, that the name was differently pronounced by different individuals.

If any further explanation is needed to show how these forms may have started from a single name, it seems to be supplied by the numerous variations of the surname of James Hinds, of Salem, already referred to, as it appears in the town and church records of that place. Truly the names of his posterity are epitomized in his own, for no less than nine distinct spellings occur in records still in existence. They are as follows: Hinds, Hindes, Hynds, Hynes, Hines, Heines, Hains, Haines, Haynes. It is possible that this list is not complete.

Here is elasticity surely! And Long Island remains to be heard from for he ultimately made that his home. It may be hoped that the good people of Southold, where his closing years were spent, finally learned how to pronounce and spell this troublesome name.

What was true of James Hinds, of Salem, was also true, though not in the same degree, of others bearing the surname of Hinds and Haynes in colonial times. John Haynes, illustrious governor of Massachusetts and afterward of Connecticut, was no exception, for his name was frequently misspelled in the public records of the time and even in the "Magnalia Christi" of Cotton Mather. (See Hist. and Gen. of Hinds Family by A. H. Hinds, pp. 1-4.)

First Generation in America

1. James Hinds (Heynes, Haynes, Hindes) the emigrant, came to this country, probably from England and landed in Salem, Mass., as early as 1637, when he was admitted as a freeman. He married in 1638, and at an early day removed to Southold, L. I., where he died in March, 1652/3, his estate being valued at £123, 5s. 4d. His widow was married in June, 1656, to Ralph Dayton, of Southold. Benjamin Haines, who was at Southampton in 1639, and a resident of North Sea (Northampton) in 1657, was probably a brother to James. He was the grandfather of Stephen, who moved to Elizabeth, N. J., as early as 1725, and was probably the ancestor of Gov. Daniel Haines.

The following is communicated by A. M. Haines, Esq., of Galena, Ill., to the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register" in 1883.

James Haines removed from Salem, Mass., to Southold, L. I., about 1651/2 and was a cooper by profession. He is described in a deed made Aug. 7, 1660, as "James Haynes, late of Salem, in the county of Essex," etc., which is on record at Southold. His name is written on the Salem church records Haines, Haynes and Hindes. Hatfield in his history of Elizabeth, N. J., states that John Haynes appears at Elizabeth among the first sixty-five settlers, Feb. 19, 1665. This John Hinds or Haines, and his brother James, were sons of James Hinds of Salem, Mass., and Southold, L. I., and were bred coopers, etc. A John Hinds died at Elizabeth, N. J., in 1749, and John Dayton was one of his executors.

We have failed to trace the first James Hindes or Haines beyond Salem, but he undoubtedly came from Salem.

The following is the will of James Hinds, which was made March 1, 1652:

"I, James Haynes being weake in bodie, but by divine Providence in p'fect memorie do make this my last will and testament:

"Impris. I doe give and bequeath that small estate the Lord hath been pleased to lend me to my loving wife Mary Haynes my children being Smale for to bring them upp withall only my tooles that belong to my calling I give them all to my oldest sonn John Haynes.

"2d. My will is that my children continue with my wife till they be twenty one years of age, th' older laboring to be a help to bring upp the younger, unless Providence order it otherwise that she shall dispose of herselfe in marriage and then shall see or have cause to put any of them to some honest trade or callinge.

"I leave it to her & my loving friends Mr. John Youngs, Sen: & John Herbert my overseers to dispose of, or in case she should not dispose of herself in marriage, that she finds not herselfe able to govern them, or that it bee not advantagious to the family to keep them all at home, then I leave it to her, and my aforesaid overseers to dispose of them. In testimony hereof I have sett my hand the 1 March 1652. Southold

This will and inventory seem to have been recorded on the fifth day of December. in the "Southold Town Records," Liber B., p. 91, from which volume this copy was made, October 15, 1881. His widow, Mary, married in June, 1656, Ralph Dayton, in Southold.

The records of the First Congregational Church of Salem, Mass., show that this James Haines was a member as early as Dec. 25, 1637, and the baptism of his eight children are recorded as follows:

1. John, b. Aug. 28, 1639.
2. James, bap. Aug. 2, 1641.
3. Benjamin, bap. Aug. 26, 1643.
4. Mary, bap. Feb. 19, 1646.

8. Thomas, bap. March 4, 1651.

Second Generation

John Hinds, (son of James Hinds) born Aug. 28, 1639; and died in Lancaster, Mass., in March, 1720. He married (first) a woman, of whom no record can be found. By her, he had one son and probably others. He married (second) in Lancaster, Feb. 9, 1681/2, Mary Butler, widow of James Butler, an early proprietor and planter of Lancaster. Her name is found mentioned in the Billerica records. He went from Woburn in 1676 to Lancaster, thence to Brookfield and from there back to Lancaster again.

Temple's "History of North Brookfield" says:

"John Hinds from Woburn, settles Lancaster, that part which became Bolton, May 25, 1710. He had a grant of 62 acres in Brookfield and in all 199 acres; sold house lot, April 13, 1719, to son John and returned to Lancaster, where he died, March 1720."

A few years after his death, his wife, executrix, "sells lands to her loving son, John of Brookfield." This piece of land was sold, Oct. 14, 1724.

The "Annals of Lancaster" says:

"John hinds hath this thirtie acre lott Granted by the town Lying one the east side of the Nashaway River in several places one piece Lying to the Southeast of Rattlesnake hill . . . . more he hath a peice Laid out at the head of the Little Brook that Runs threw James Butler's land near his houseplace."

The "History of Lancaster" says:

"John Hinds was one of those directed to garrison 'ye east side of ye river, under John Moore, commander, April 20, 1704'."

The true copy of the last will and testament of John Hinds, dated March 8, 1719/20, is recorded in East Cambridge, Mass.

Third Generation

Jacob Hinds, son of John and Mrs. Mary (Butler) Hinds, born probably in Brookfield, Mass., in 1685, and died in West Boylston, Mass.; married in Marlboro, Mass., Dec. 6, 1716, Grace Morse, daughter of Joseph and Hester (Peirce) Morse. She was born in Watertown, Mass., June 7, 1694. Her maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth Peirce. Her father at the age of twenty-four embarked at Ipswich, England, in April, 1634, in the ship "Elizabeth," William Andrews, master. He settled in Watertown, where he was one of the proprietors and was admitted as a freeman, May 6, 1635. He was the oldest son of Joseph and Deborah Morse, who came to America probably a year or two later than their son.

Jacob Hinds was a farmer of Marlborough, where his name is found spelled on the public records "Hins." In 1717, he was one of the Marlborough people to settle Shrewsbury. From Shrewsbury, he moved his family in 1720, to West Boylston and was probably the first white settler in that section. He lived on house lot No. 33, in 1729. He was on the muster roll of Captain Asa Whitcomb, in whose company he was a corporal.

The "History of Shrewsbury" says:

"The settlers who located Shrewsbury had divided among them, by the General Court, land for which grantee was to pay, within six years, £3 12s. 6d. Land was granted to forty-five persons. Jacob Hinds received lot 33 of sixty acres. The grants were finally completed, Dec. 18, 1718. Some years afterwards, the proprietors required a count to be made to show how much meadow was allotted to each. This record shows in part this: 'Lot No. 33, Granted to Jacob Hinds Dec. 30, 1718. Thiss 33d House Lot in Shrewsbury contains in it 60 acres, and hath a 50 acre right belonging to it, &c., and lyeth near the S. E. angle of the Ministerial lot, and is bounded every way by undivided land. He hath for his division of meadow the sixth lot on Muddy Meadow. This lot No. 33, is now Feb. 12, 1729, in possession of Jacob Hinds'."

Jacob's will ("Worcester Wills," Vol. III, p. 538), dated Sept. 24, 1764, and accompanying papers name the following children: Joseph; Benjamin; Jason and Jacob; Abigail, wife of Josiah Broad; Tabitha, wife of Bezebel Field; Mary, wife of Joshua Child; Sarah, wife of Micah Witherbee; and Elizabeth, wife of Ephraim Temple.

In 1645, he became a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston. Four years afterward, the people of Dedham determined to organize a new town, which later came to be Medfield, and Mr. Hinsdale was one of the committee to effect such object, as is shown by an extract from the Dedham town records of 14 November 1649:

Chosen by the inhabitants assembled for the managing and transaction of whatever is or may be needed for the further performing of the erecting, disposing and government of the said village, the men whose names are hereunto written, who are fully authorized thereunto until there be such a company of men engaged in that plantation and associated together as the town of Dedham shall judge meet for that work and trust.—Ralph Wheelock, Thomas Wight, Robert Hinsdale, Henry Chickering, John Dwight, Peter Woodward, Eleazer Lusher. (Peter Woodward—of Dedham, Mass., was freeman 18 May 1642, and a representative to the General Court, 1665, 1669 and 1670. He died 9 May 1685. Beside Ann, who married Robert Hinsdale, he had Peter[2], Rebecca[2], who married 1666, Thomas Fisher, and Rev. William[2], who died in 1669.)

In 1651, the General Court incorporated the town—the forty-first in the Colony—and named it Medfield. Mr. Hinsdale was chosen one of its first board of selectmen, and served in this capacity six years. He was among the first thirteen who took up house-lots at Medfield, and his homestead there was on what is now North Street; the original well is still in use. Some of the buildings on his estate were burned by the Indians in 1676. He has been styled by one historian "a born pioneer," and such he would appear to have been, as after participating in the founding of Dedham and Medfield, he removed with his family about 1667, to the Connecticut Valley, settling first at Hadley and later at Deerfield, where he was an original proprietor and deacon of the church, and where he drew by lot, in 1671, the site of the present Willard House.

His removal to this section was, doubtless, to occupy his portion of the eight thousand acre grant of the General Court to the inhabitants of Dedham, in consideration of their gift of land to the Indians at Natick. Robert Hinsdale, his son Samuel, Sampson Frary, John Farrington and Samuel Daniel were the only men of the original thirty-two Dedham proprietors of Pocumtuck who became actual settlers of Deerfield. The other sold out their rights.

Mr. Hinsdale was slain by the Indians, with his sons Barnabas, John and Samuel, in the memorable fight at Bloody Brook, 18 September 1675.

He married (first) Ann, probably daughter of Peter Woodward, Sr., of Dedham; she died in 1666, and he married (second) about 1668, Elizabeth, widow of John Hawkes of Hadley, by whom he had no issue.

Children of Robert and Ann (Woodward) Hinsdale, probably all born at Dedham:

2. Samuel Hinsdale[2], eldest son of Robert (No. 1) and Ann (Woodward) Hinsdale (p. 129), removed with his father to the Connecticut valley and was living at Hatfield in 1670, when with Sampson Frairy he took up lands at Deerfield, and has since been considered one of its two earliest settlers. In 1672, he petitioned the town of Dedham to appoint a committee of suitable persons to regulate the affairs of the new settlement, and in 1673, the General Court, "in answer to the petition of Samuel Hinsdale, Sampson Frary and others, allow the petitioners the liberty of a township," and granted them such an addition "as that the whole shall be seven miles square," and "doe further empower Samuel Hinsdale with five men of Hatfield or Hadley, a committee to admit inhabitants, grant lands and order all their prudential affairs, until they shall be in a capacity to manage their own affairs."

Samuel Hinsdale came to Hadley with his father; was an original owner in the 8000 acre grant, and in 1670 he owned one-twelfth of the entire property; in 1669, before the lands were divided, he had broken up several acres, and was our first sett.; the committee found him a "Resident," in May, 1670; he lived on

No. 14; he fell with Lothrop; his personal estate of 45 lb. was "given his widow to bring up their children;" the "land at Deerfield, alias Paucomtuck, not being valued in regard to the present Indian war rendering it at present of little worth, but being hopeful to prove a Real Estate hereafter," was given to Samuel and Mehuman, "the Eldest to have a double share." He m. Oct. 31, 1660, Mehitable Johnson, b. 1644; she m. (2) John Root, who was k. at Dfd. by Asphelon's party, Sept. 19, 1677; she m. (3) Mar. 11, 1679, Dea. John Coleman of Hat.; she d. Aug. 4, 1689.

During the two ensuing years the committee was not idle. Lands were granted, claims adjusted, a church founded, and, in execution of one of the provisions of the General Court in its grant, "an able, Orthodox minister, in the person of Rev. Samuel Mather, was settled in the infant town, by this time known as Deerfield, and so soon to receive the baptism of blood at the hand of the savages. Samuel Hinsdale was among its most prominent and energetic citizens, with the promise of usefulness and strength, when he met his untimely death at Bloody Brook, 18 Sept. 1675.

He married 31 October 1660, Mehitable Johnson, born 1644; baptized 29 March 1646; died 4 August 1689, daughter of Humphrey and Ellen (Cheney) Johnson.

Children of Samuel and Mehitable (Johnson) Hinsdale:

1. Mehitable, b. Oct. 18, 1663; m. Obadiah Dickinson, who was cap. Sept. 19, 1677.

HOAR ANCESTRY

When or where our race or family first became known as a distinct family cannot be traced. Asia is regarded as the birthplace of man, and we may be said to have come from the Indo-Germanic race. Caesar invaded England in B. C. 55. The inhabitants then were Celtic, kindred to the Gauls. It was not until A. D. 43 that Claudius began the real conquest. The Romans abandoned the country before the middle of the fifth century. In 449 the Anglo-Saxons, led by Hengist with his brother, Horsa, landed in England with 300 men and were employed against the Picts and Scots. Horsa is said to have been killed in battle A. D. 455.

The coat of arms, of the "Hoare Family" of England is here shown more as an object lesson of the history of our race, than for personal use. "An eagle displayed with two heads within a brodure engrailed" is found on all the shields of the Hore, Hoore, Hoare and Hoar Families.

"The crest is the uppermost device of a coat of arms and is as ancient as devises on shields."

Ours in America is an eagle, head erased, a ring in its beak, or.

The eagle was at an early date adopted as the symbol of royal power. Xenophon relates that the kings of the Medes bore a golden eagle on their shields. From the time of Marius it was the principal emblem of the Roman Republic, and the only standard of the legions; first silver, then gold.

The double-headed eagle was in use among the Byzantine emperors to indicate their claims to the empire, both of the east and west. Afterwards the eagle was adopted by the Russian, Austrian, and German emperors. The German, under Albert First, became the double-headed eagle as the successors of the Roman emperors. The English hearaldry dates from the Tournaments, found on tombs in the eleventh century, and became common in the twelfth century.

We have shown that our arms were the arms of dominion and sovereignty.

Our line came from Gloucester, England.

"Venit Hora" and "In Ardua" are mottoes that clearly express our character. Approbativeness is another trait of our ancestors. We wish to be well thought of at home and abroad. In size, of the German type, bald headed at quite an early age. Many are dark with piercing black eyes, but the majority are of a lighter complexion.

The Surname of the family of Hore, originated at the time of the Crusades. The Family was in early ages of distinction in England. They held lands in the 12th Century in South Wales, after its conquest by the Normans. According to the tradition, and an old "Genealogy," the first of the name (Hoar) came from Ireland.

Of the first Charles Hoare, of Gloucester, England, but little is known. He married Margery ——. He died in 1636 and left a will, which mentions Thomas, Margery, John and Charles, David, Leonard and Joan, last three minors in 1632. He appears to have been a person of note in that place. The "coat of arms" of the "Hoare Family" were used by the Gloucester family.

His son, the second Charles, also lived in the same place. He was alderman of the city from 1632 to 1638. Sheriff in 1634. He left a will dated Sept. 25, 1638. "Prerogative Court of Canterbury, Doctors Commons, Ad'ion granted Dec. 31, 1638, to Joane Hoare the relict." (Will with notes by G. F. Hoar.) He appears to have left quite a large estate and was a man much engaged in public affairs. His widow, with her five children, John, Daniel, Joanna, Leonard and Margerie, came to this country in 1639-40, and settled in Braintree, Mass. About this date many families, who brought much wealth, came to New England. The cause of this emigration would appear to arise from the troublesome times in England. Charles I became king in 1625. Then came the long Parliament, and the Civil War began late in 1642. Charles I was condemned and executed in London, January 30, 1649. There is no doubt but that our line at the time of the second Charles Hoare belonged to the Parliament side and were strong supporters of the Protestant faith, and this line of the Hoar family would probably never have had to be recorded if Joane and her son John had remained in England. (See "The Hoar Family in America," by H. S. Nurse, 1899.) Joanna (Joane in will), the widow of the second Charles, died in Braintree, Sunday, December 20, 1661. The meaning of the name (grace of the Lord) seems very happily merited. She was buried in the old Quincy Cemetery with her son Leonard and his wife and daughter.

John Hoare, the first in our line in this country, first settled in Scituate, Mass., in 1643 (to 1655) and bore arms the same year. He was a lawyer, and noted "for his bold, independent mind and action." He had a farm on the west of Little Masquashart Pond. While here he appears to have been engaged in the business of the town, drafting deeds, bonds, etc.

Leonard returned with his wife to Boston, Mass., in July, 1672, and preached for a short time as assistant at the South Church. He was soon called to be president of Harvard College, December, 1672.

Mrs. Bridget Hoar, wife of Leonard, married second, Hezekiah Usher, 1686. They did not live together long. She went to England in 1687. She had two daughters, one died young. The other, Bridget, married in London, June 21, 1689, Thomas Cotton, who was born at or near Worthy, England, 1657; died 1730. Mrs. Bridget Cotton was willed by her stepfather, Mr. Usher, the tumbler with the "Arms of Hoare" engraved thereon.

Joane, sister of John, married Col. Edmund Quincy, July 26, 1648, Braintree, son of Edmund and Judith Quincy, who came to New England, September 4, 1633. They had eight children.

Margerie, sister of John, married first, —— Mathew; married second, Rev. Henry Flynt, of Braintree, Mass. He came to New England, 1635. Ordained church at Braintree, 1639.

John Quincy Adams was a descendant from her.

1. Charles Hoare, Gloucester, England; died 1636; married Margerie ——.

Children were:

1. Thomas.
2. Charles, m. Joanna Hinchman. He d. in England, 1638.
3. —— m. Thomas Hill.
4. Elinor ——. m. Leonard Tarne.
(Notes by author of "Hoare Family," say "3" and "4" were 3. Elinor, Anna. Authority lost.)

2. Charles Hoare, Gloucester, England, born ——; died 1638 in England; married Joanna Hincksman or Henchman, born ——; died Braintree, December 20, 1661.

Children were:

1. Thomas (mother uncertain), bapt. June 15, 1612. Remained in England.
2. John, d. Apr. 2, 1704; m. Alice Lisle. She d. June 5, 1696.
3. Daniel, b. Gloucester, England. Boston, 1650; m. Mary Stratton at Concord.

John Hoare, born Gloucester, England; died Concord, Mass., April 2, 1704; married Alice Lyle in England (spelled Ales, Connecticut Register); died Concord, June 5, 1696. He was at Scituate, in Plymouth Colony in 1643, moved to Concord, Mass., 1659, and was the means of rescuing Mrs. Rowlandson from her captivity among the Indians in 1676.

Children were:

1. Elizabeth, d. Concord, Sept. 25, 1687; m. Jonathan Prescott, Concord, Dec. 23, 1675.

HOLCOMB ANCESTRY

The Holcombe family is of ancient English origin. The name is derived from two words, Holt, meaning woody, and cum or combe, meaning a valley between two hills. There have been many eminent members of the Holcombe family in New England. Among them are Amasa Holcombe, the scientist; Chester Holcombe, the diplomatist; Rev. Frederick Holcombe, one of the founders of Trinity College in Hartford. Among the men of prominence who have been allied with the Holcombe family and are ancestors of members of the branch of the family mentioned below are: John Webster, governor of Connecticut; Deacon Samuel Chapin, one of the founders of Springfield, Massachusetts; Hon. William Phelps, one of the commissioners appointed by the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1636 to govern the people of Connecticut, assistant, member of the council of the Pequot War in 1637, and member of the council which framed the constitution in 1639; Captain Joseph Wadsworth, who concealed the charter of Connecticut in the famous Charter Oak; and General Nathan Johnson, an officer in the war of 1812, who was one of the most prominent lawyers in the state, quarter-master-general for many years, and state senator.

The family of Holcombe settled for centuries upon the estate of Hull, County Devon, England,—seven descents of which are recorded in the Heralds visitations of 1620—sent several of its members over to America between 1630 and 1695. The first colonist of the name, Thomas Holcombe, was born either in Pembrokeshire, Wales, or in Devonshire, England, in 1601, and, it is believed, was a son of Gilbert and Ann Holcombe. He came to New England, in 1630, in the "Mary & John." He married Elizabeth Ferguson, some authorities state, before he left England, and others say the marriage took place in Dorchester, Massachusetts. She was born in England and was a fellow passenger on the "Mary & John." Thomas Holcomb (or Holcombe) was made freeman at Dorchester, in 1634; sold his lands there in 1635, and soon afterward removed to Windsor. He was a prominent man in the settlement. In 1639, he was one of those who represented Windsor and Hartford in the forming of the Constitution of the Colony of Connecticut. He died Sept. 7, 1657, After his death, his widow married, Aug. 5, 1658, James Enho. She died Oct. 7, 1679.

The Arms and Motto given in "American Heraldica," by E. Dev. Vermont, have been preserved especially in this branch of the Holcombe family . A complete pedigree of the Holcombes of Devonshire, starting from John Holcombe, Knight (XI Century), and including the father of the emigrant, Thomas Holcombe, is given in the "Holcombe Genealogy" by Jesse Seaver.

Holcombe, Thomas, early at Dorchester, Mass., where, in May, 1634, he was made freeman; in 1635, sold his ho. and lands to Richard Jones; soon after rem. to W.; in 1639, went to Poq., 4 m. W. of W.(see p. 159, Vol. I); was, in 1639, one of those who rep. W. and Hartford in the forming of the Constitution of the Col. of Conn. About 64 miles out of London, where you follow the quaint old Bath Coach Road, you will arrive at the village of Hungerford, the ancient seat of the Hungerford Family, in Pastoral, Berkshire, and extending into Wiltshire. Hungerford is well off the well traveled tourist's routes, but it holds more than passing interests to the traveler, who likes to linger long in quaint by-ways of the world, studying old customs of olden days, where they are still observed in all the simple ingenuousness. Such a traveler would delight in the observance of Hock Day. The Holiday occurs the Thursday, Easter Week. Hungerford is also a favorite Hunting Center. John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, presented to the citizens the Manoral rights including Kennit and other streams in the locality, which are numerous, and the records are carefully preserved in the town hall. One of their town houses was located next to Buckingham Palace, on the Thames River.

Lucy Hungerford, daughter and co-heiress of Sir Walter Hungerford, and widow of Sir John, son of Nicholas St. John and Elizabeth Blount, his wife, married Sir Anthony Hungerford (the son of her Fifth cousin Anthony Hungerford, Sr.), born 1564; died 1627, of Black Bourton or Bourton Inges, who by his wife Lucy had

Children:

1. Sir Edward Hungerford, K. B., first son of Cadenham, born 1596; died 1648, a spendthrift.
2. Sarah Hungerford, married Sir John Carew.

Mr. Hungerford, when a boy of 14 at Farnham, Que., became acquainted with the railway locomotive; metaphorically speaking, he boarded it then and made it carry him from the lathe of the machinist's apprentice, to the chair of vice-president of the Grand Division of the Canadian National Railways, the world's greatest railway. Mr. Hungerford is a man of quick action who never seems to be in a hurry. He has a wide circle of friends in the railway world, friends that he made while mastering his various jobs in the mechanical department at important railway points clear across the country. First as a machinist's apprentice and then in the mechanical department of the Canadian Northern Railroad of the Western Lines. At the end of five years the mechanical line of the road was in first-class shape and S. J. Hungerford's jurisdiction was extended over the Eastern Lines of the system. In 1915, when a vacancy occurred in the management of the Eastern Lines of the Canadian Northern, Mr. Hungerford was appointed vice-president of operating and maintenance activities. On Feb. 20, 1924, the three Grand Divisions of the Atlantic, Eastern and West Regions consolidated and Mr. Hungerford was made vice-president in charge of operations and maintenance. After the roads were consolidated the name was changed to Canadian National Railways. Those who know Mr. Hungerford well, have complete confidence in his capacity. He is regarded as one of those men, who with the president will set new standards of devotion to duty and loyalty to employers; in this case the general public of Canada. In 1932 Mr. Hungerford was made President of Central Vermont and Canadian National Railroads.

(Copied from "Montreal Star.")

Mr. Hungerford's experience has ranged more than 45 years from the humble position of machinist apprentice, to acting President of the Canadian National Railways, the largest railway system in the world. He was born in Farnham, less than a score of miles North of the Vermont border, 61 years ago. He entered railroading at Farnham, Que. in 1886. Mr. Hungerford has long been recognized as one of the foremost Railway Operating Executives of the Continent, and his experience has included service in some of the largest Railway Systems in Canada and the United States. As Vice-President in charge of Operations and Construction of the Canadian National subsequent to the period of the disastrous Vermont floods in 1927, he played a prominent role in the reconstruction of the flood-torn Central Vermont Railway Lines.

HYDE ANCESTRY

William Hyde was born in England and came over to New England with Hooker. William Hide was an original proprietor of Hartford, Surveyor of Highways, removed to Saybrook 1641, thence to Norwich 1659 or '60. William Hyde died Jan. 6, 1681. He served frequently as Selectman. William Hyde was father of Samuel. William Hyde was disabled at Hartford, Conn., before he removed to Norwich, 1659/60. (See N. S. F. & P., No. 1790.)

Dea. Samuel Hyde, aged 39, embarked at London in the "Jonathan" in the spring of 1639, for New England; was adm. freeman, May 2, 1649; was one of the first settlers and first deacons of New Camb. Jonathan Hyde, Sen'r, of Newton, was his brother, and probably considerably younger than himself. (See "A brief Notice of the Settlement of Newton," by F. Jackson, Esq.)

Humphrey Hide, as the name is written in the F. T. Rec., was at Windsor before coming to Fairfield. The Hyde family are believed to have been, and there seems to be no question about it, of the best blood of England. They have always been staunch, sterling, thrifty men in the town; and for generations a Deacon Hide has represented the family in the Greens Farms Congregational Church.

Humphrey Hide bought land at Windsor, 1645, which he sold 1653 and rem. to Fairfield, where a grant of two acres was entered 11 Mar. 1649 (1649/50). On 12 Feb. 1671 (1671/2), he conveyed to son John; contingent heirs, daus. Sarah and Hannah.

CAPTAIN JOHNSON ANCESTRY

("New England Historical and Genealogical Register," Vol. LXXV, 1921, page 236), Leaders in the Winthrop Fleet, 1630; communicated by J. Gardner Bartlett, of Boston, Mass.

The following list of some of the leading men who came to New England in the fleet with Winthrop in 1630 is preserved in the Colonial Office Papers, Vol. 5, No. 78, in the Public Record Office, London.

A Note of the names of the principal undertakers for the plantation of the Massachusetts bay in Newe England that are themselves gonne over with theire wives and children.

Mr. Joh: Winthroppe Esqr: Governor, and three of his sonnes.
Sr Rich: Saltonstall Knight, three of his sonnes and 2 daughters.
Mr. Isaake Johnson Esqr and the Lady Arbella his wife Sister to the Earle of Lincolne.
Mr. Charles Fines the said Earles brother.
Mr. Dudley, his wife, 2 sonnes and 4 daughters.
Mr. Coddington and his wife.
Mr. Pincheon and his wife and 3 daughters.
Mr. Vassall and his wife.
Mr. Revell.

(Endorsed)
The names of the New plantators in New England.
For the right honorable the Lord Carleton.

This list raises a few interesting points. From various evidences it appears that the three sons brought by Governor Winthrop were Henry, Stephen and Samuel. Sir Richard Saltonstall had four sons, Richard, Samuel, Robert and Henry. Probably the youngest son, Henry, was the one left in England, and he came later to New England. The daughters were Rosamond and Grace. Charles Fiennes, born about 1607, was the fifth son of Thomas Fiennes, alias Clinton, third Earl of Lincoln and a younger brother of Theophilus Fiennes, fourth Earl of Lincoln. He entered Christ's College, Cambridge, in Easter, 1624, but did not proceed to a degree. He remained only a few weeks in New England, and then returned to England. ("Savage, in his 'Gen. Dict.,' has erroneously confused this passenger with another person of the same name.") The four daughters brought over by Thomas Dudley were Ann, Patience, Sarah and Mercy. His son, Samuel Dudley, baptized Nov. 30, 1608, is known to have come with his parents; but who was the other son referred to in the list? The father married April 25, 1603, Dorothy Yorke, and when elected deputy governor, May 17, 1637, is called "Senior," a term which implies a son Thomas then living in England.

(Genealogy—"Connecticut," Vol. II, page 836, The Johnson Line)—JOHN JOHNSON, immigrant ancestor, was born in England and came to America in the fleet with Winthrop, accompanied by his wife Margery, who died at Roxbury, June 9, 1655, and their sons, Isaac and Humphrey, and probably other children. Savage thinks there were three daughters. Johnson was admitted a freeman, May 18, 1630. He settled in Roxbury and was called a yeoman. He was chosen by the General Court, Oct. 19, 1630, constable of Roxbury and surveyor of all the arms of the Colony, and was a very industrious man in his place. He kept a tavern and was agent for Mrs. Catherine Sumpner, of London, in 1653. He was a man of wealth and much distinction. He was a deputy to the General Court in 1634 and many years afterwards. His house was burned Aug. 2, 1645, with seventeen barrels of his country's powder and many arms in his charge. At the same time the town records were destroyed. He was elected a member of the Artillery Company in 1658. He signed the inventory of Joseph Weld's estate in 1646. He died Sept. 30, 1650, and his will was proved Oct. 15, following, dividing his property among his five children, the eldest to have a double portion. The estate amounted to six hundred and sixty pounds. He married (2) Grace (Negus) Fawer, widow of Barnabas Fawer. Her will was made Dec. 21, 1671, and proved Dec. 29, 1671, leaving all her estate to her brothers, Jonathan and Benjamin Hegus.

early as 1643, when his name appears on a deed. One of the Original Proprietors. He was resident of Scituate in 1651. He married (1) in 1642, Eleanor Cheney, of Roxbury, who died at Hingham, Sept. 28, 1678. He married (2) Abigail ——.

KELLOGG ANCESTRY

Kelloggs of the Old World and the New

The surname Kellogg is found in England early in the sixteenth century, and there are differences of opinion as to its origin. Some think the name comes from two Gaelic words meaning "Lake" and "Cemetery," making it a place name. The earliest record of the family is in Debden, county Essex, England, when in January, 1525, Nicholas Kellogg was taxed. William Kellogg was also on the tax list. There were many ways of spelling the name, among them: Kelhogge, Kellogue, Cologe, Calaug, Cellidge, Kellock, Killhog, Coolidge, Cellog and many others. There were many families of the name in county Essex, Great Leigh and Braintree being the seat of different branches probably of the same family. Nicholas Kellogg was born about 1488 and married Florence, daughter of William Hall. He was buried in Debden, May 17, 1558, and she was buried there November 8, 1671.

Children:

William, bur. in Saffron Walden, Feb. 2, 1578.

Thomas, lived in Debden, probably ancestor of the American immigrant mentioned below.

Kellogg ("Records of the South Church, Portsmouth," p. 178)—Martin Kellogg under Roger Wolcott, Wethersfield Regt., French and Indian War.

Hon. Day Otis Kellogg, formerly U. S. Consul at Glasgow, Scotland, an early collector of Kellogg data. (See "N. E. Hist. Gen. Reg." 1858; "Gen. Sterns of the Kellogg Family," 88.) He felt that the Kelloggs were partisans of James VI of Scotland and came with him to England, where he ascended the Thrones of Great Britain, as James I, 24 March 1603.

The Manor of Debden Hall in the Town of Debden hath an elegant and commodious Mansion. The Manor was siezed by King Henry II in 1155 and was granted to his son, King John who granted it to Lord Cromwall, Earl of Essex. It came back to the Crown as part of the dowry of Mary, Bohan, wife of Henry IV and remained through the reignes of Henry V, Henry VI, Edward IV and Henry VIII, who granted it to Lord Audley, Nichols Kellogg, senior, born Debon, 18 Oct. 1558.

Thomas Kellogg's will of his mother, Florence Kellogg, to Thomas Kellogg and his heir 5 Edward VI (A.D. 1551). Thomas Kellogg born at Debon, 15 July 1571.

1. Philippe Kellogg, probably son of Thomas and grandson of Nicholas of Debden, was the first in England from whom the Kelloggs of the new world can with certainty trace their descent. The records show that Nicholas Kellogg, of Debden, married Florence, daughter of William Hall; the second wife of Thomas Kellogg, of Great Leighs, was the widow of Thomas Halles or Hall, of that parish; Martin Kellogg, son of Phillippe, married Prudence, daughter of John Bird, of Bishop's Stortford. There was a John Bird in Debden, perhaps son of Phillippe Bird, who was associated with the Kelloggs as a witness to wills as well as a supervisor. One William Bird married in Great Leighs, in 1645, Amma, daughter of Thomas Kellogg. Thomas Kellogg was baptized at Debden, 15 July 1571.

The first appears in booking, Essex, two years later in great Leighs. (p. 7) Martin, son of Phillippe, baptized at Great Leighs, 23 Nov. 1595; married in St. Nichols Bishops, Stratford, County Hereford, 22 Oct. 1621, to Prudence Bird, daughter of John Bird of Bishops Stratford. She died before May, 1671, as her name does not appear in his will. He died between 20 May 1671, when his will was made, and 20 Sept., in Brambe, England, same year when it was proved. (p. 25). Lieut. Joseph[3], son of Martin (p. 7) baptized in Great Leighs, England, Apr., 1626; married (first) probably in England, Joanna Foote. She died in Hadley, Mass., 14 Sept. 1666. He married Abigail Terry, born in Windsor, Conn., 21 Sept. 1646, daughter of Stephen Terry, born in Stockton, Whitshire, England, 25 August, 1608, and Elizabeth ——. He was ade of the proprietor of Hadley. He died between 27 June 1707 when his will was dated, and 31 Oct. 1726, when it was proved Stephen Terry, son of John Terry and Mary White, came to America on the "Mary and John," in 1630; admitted freeman in Dorchester, Mass., 16 May 1631; removed to Windsor, Conn., in 1637, where he was a member of the first troop of cavalry organized in this country. He removed to Hadley as early as 1663, and was its first constable. He died there, 1668; his wife died 11 Aug. 1683.

Lieut. Joseph Kellogg, made his first appearance in Farmington, Conn., at an early date of the settlement of the town; joined the church there October 9, 1653. Removed to Boston, 1659, and purchased a homestead there.

The Boston Records show the registry of a deed from Peter Oliver, merchant to Joseph Kellogg, spelling his name "Kelog," dated October 9, 1659, describing him as "formerly of Farmington, now of Boston," conveying a house and lot to him on what is now Washington Street.

He removed to Hadley, Mass., 1662; died there, 1707. Will dated 1707; probated February 4, 1708.

Lieut. Joseph married (first) Joannah Foote, who died in Hadley, Sept. 14, 1666; married (second) Abigail Terry, daughter of Deacon Stephen Terry, of Dorchester, Windsor and Simsbury, on May 9, 1667. She was born in Simsbury, Sept. 21, 1646.

"The names of those which came over first, in ye year 1620, and were by the blessing of God the first beginers and (in a sort) the foundation of all the Plantations and Colonies in New-England; and their families.

Robert Latham was probably the son of William. He married Susannah, daughter of John Winslow and niece of Governor Edward, 1649, and had Mercy, 1650 (at Plymouth), James, Chilton, Joseph, Elizabeth, Hannah, Sarah. Settled in East Bridgewater in 1657. His wife's mother was the famous Mary Chilton. He named his first two sons after her grandfather, James and Chilton. The third child, Joseph, after her father.

Note: Spelling as used in Bradford's Journal.

William Latham[1], a descendant of Sir Oskatell Latham, of Artbury, England, in the reign of Edward I was first of his name in this country. He was at Plymouth in 1623, at Duxbury in 1637, and at Marshfield in 1643, where his house was burned by Indians in 1648. William Latham[1] wife unknown. Their son, Robert Latham[2], was constable at Marshfield in 1643 and took the oath of fidelity in 1657. His wife was Susanna Winslow, a daughter of Mary Chilton and John Winslow, the latter being a brother of Governor Edward Winslow. Captain Chilton Latham[3] was born in 1671 and died in 1751, at Bridgewater, Mass.; his wife was Susanna Kingman. (State of Vermont, Genealogical and Biographical, Vol. II, pages 331, 332). The Lathams were probably descended from the Royal Family. (See Chart CCVII, Burke's Royal Families.)

RAVENSWORTH CASTLE

Built about 1030 by Thorfin the Dane, Earl of Orkney Isles, and also called Lord of Tanfield. The founder of the Washington Family in England.

"THORFIN, THE DANE,"
Earl of the Orkney Isles,
Founder of the Washington Family in England
Circa A. D. 1030-35,
ODIN,
First King of Scandinavia, B. C. 70.

The pedigree and history of the Washington Family, derived from Odin, the founder of Scandinavia, B. C. 70, by Albert Welles, president of the American College for Genealogical Registry and Heraldry, 1879, pp. 3 to 9:

(PREFACE.) My position as president of the American College for Genealogical Registry and Heraldry enables me to obtain correct pedigrees and history of foreign families, and as the English history of the Washington family, by several authors, has been confessedly suppositious, it is deemed important that a correct and authentic volume should be written that would become the standard for reference on the subject.

My correspondent in London, from whom I have obtained the material for the Washington pedigree in England, is a lineal descendant of the progenitor in England, and has been engaged over thirty years in gathering evidence. He thus writes: "If I had not taken upon myself the great labor of examining those inestimable records, the 'Common Pleas Rolls,' the truth of that great man's lineage would not have been revealed. They are of immense value, and I hope you will make them known to your countrymen by the publication of the Washington History. The pedigree I now send I can establish by legal evidence."

The uncertainty hitherto existing in regard to the English progenitors of the Washington family, which has led to the numberless and fruitless controversies among the genealogists, will be entirely removed and cleared up by this volume. Beginning with Odin, the founder of Scandinavia, B. C. 70, the history is followed down through the royal line of Denmark in the thirty-two generations to "Thorfin, the Dane," nat. circa A. D. 1000, whose ancestors were of Schleswig, Denmark. He settled in Yorkshire, England, prior to the Norman Conquest. The descent is traced in Denmark and England, from father to son, down through the centuries, including branches in different shires, to John Washington, the great-grandfather of General George Washington, in twenty generations from Thorpin; with interesting personal matter regarding nearly 500 members of the family and their alliances in England and America.

The family of Washington derives its name from the village of Wassington, juxta Ravensworth (now called Wharleton), in the parish of Kirkby-Ravensworth, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. Originally Evervicscire—the Eboricure of the Romans, or Evereux—afterwards Ebor, at the time of the Conquest, and lastly Yorkshire.

The people of this part of the country were all of Scandinavian descent, and spoke the same language with the Normans themselves, which was the language of the ancient Angles. The Saxons never settled here, and were of a different race. The city of York having been long before that time especially a Danish city, and the chief city in all England.

With respect to the Anglo-Saxons, there were no Saxons in these parts, which was settled by the Angles, who spoke the same language as is spoken this day in these parts of Yorkshire; and all those Saxon inscriptions, about which so many wonders are made, is simply plain Yorkshire. The Angles were a branch of the Danes, who lived in Schleswig (a seaport town of Denmark), and came over to England, men, women, children, beasts, etc., and left that country desolate for 300 years, as is confirmed by the Saxon chronicles.

The 174 manors given to Earl Alan by the Conqueror, were only so many shadows. There were only about six manors really attached to the Earldom of Richmondshire; of all the others he was merely nominally the chief Lord; and each was held by an owner whose ancestors held for many generations before the Conquest.

There was never in Richmondshire above six families descended from Norman ancestors; and they acquired their lands by marrying heiresses.

The growing importance and value of such a work as this, is illustrated by the increasing interest in everything pertaining to General Washington, and it is, in fact, the only genealogy and family history of national importance in this country.

The Bible is a history of the earliest races of mankind; and a record of the Jewish lineage—religion, the science of immortality—genealogy cognate with both, inasmuch as it is a study embracing the present life, combined with departed generations, giving results of vast import in the future, and may, therefore, be considered next only in importance to religion and Bible history.

The songs with which the northern bards regaled the heroes at their "feasts of shells" were but versified chronicles of each ancestral line, symphonied by their stirring deeds.

Through the oak fire's uncertain flame, the chieftain saw descend the shadowy forms of his fathers; they came from the Halls of Odin, as the harper swept the strings, and deployed before their descendant, rejoicing in the sound of their praise. No parchment told his lineage to the warrior of those days, but the heroic names were branded each night upon his swelling heart by the burning numbers of the bards.

Thus did the northman chronicle his ancestry in those unlettered times. Afterward, when the oak fire was extinguished, the shell thrown by, and the night came no more with songs; when we reach the age of records we find this love of lineage availing itself of the new method of commemoration. This strong ancestral spirit of the northman may be traced, partly to the profound sentiment of perpetuity which formed the principal and noblest element of his character, and partly to the nature of the property to which he was linked by immemorial customs of the race.

The family history, or record, of the Sovereigns of the World before Christ, furnishes almost the only histories of the countries over which they reigned, as Egypt, Chaldea, Babylonia, Greece, etc. The Chinese annals, the most ancient known, were written with the most perfect exactness, and preserved with the greatest care; composed originally by order of the Emperors—each of whom, on his accession to the throne, commanded the acts of his predecessors to be written by some learned philosopher—so that the whole form one uniform continued series of the history of the ancient Chinese Empire, from the beginning of the monarchy (Fo Hi B. C. 2538), for some thousands of years. And thus was the history of China obtained and preserved more correctly, and for a longer period than that of any other nation in the world. Had not the Hebrew race cherished this love of kindred and lineage we should not have any Bible today, and to this feeling we owe our knowledge of the history of the most ancient kingdoms of the world and most of our modern history. The English registers have for upwards of a thousand years, been the protection and authority of many families; and the means of preserving large property interests.

Ancestry of Washington Family may be summarized as follows:

"He beareth Ermine, a cross raguledgules, by the names of Lawrence, a Lancashire."

WASHINGTON-LAWRENCE ANCESTRY

Sir Robert of Ashton Hall, Lancashire, England, from his Sovereign, Richard Coeur de Lion, received his arms:

"Argent, a cross raguly gules," A. D. 1191. The same was the coat of arms of the Lancashire branch generally. There were distinctions, as "He beareth Ermine, a cross ragules gules, by the name of Lawrence, of Lancashire."

"Raguled" is a term to represent the rough-hewn stems of a tree from which the branches have been rudely lopped.

The Gloucestershire and Buckinghamshire branches had the same arms the crest "A demi turbot," or "tail inverted and erect;" or again, "The tail (or hindmost half) of a chub (fish) inverted and erect."

Other crests were used by these families, as, "Two laurel branches vert, forming a chaplet."

Also, "A wolf's head, couped, ppr." The Lawrences of Ives Co., Buckingham, and of St. Ives Co., Huntingdon, had, "Argent, a cross raguly gules; on a chief of the second a lion pass, guard, or, "The crest," "a stag's head erased sa, platte attired or ducally gorgedor."

Five grandfathers and five grandmothers of the author of this book were the same as George Washington's, the first President of the United States.

Proceeding with the successive generations of ancestry, we have in order of time, the first—Sir Robert Lawrence, of Ashton Hall.

The Second Generation

Sir Robert, a son, and the immediate successor of the Knight of the Crusades, to the estate of Ashton Hall, married a daughter of James Trafford, Esq., of Lancashire; by whom he had a son and heir, James Lawrence.

The Third Generation

James, of Ashton Hall, married, in 1252, Matilda de Washington, daughter of John de Washington, an heiress. A son by this marriage, and the successor of James of Ashton Hall, was John Lawrence, said to have been living in the thirty-seventh year of Henry III.

Respecting the names of "Lawrence" and "Washington," it may be noted that Lawrence Washington, a brother of the first President of the United States, was one of the earliest proprietors of Mount Vernon.

The ancestral lineage of John Lawrence, of Watertown, Mass., was descended from an old and distinguished English family. As traced and determined, it originates in and derives from one, Robert Lawrence, of Lancashire, England, who attended his sovereign, Richard Coeur de Lion, to the war of the Crusades in the Holy Land, and so distinguished himself in the siege of Acre, that he was knighted "Sir Robert, of Ashton Hall," and obtained for his arms, "Argent, a cross raguly gules," A. D. 1191. These arms were also those of the Lancashire branch generally.

The line of ancestry of Sir Robert Lawrence to the grand children of the author of this book may be thus summarized:

1. Sir Robert, of Ashton Hall, Knight of the Crusades.

The Name

Of Lawrence, as a personal and family name, it is sufficient to say, as to the orthography, that it is now almost universally spelled and written Lawrence, and not Laurence or Lawrance, as formerly was the case.

The derivation of this name of men may be traced to the Latin word Laurus—Laurentius. Its signification has been thus given on the Town Records of Hingham, Mass., first page: "Christian names for men now most used with the signification, Lawrence—flourishing like a bay-tree."

Archbishop Lawrence

The first individual of this name who lived in England, yet ascertained, was Lawrence, the monk. Collier, in his Dictionary, has the name Laurentius. In Harris's "History of Kent," it is Lawrence. He came from Italy with Austin, who was sent to Britain for the propagation of Christianity in the island.

Upon the death of Austin, he succeeded him to the Archbishopric of Canterbury. He is said to have been both learned and pious; and, at his death, was buried in the Abbey of St. Austins, A. D. 916.

The Ancestral Lineage of John Lawrence, of Watertown, Mass.

The lineal ancestry of this stock of Lawrences in America, now found quite numerous in New England and other parts of the country, has been at length very satisfactorily ascertained. As traced and determined, it originates in and derives from one Robert Lawrence, of Lancashire, England; born probably as early as A. D. 1150, and the ancestor of the earliest families of the name in England. Attending his Sovereign, Richard Coeur de Lion, to the war of the Crusades in the Holy Land, he so distinguished himself in the siege of Acre, that he was knighted, "Sir Robert of Ashton Hall," and obtained for his arms, "Argent, a cross raguly gules," A. D. 1191.

(1) John Lawrence, progenitor of Isaac Lawrence, probably came from England in the company which came over with Governor Winthrop, in 1630. The place of his birth is not known; but as Governor Winthrop was from the county of Suffolk, it may be that Mr. Lawrence was from the same county.

The first account of him that can be relied upon as certain, is, that he was an inhabitant of Watertown, Mass., as early as 1635. The name of his wife was Elizabeth. Whether they were married in England or not, has not been ascertained. They had twelve children born at Watertown. He afterwards removed to Groton, Mass., at an early period of its settlement, his name being found in the records there in 1663. His wife died in Groton in 1663. He then married a widow—Susanna Batchelder, of Boston—the ceremony of which took place at Charlestown, November 2, 1664. By her he had two children. He died at Groton, July 11, 1667. He left children:

1. John, b. 14 d. 1 mo. 1635.
2. Nathaniel.
3. Joseph.
4. Jonathan, d. young.
5. Mary.
6. Peleg.
7. Enoch.
8. Samuel.
9. Isaac.
10. Elizabeth.
11. Jonathan.
12. Zachariah.
13. Abagail.
14. Susanna.

Second Generation

(2) Enoch Lawrence (7-7), born 5 d. 1 mo. 1648-9, was married March 6, 1676-7, to Ruth, the widow of John Shattuck. Her maiden name was Ruth Whitney. Her husband was drowned in crossing Charlestown ferry, September 14, 1675. He died September 28, 1744. He left children:

1. Nathaniel.
2. Daniel, b. Mar. 7, 1681.
3. Zachariah.
4. Jeremiah.

Third Generation

(3) Daniel Lawrence (16-2), (Daniel Lawrence, father of Isaac and Daniel, lived and died in Canaan about seventy years ago. It is supposed that at the time of his death, he was with a son, John, who has since died in Norfolk. Isaac gave the use of a farm to his half-brother John as compensation for taking care of their father). Married Sarah ——. He left children:

1. Daniel, b. Apr. 22, 1702.
2. Isaac, b. Feb. 25, 1704-5 (4).

The foregoing facts in relation to the ancestors of Isaac Lawrence, have been chiefly derived from Butler's "History of Groton," recently published, and which is a highly valuable work, giving an account of about thirty families of the name of Lawrence which have lived in Groton. See Vol. I, for fourth to twenty-sixth Generations.

Isaac Lawrence and His Descendants

Fourth Generation

(4) Isaac Lawrence (20-2). It has always been said by his descendants that he came from Plainfield, Conn., to Canaan; but as there are no records in Plainfield to show that he or any of his family were ever there, the following facts are produced in proof of the assertion.—Groton was a frontier town, and much exposed to Indian depredations. The suffering was so extreme that the inhabitants became discouraged, and many of them removed from the town. Several families went to Plainfield, Conn., and others contemplated going to the same place. Among the latter was Daniel Lawrence, Joseph Lawrence, uncle of Daniel, and Zachariah Lawrence, who was uncle or brother of Daniel. This took place in 1707, while Daniel, Jun., and Isaac, sons of Daniel, were young children. (Daniel Lawrence, Jun., was the grandfather of Mr. Isaac Fellows, on the maternal side. He was great-grandfather of Dea. Anson Lawrence and Nathaniel Lawrence.) As no record of them can be found in Groton after this event it may be taken as conclusive corroboration of the general belief on this point.

"Watertown, Mass., Gen.," by Bond, says on page 124—Capt. Isaac Lawrence—Isaac and his family removed to Hinesboro, Vt.; which is an error, he moved to Hinesburg, Vt.

While he and his family were on their way to Canaan with a team composed of a yoke of oxen and a horse, they left the last house in New Hartford, about twenty-five miles from the place of their destination. The greater part of this distance they were obliged to cut their way through a heavily timbered forest. For several days after their arrival the family took up their quarters under a large oak tree, and slept in their wagon. Near this tree, which was on the south side of the river, near where the saw mill now stands (1848) and a few rods east of the house where Mr. Silas Beckley now lives, he built the house that he first occupied. He also built the house on the north side of the river, long known as the Lawrence tavern stand, where he died in the year 1751.

There is in the Dunham family a loom which was made of the identical oak tree under which Isaac Lawrence and his family took up their temporary residence on their first arrival. He arrived on June 2, 1738, and was one of the first settlers of the town.

He married Lydia Hewitt, born Nov. 4, 1707, Stonington; married Dec. 19, 1727 Isaac Lawrence. On the doorstep of the Lawrence House, built 1751, and mentioned in Nathaniel Hawthorne's "American Note Book," are the names of their children. The date of his death was December 2, 1793. His wife died November 14, 1765. His children were:

1. Jonas, b. 1728; m. Tryphena Lawrence, of Littleton, Mass., who d. Jan. 21, 1795, at West Stockbridge (5).
2. Stephen, b. ——; d. in infancy.
3. Isaac, Jun., m. Mary Brown, Mar. 18, 1760 (6).

Immortal Sailor

The shortest and most desperate sea battle of the War of 1812, was fought off Boston Light, June 1, 1813. It was over in fifteen minutes. The "Chesapeake" struck her flag, but not before nearly all her officers were killed or wounded. Captain Lawrence had been but recently assigned to this boat. Mortally wounded, he said, "Tell the men to fire faster and not to give up the ship; fight her till she sinks." He was taken to Halifax a prisoner and died there, June 5.

(5) Isaac Lawrence, Jun. (23-3), married Mary Brown, March 18, 1760. He removed from Canaan to Vermont, near Onion River, about 65 years since (1848). He had, before he left Canaan, four or five sons, namely: Elijah, Samuel, Isaac and Henry. Also several daughters, one of whom was named Lydia. Elijah, Samuel and Isaac, removed from Vermont to lower Canada, 40 or 50 years ago (1848) where it is supposed their families now reside. Their children were:

1. Lydia, b. Sept. 2, 1761 (or 2).
2. Elijah, b. Oct. 17, 1763.
3. Samuel, b. Nov. 19, 1765.

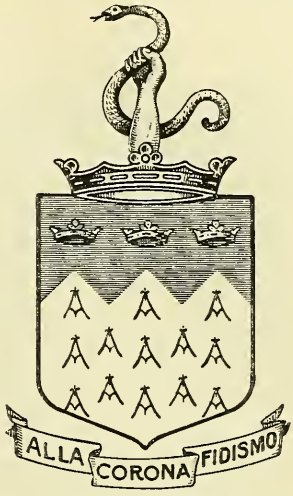
LEACH ANCESTRY

The Coat of Arms of the family has upon it three crowns, and the significance of these crowns is this: On one occasion, about the year 1358, John Leach had the English King, Edward III, and his two prisoners, King David of Scotland and King John of France, as his guests, and as a token of the incident, on leaving, King Edward handed to Leach three crowns. Afterwards, when the King granted him a large landed estate, three crowns were placed on his Arms.

The author has in her possession an old English deed of the Leach Family written in old English on sheepskin and given during the reign of Charles the II.



Lawrence Leach, with his wife, Elizabeth, and sons, John, Richard and Robert, came from England to Salem, Mass., in 1629, in the "fleet" with Rev. Francis Higginson. Lawrence Leach was descended from an ancient family in the west of England, and one of his ancestors was Dr. John Leach, surgeon to King Edward III.

Lawrence Leach held many important offices in the new colony; for years he was one of the seven chosen men who conducted the public affairs of Salem, and had among his colleagues Gov. John Endicott, William Hawthorne, Roger Conant, John Woodbury and John Balch. He was one of the Founders of Mass. Bay Colony.

As a historian has said of Lawrence Leach, so it may be said of many of his descendants. "The usefulness of his life gained respect for his memory. (See Journal of American Gen., 1928.)

Lawrence Leach lived on the southerly side of what is now Elliot Street, on Rial Side, about on the site of the barn of the late William Putnam, and he gave his farm to his son Richard about 1643. Nov. 15, 1693, the selectmen appointed a committee, consisting of John Putnam, Sr., Israel Porter and Samuel Gardner, to lay out a road from his house to the country road (now Conant Street), and the road is where Elliot Street now runs to Foster Street, and then through the latter street to Conant, The next day, the committee "laid out a highway twenty feet wide from the place where Capt. Richard Leach did live straight unto the Country road near unto the dwelling house of John Flint upon the northeast side of John Trask, Jr., his land. Said Trask hath liberty to hang a gate on that end of said way next the country road if he see cause." The house of John Flint stood on the other side of Conant Street, on the southerly corner of Burley Street. Timothy Norman[2] lived here in 1693. Besides John Robert and Giles herein mentioned, Clement lived in England. Lawrence Leach had the first iron foundry in America.

SECOND GENERATION

GILES, the founder of the Leach family of Bridgewater, Mass., was the youngest son of Lawrence and Elizabeth Leach, of Salem, Mass. He was born in 1632. The earliest record of him is under date of 20 February, 1656/7, on which day he married Anne Nokes, who at that time resided with the family of Deacon Samuel Bass, at Braintree, in the same colony. At this date, he was probably himself residing at Weymouth, where he participated in a division of lands in 1662 and 1663. At about the same time, he purchased one of the fifty-six proprietary rights in Bridgewater, to which town he removed, as did Dr. Nicholas Byram, and other of his fellow Weymouth townsmen. Bridgewater was the first inland town settled in Plymouth Colony, and as it was the home for some generations of a large number of the descendants of Giles Leach, it must ever be a place of interest to the entire race descended from him.

His position in the church. In the first mention of him in the Bridgewater records (1662) he is styled "Goodman," which fact suggests that he was then a prominent and esteemed member of the Bridgewater Church. Further evidence on this point is furnished by the action of the Town Meeting held 17 December, 1674, at which it was voted: "That Goodman Bayley should sit in the second seat (of the Church) and Lieut. Hayward and Goodman Alden, Jr. the third seat and that Goodman Hayward and Willias should sit with the Deacon, and that the Elder's wife and old Goodman Hayward's wife and Deacon's wife should sit in the foreseat by the pulpit and that Goodman Leach head man of the 4th seat, and that Nathaniel Hayward in his uncle Willis' his pew." The seats here mentioned were places of honour in the sanctuary, and when it is borne in mind that places of distinction were not assigned in those early days to the undeserving, or out of favoritism, it is apparent that Giles Leach ranked among the first inhabitants of the town. The town records also bear testimony to the fact that he took an active part in municipal affairs, and was entrusted with important public matters. The following entries appear on such records: "Jan. 8, 1668, it was voted at town meeting that Arthur Harris and Giles Leach be appointed a committee to 'see to the execution of and order that boards and bolts not to be carried out of Town from Commons.'" February, 1668, "It was agreed that the Town make choice of Elder Samuel Edson, Ensign Hayward, Giles Leach, and John Carey, to run out the westerly line (west 4 mile line) being the four miles from the centre and to be paid for their trouble." November 24, 1671, "The Town made choice of Giles Leach, Samuel Edson, Mark Lathrop and Thomas Snell to look to the swamps that none be found falling or drawing out any timber out of the swamp, on the penaltie of five shilling for every such default." On 10 May, 1681, Giles Leach and John Washburn were chosen surveyor of highways, and in 1683, he was chosen a member of a commission to "Divide the great cedar swamp on the southerly side of the town." On 27 May, 1689, he and Edward Mitchell were elected constables, a position of large importance in early New England, and on 20 May, 1690, he was again chosen surveyor of highways, his fellow surveyor being Joseph Alden, a son of John Alden, the noted Mayflower passenger. In 1695, he was chosen a member of the Grand Inquest of the Colony.

His residence. Mr. Leach resided in the immediate vicinity of Satucket Pond, the haunt of King Philip and of his tribe. He was on friendly terms with King Philip, and in 1680, he conveyed to an Indian named Robin, a "Twenty acre lot situate within the township of Bridgewater lying near unto that pond called Satucket pond and bounded on the one side by ye lands of John Washburn & by lands of Samuel Lombards on ye other side." By virtue of his proprietary right in Bridgewater, he became a large land holder. His possessions in 1705 consisted of the following tracts, which were surveyed to him that year: "Upland and meadow in Town of Bridgewater—1st, 11 acres upland s. side Town River, where he now liveth; 6 acres of it being a garden plot, which six acres butt on said river, & is bounded by the lands of John Ames to the West, & Samuel Edson's to the East.

"5 acres of upland on same side of river, butting on land of Samuel Edson and Samuel Wadsworth.

"20 acres, lot s. side river bounded by land of Wm. Snow to the south, & Thomas Gannetts to the North W.

"50 acres on Taunton road, adj. Samuel Edson, Sr. on S. E. & Thomas Gennetts, N. W.

"Meadow land adjoining John Carey, Jr. Meadow land adjoining Elder Brett & Samuel Edson, Sr. Meadow land adjoining Thomas Gennett & Frances Carey.

"Fifty acres on Southern side of Nunketnuct Pond.

"10 acres at Cutting Cove river, adj. Elihu Bretts.

"8¼ acres at head of his 50 acres lot on Taunton road, lying upon head butts house to the highway that is at the head of Goodman Ames.

"20 acres at Indian Field, & Bounded at the upper corner next to John Aldrich's house by land of Edward Fobes.

"L and ¾ acres at head of his land where his house stands bounded by Goodman Ames his range, and the head range is bounded by white oak sapling.

"10 acres for Giles Leach laid out Feb. 1701, which he sold to Henry Hersey for 10 years from the date of the deed, which 10 acres lies Easterly of Comfort's Saw Mill.

"82½ acres laid out on E. side of 50 acre lot which butts on the pond, bounded on easterly side by Nathaniel Packard's lane."

The date of the death of Giles Leach has not been ascertained, he was living in 1705, but probably died shortly after that year.

Horace[8] Brayton Leach (Lawrence[1], Giles[2], John[3], Solomon[4]. Ephraim[5], Tertius[6], Tertius Hawley[7]), was born at Sheldon, Vt., Sept. 25, 1826; the son of Tertius Hawley and Orisa Fanton Leach, He married Caroline Alexandria Phelps, daughter of Nash David and Elizabeth Hungerford Phelps of Bedford, Quebec, Sept. 8, 1863. They lived in Bakersfield on a 210 acre farm about ½ mile south of Bakersfield Village which he bought when 20 years old. All their children were born there excepting their youngest child, who was born in Fairfield, Vt., where he bought a large farm. The house was built by an ancestor in 1812 and while being raised cannon were heard, during the battle at Plattsburg, N. Y. (See foot note). They lived on this place and brought up their family. In 1905, he bought a place in East Highgate, Vt., where most of their family had settled and he entered the U. S. Mail Service and continued that work till his death May 6, 1919. His wife died two years later March 29, 1921. They were hard-working loyal parents. The children were all sent to their native town to finish their education at Brigham Academy. The old farm in Bakersfield is still owned by a relative.

Their children were:

1. Fayette Phelps Leach; 2. Elizabeth May; 3. Albertine Louisa; 4. Frankie Orisa; 5. Adelbert Horace.

Note—Thomas Northrup came from New Fairfield (Sherman), Conn., with the early settlers, and was one of the original proprietors of Fairfield, Vt. Fairfield was settled in 1787/88. The first settler was Joseph Wheeler, whose great-grandfather was William Almon Wheeler, who became Vice President of the United States in 1879. Chester A. Arthur, b. Oct. 5, 1830, at North Fairfield, was the twenty-first President of the United States. Mr. Northrup settled on an uncleared tract of land, cleared a large space, and built a log house. In 1800, he built a frame barn, the timbers which were matched and numbered for the builder's use. In 1812/14, he built a two and one-half story house, which contained eight huge fireplaces, a house (see illustration opposite page) which at that time was considered quite a mansion. Guns were heard from the Battle of Plattsburgh, when the frame of the building was being raised. There is an old legend connected with this house (see note on Banshees). At the time Horace Leach and his family took possession of this historical old home, the walls were frescoed with panels and border and most of the woodwork was painted green, excepting what was called the ghost room, which was painted black (will say nothing was seen or heard from the ghost while Mr. Leach and family remained there.) Mrs. Leach is a kinsman of Thomas Northrop, and Mr. Leach a kinsman of his wife, Joanna[5] Leach Northrop (Amos[4], James[3], James[2], Lawrence[1]).

Banshee, in the folk-lore of the Irish and Western Highlanders of Scotland, a supernatural creature in form of a woman who wails and shrieks before a death in a family. This notion has been woven into many folk-tales of rare pathos and beauty. The name is supposed to be from Gaelic "bansith," in Irish "ban sighe," Old Irish "ben side,"—woman fairy, Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia, Vol. II, pg. 441.

THE OLD HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Brayton Leach and youngest son, Adelbert. Taken after the other children, F. Phelps, Elizabeth, Albert and Frankie, had married and left "The Old Home."

Dear Grand Old House, you who through many years
Have witnessed birth and death, great joy and tears,
What dignity pervades your noble hall,
What graciousness your lovely rooms recall;
In world-wide matters you have taken part,
The family-life entwined about your heart;
What gallant souls have dwelt within your walls
So kind, so tender, toward the needs of all.

Just as our life will surely fade away,
So surely shall our spirit live alway;
Thus—dear Old House—your lights may flicker low
And may, perchance, eventually go;
But this is sure—your spirit will remain,
So staunch and brave, you have not lived in vain!

LISLE FAMILY

Duchal Castle

A few miles to the southwest of the city of Glasgow, in Scotland, lies the old barony of Lyle, or Duchal. In this barony stood Duchal Castle, the home for several centuries of the Lords Lyle. When the castle was built is not known, but in 1170, in a grant to the monks of Paisley, appears the signature of "Radulphus de Insula, Dominus de Duchal." A date so early as 1057 has had mention. From a book, "Much About Kilmalcolm," is taken an extract as follows:

"The great barony of Duchal, which for many ages was the chief property and place of residence of the ancient family of Lyle, was of great extent situated in the heart of the Parish on both sides of the Gryffe, but chiefly inland from it. The first mention of the family of Lyle (who are said to have been originally a West Highland family, and to derive their name from L'isle) occurs in the grant, etc."

In the same book appears:

"An eminent local antiquary holds that the castle (Duchal), surrounded on three sides by the stream, and the fourth by a fosse, which was crossed by a draw-bridge, is the Insula meant and that they took their name from the Island on which the fort was built."

In an old work in Edinburgh Library appears:

"The river Gryffe hath its rise in the moor and parish of Kilmalcolm, at the head of which stands the old castle and fort of Duchall, the ancient inheritance of the Barons Lyll of Douchalle, made Lords of Parliament by King James III, failed in the Reign of Queen Mary in the person of James, last Lord Lyle, who was dead about 1550."

The remains of Duchal Castle were described in 1792 "as very romantique in situation and strong in construction."

Says the Imperial Gazeteer of Scotland:

"The remains of the strong and romantic Duchal Castle stand upon the confluence of the Duchal with another rivulet. In 1710 a mansion was built about a mile east of this. The present (1848) mansion house was built in 1768. It stands on the right bank of the Gryffe and is well sheltered with wood."

At one time the castle was besieged. At this time the ruins are little distinguishable. In the nearby towns of Kilmalcolm and Kilbarchan are many of the Lyle name at this time. A small settlement was called Lylesland. Duchal is pronounced Duck-all.

The surname of L'isle, or Lyle, was first assumed by the proprietors of some of the Western Isles in the reign of Malcolm Canmore. They had also possessions in the County of Renfrew, where Duchal Castle was their principal seat.

From a letter written by William Robertson, the author of "Historical Tales and Legends of Ayrshire," the following extract is taken:

"The Lyles are a very old family. Old enough to have a wraith. That is, a duplicate of the head of the house who came to warn some relative that the master, or Lord, was about to die. The ballad, 'Lord Lyle,' is founded on Ayrshire traditions. As it is very old it may interest you, see pages 337 to 341." —"Historical Tales and Legends."

MEAD ANCESTRY

Maurs of Elmdonbury Hall, Dagworths and Monnteneys Oristhall Grange, Maur of Great Eastern Nortofts, etc. On the North wall of Marlborough Church, County Leicester is a monument of black marble with the Mead Coat of Arms with the names of the Mead family buried there.

Coat of Arms is thus described: Sa, a Chev. betw. three pelicans or Vulu gu. Explanation. Sa the color is sable, iee black. Chev. a chevron rep, as two rafters of a house joined together and descending in two pair of compasses to the extremities of the Shield. Or signifies gold and in engraving is represented by a small dot. Three Pelicans Vulure, wounding themselves according to the tradition that the pelican pecked its own breast to nourish its young. Crest: an Eagle displayed. Motto: Semper Paratus, Always Ready.

The very earliest traces of the Mead family are to be found in a history of the Norman people and their existing descendants in the British Dominion's of the U. S. of America, published by King & Co., London, England, 1874. From that Volume it appears that the name Mead is the English form of Norman "de Prato" and that it is amongst the oldest of the old, and noblest of the noble. In 1180-1195, there is to be found in the Ancient Norman Records, the names of William, Robert, Matilda, Roger and Reginald de Prato, and the names of Stephen and Peter de Prato of England, and Walter de Prato in Hertford, England. Henry de Prato in 1200, in Normandy, was King John's faithful Knight, and the custody of the Roman cattle was given his brother. The Norman "de Prato" was translated into the English Mead, Meade, Mede, Meads. The first of the Mead family came from Somersetshire into County Essex, in the Reign of King Henry VI, and settled at Elmdon. His son, Thomas Mead, Sergeant in Law, in 1567, and constituted one of the new Judges of the Kings Bench, Feb. 3, 1578. The Meads owned Wendon Lofts-Manors.

William Mead, was born in England about 1600; married about 1625, probably sailed from Lydd County Kent, England, in the Ship "Elizabeth," Captain Stagg, April, 1635, for the Massachusetts Bay Colony; first settled in Wethersfield, Conn.; removed to Stamford, Conn., in 1641, where he died about 1663. His wife died at Stamford, Sept. 18, 1657. There is record of three children, but there probably were four including a son, who died 1658.

William Penn in 1668 was committed to the Tower for preaching against the Established Church. While in confinement he composed a tract entitled, "No Cross, no Crown; a discourse showing the nature and discipline of the Holy Cross of Christ," which is the most esteemed of his writings. He was no sooner released than he recommenced preaching, and, being in consequence arrested, together with his companion, William Mead, was indicted at the Old Bailey Sessions for illegally holding forth; and although acquitted by the verdict of the jury, they were arbitrarily imprisoned in Newgate by order of the court. On obtaining his liberty, Penn visited Holland and Germany as a missionary, but he hastily returned to England, owing to the illness of his father, whom he found on his death-bed, and with whom he effected a reconciliation previous to the old gentleman's decease, which happened shortly after. Wm. Mead may have been a kinsman.

In 1681, King Charles II, in consideration of the services of Mr. Penn's father and several debts due to him from the crown at the period of his demise, granted to William Penn and his heirs the province lying on the west side of the river Delaware, in North America, which thence obtained the name of Pennyslvania. Mr. Penn immediately published a brief account of the province, proposing an easy purchase of land, and good terms of settlement for such as were inclined to remove thither. A great number of purchasers came forward and formed a company, called, "The Free Society of Traders in Pennsylvania." Shortly after, the enlightened and beneficent proprietor sailed to colonize his newly acquired territories, with a band of persecuted Quakers, who followed his fortune; and having entered into a treaty with the Indian natives, founded the city of Philadelphia.

MERRILL OR DEMERLE ANCESTRY

Arms—Argent, a bar azure between three peacocks' heads-proper. Crest—A peacock's, erased; proper.

"John and Nathaniel Merrill, brothers, came from Salisbury County, Wilts, England, to Ipswich, Mass., in 1633, and settled at Newbury in the same Colony among the first settlers of that town. They are descended from the Huguenot family of DeMerle, who escaped to England after the St. Bartholomey Day (August, 1572). This family of DeMerle belonged to the Auvergne nobility having had its ancestral estate near Place-de-Dombes, in that province. The emigrant made use of the arms we give which are different although the crest is the same from the Merrill Arms as given by the English Heraldry.

We have seen imprints of the Seal of one of the emigrant's grandsons affixed to a deed dated, 1726. The devices were exactly those we give." (From America Heraldica)

Nathaniel Merrill, of Newbury, born about 1610; died March 16, 1654; married Susannah Wilterton, died 1671/2, Newbury, Mass. Their children were: John[2], born 1635; Nathaniel[2], 1638; Abraham[2]; Susannah[2]; Daniel[2], Aug. 20, 1642; Abel[2], Feb. 20, 1644. The widow of Nathaniel[1], married a Mr. Jordan. She died Jan. 25, 1671/2. Nathaniel[1] Merrill paid his first taxes in the spring, 1635. He was a Charter Member of the town of Newbury.

It is to be noted that the five sons of Nathaniel had twenty-two sons, thus giving the family a vigorous start. They were in all parts of New England, at an early date.

John Merrill, when young, moved to Hartford, Conn., with Gregory Wilterton, his uncle, and when the latter died John inherited much of his estate. John Merrill married, Sept. 23, 1663, Sarah Watson, the daughter of the first John Watson (of Hartford, 1644; b. 1616; d. 1650; m. 1657, Margaret Smith, who d. 1683). John Merrill owned a lot in Hartford, in 1657, and when he died, July 18, 1712, all his eight sons were living.

MILLER ANCESTRY

Arms—Per fesse argent and azure, in chief two wolves' heads erased purpure, collared or; and in base, a lion passant of the last. Crest—A wolf's head erased, per pale, or and purpure, collared or. (Burke: "General Armory.")

As a surname, Miller is found in every county in England, in every State of the United States and in every part of the world, where the English tongue is spoken. The earliest records of medieval England contain numerous entries of the name. Several emmigrants left the mother country during the period of Colonial settlement and became founders in New England of the Miller families, which have been prominent in the life and development of the country for more than two hundred and seventy-five years. In the early Colonial records, in the annals of the later Commonwealths, in the muster rolls of all our wars, the name of Miller is found with great frequency. Men of the name have risen to prominence in the fields of industry, business and finance, in professional life and in the divine calling, and the family ranks today, among the most honorable of those which go to make up the aristocracy of New England. The form of spelling has varied from time to time as Millerd, Millard and Miller, the last of which has been borne by the family whose record is herein contained. Entries of the name Miller appear in the parish records of Sussex County, England, as early as the year 1300. In 1530, the family was recorded as large land owners.

1. John Miller, grandfather of the American immigrant and the first of the line to whom it has been possible to trace, was born in Sussex, England, in 1505–06. He was married and among his children was Robert, of further mention.

2. Robert Miller, son of John Miller, was born and lived during his entire life in Sussex County, England. His wife was Elizabeth, and they were the parents of several children, among whom was John, who became the progenitor of the Miller family herein contained, in America. Robert Miller was a prosperous citizen and an owner of extensive landed properties in County Sussex, England.

Experience Mitchell Ancestry

Experience Mitchell, born 1609; married a. 1628, Jane, daughter of Francis and Esther Cooke. He died 1689, aged 89. The two brothers, Experience and Thomas Mitchell, belonged to the Leyden pilgrimage and were probably born in Holland. And while Thomas remained in that country, Experience, then a youth of 14, came over to America in the ship "Ann" in 1623, in company with Mrs. Cooke and children. He seems to have been in the care of, or in some way connected with the Cooke family. He had a share in the first division of lots, in 1624, and also a share in the division of the live stock in 1627. He sold his land in Plymouth in 1631, to Samuel Eddy, but seems to have remained in town living at a place called Spring Hill. In 1650, he bought William Paybody's farm in Duxbury. He, in company with the two John Washburns and others, was an original proprietor in the Bridgewater purchase, but sold his share to Thomas Haywood. He lived in Duxbury at Blue Fish River. Late in life he came with his son Edward to live in Bridgewater at a place called Joppa. He made his will in 1684 and died in 1689. Children: Elizabeth, b. 1629; married John Washburn, 1645; Thomas; Mary; Edward; Sarah; Jacob; John and Hannah. The order of birth uncertain.

MOORE, LORD MOORE

(Marquis of Drogheda, in Ireland)

(Collins' "Peerage of England," Vol. 9, pages 1–4)

This noble family is of French extraction, from which kingdom they came very early after the Conquest into England; and acquiring a good estate in the County of Kent, made the manor of "Moore-Court" their residence, until they removed to "Moore-Place," in Benenden, in the said county, which they held for many generations.

Mr. John Philipot, Somerset Herald, who drew the pedigree of this family in 1612, tells us, that their surname was assumed from the lands which they originally possessed at More Place, in "Rolvinden and Benenden," in Kent. But he should have said More-Court, in Iviechurch, in the same county.

He begins with Thomas De La More, Esq., who held the manor of More-Place, whence the name was variously written De More, De La More, Atte-More, until the general relinquishing of such prepositions before names was practiced, when it determined also in this family, which was about the time of Henry VI.

This Thomas was living in the reign of Henry II, as is proved by a deed, wherein his grandson is styled John, the son of Henry, son of Thomas de More, whereby he purchased from John, the son of Thomas de Iden, a certain croft abutting upon his own lands; and this deed bears date at More-Place, on St. Vincent's day, 1280, 9 Edward I.

Henry de More, his son aforementioned, as is proved by several deeds, had four sons, viz.:

1. John, his heir.
2. Thomas (who sold his lands to Henry Fitz-Geffery Coote; from him descended Matthew More, who held certain lands within the hundred of Blackburne, next to Rolvinden, by knight's service, and paid his aid for them 20 King Edward III, when the Black Prince was made a Knight, as appears by the records of the aid enrolled in the Exchequer).
3. Stephen (who disposed of his estate at Maplesden, in Kent, to his brother, Thomas).
4. Charles.

JOHN DE MORE, of More-Place, the eldest son (in some deeds written Atte-More), died about 7 King Edward II. He married Matilda, daughter of William Falkinden, by whom he had two sons:

1. THOMAS.
2. SCOLAND, who had lands confirmed to him by his uncle Charles.

THOMAS, who succeeded, by Joan his wife (who survived him and purchased lands 10 Edward III), had

JOHN, his heir, who lived in the time of Edward III and died seized of his paternal inheritance, leaving two sons:

1. THOMAS. 2. JOHN.

THOMAS DE MORE, the elder son, marrying Catharine, the co-heiress of the family of Benenden, of Benenden (whereof John de Benenden held a Knight's fee there 20 Edward III and bore for his coat armour, Azure, a lobster, Or, which is now quartered by the Marquis of Drogheda): his family, on that match, transplanted themselves to Benenden, where they built a house called Moore-Place, and possessed a fair estate until John Moore, Esq., sold it to Mr. William Watts, in the first year of Queen Mary's reign. By her, who outlived him, he had two sons:

1. WILLIAM. 2. JOHN.

WILLIAM, the elder, married Catherine, daughter and heir to Anthony Aucher, Esq., and had issue:

2. THOMAS, his heir. 2. JOHN.

THOMAS, married Agnes, daughter and heir of Robert Austen and was father of William Moore, of Moore-Place, Esq., who married Margaret, daughter and co-heir of John Brenchley, Esq., Lord of the manor of Benenden, by his wife, Margaret, daughter and heir to Richard Golding, 21 Henry VI, and with her he got the inheritance of Moat-Landa and Bettenham, in Kent. He lies buried in the church of Benenden, in Kent, with his father-in-law; as appears by this inscription in the chancel window on the north side: "Orate pro animabus Johannis Brenchley et Willielmi More."

WALTER MOORE, of Benenden, Esq., was his son, and recovered certain lands in Smallhide and Tenterden, which had been entailed upon the issue of his grandfather, Thomas, by Agnes Austen his wife, niece to Robert Jane, in case her said uncle should die childless, and proved that, contrary to his entail, the said Robert had given those lands to his bastard son, which of right belonged to him, who was the son of William, son and heir to Thomas More and Agnes Austen, cousin and heir to the said Robert Jane. This Walter's will is recorded in the office of wills at Canterbury, and shows that he died in 1504, 19 Henry VII, leaving by Alice his wife (who brought into the family lands in the parishes of Brokeland, Fayerfield, Brensett, and Snave, in Kent), two sons:

1. THOMAS, of Benenden, his heir.

2. William, who m. Elizabeth, one of the three daus. and co-heir of William Betenham, Esq., by whom he had the ancient seat of Betenham, in the parish of Cranebrooke, where he resided, and was father of Nicholas Moore, of Wingmore, in Elham, who m. Clare, dau. of John Toke, of Goddington and Great-Chart, in Kent, by Cicely, dau. of Sir Thomas Kempe, Knt., and dying in 1556, at Wingmore (4 Queen Mary), (there is a memorial for him in Elham church, by which, according to Hasted, it appears that he d. at Wingmore, May 8, 1577, ae. fifty-nine—Hasted, III, 343), without issue, gave all his lands by will to the sons of his cousin, John Moore, of Pluckley.

Thomas Moore, Esq., of Benenden, eldest son of Walter, made his will in 1519, 11 Henry VIII, which is recorded in the prerogative court of Canterbury, and proves that he had three sons:

1. John.
2. Edward.
3. Thomas, whose posterity settled in Norfolk.

John, the eldest son, Alienated More-Courto to John Watts, 1st Queen Mary. He married Margaret, daughter, and at length heir to John Brent, Esq., widow of John Dering, of Surrenden, in Pluckley, by whom he had one daughter and six sons, the fourth being Sir Thomas, of Croghan, ancestor to the late Earl of Charleville.

Services

Thomas Moore—1645, was in the first emigration from Dorchester, Mass., to Windsor, Conn., and a lot was granted him in 1639 on what is now Broad Street. He died in 1645.

(Note 1) This Sir John Lawrence, about the year 1644, restored the inscription on Sir Thomas More's monument in Chelsea church; causing it to be recut on a handsome table of black marble. In "Faulkner," 1829, Vol. II, 132, he is incorrectly identified with Sir John Lawrence, Lord Mayor of London during the plague in 1665, whose coat of arms was differenced by a canton Ermines.

NASH ANCESTRY

Crest: Six Arms: Nash, 2: Nashe: Escutcheon, meeting under head.

The name Nash is of Saxon origin. On the 26th of July, 1637, from the ship Hector and another not named, a company landed at Boston, Mass. They were accompanied by the Rev. John Davenport as their Pastor, who probably came from Lancaster or Lancashire, England or from Ireland. He was at Boston, 1637, Guilford, 1639, New Haven. In this Company was Thomas Nash, son of Bindley Nash (Gen. Conn., V. 3), his wife, Margery Baker and their five children. On the 4th of June, 1639, sixty-three of the Company met and drew up a fundamental Government, Thomas Nash being the 3rd subscriber. He was a gunsmith.

The name Nash occurs early in the annals of New England. James Nash was in Weymouth, Mass., as early as 1628; married Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Seaborn Cotton, Minister of Salisbury. Gregory Nash and his wife of Charlestown, Mass., both died in 1630. Samuel Nash of Duxboro, in the Plymouth Colony, was taxed in 1632. William Nashe was made freeman in Boston in September, 1634. Edward Nash was in Stratford, Conn., in 1650, and in Norwalk, Conn., in 1652. Isaake Nash taxed in Dover, N. H., in 1657. John Nash, eldest son of Thomas Nash, was called Captain and Major John Nash. "In the military line he was gradually promoted to the highest office and continued to serve through life, though sometimes elected against his own inclination strongly expressed." He was chosen Lieutenant July 1, 1644, Sergeant of Artillery March, 1645, and again in 1648; Lieutenant, June 7, 1652, for the ordering of the military affairs of the town of New Haven.

(History of Fairfield, Ct., Vol. I, Schenck, "The Nash Family," p. 396), Thomas Nash the great grandfather of Capt. Thomas Nash of F., is supposed to have been the Thomas Nash, who, among the emigrants of Rev. John Davenport's company, landed at Boston, from the ship Hector on the 26 July 1637. It is possible that he was among the later emigrants of the Plymouth company, for, in a letter signed by five of the Rev. John Robinson's congregation, who remained behind at Leyden, Holland and addressed to their dear brethren in the Lord at Plymouth, New England, dated 30. Nov. 1628, is to be found the name Thomas Nash. (P. 251, History of New London, 1860, Capt. John Nash presiding Judge.) He may have paid a visit to Holland, and returned with Davenport's company or, he may have been among those who joined the New Haven company from the Plymouth Colony, during their sojourn in Massachusetts. He was accompanied to New England by his wife Margery, daughter of Nicholas Baker of Herfordshire, Eng. (eldest son of John Baker), and Mary Hodgetts ("who married Thomas Nash and went to New England") and five children, viz: Mary, John, Sarah, Joseph and Timothy, born 1626.

Thomas Nash was one of the members of the Rev. John Robinson's Congregation, at Leyden, Holland, part of whom were the first settlers at Plymouth, 1620, others came to New England soon afterward. On Nov. 30, 1625, five of those at Leyden addressed a letter to their brethren at Plymouth and signed it as brethren in the Lord. The names of the five were Francis Jessop, Thomas Nash, Thomas Blossom, Roger White, Richard Maisterton. Blossom came to Plymouth afterward. Thomas Nash returned to England and came over with the Davenport Colony.

March, 1638, the whole company sailed from Boston and in about a fortnight landed at Quinnipiac. In November, they purchased the land from Momauguin and his counsellors.

June 4, 1639, they met in Mr. Newman's barn and after solemn religious exercises drew up the fundamental agreement. Thomas Nash was the sixty-sixth signer.

Thomas Nashe signed the Guilford compact, but did not go to Guilford finally, although great inducements were offered him, as they needed a gunsmith, the vocation he had chosen.

Thomas Nash was considerably advanced in years for an emigrant, as his son John was old enough to receive the charge of freeman in April, 1642, and Thomas Nash, in his will made in 1657, expressly mentioned his old age. The following extract from the Record of a General Court held the 25 May, 1646, seems to imply aga:

"In regard of several occasions and works to be done against trayning day, Brother Nash is spared."

"On 1st of 7th moneth (Sept.) 1640, Mr. Lamberton and Thomas Nash were admitted members of the Gen. Court and received the fireemans charge." The following extract from the Records of a General Court held May 19, 1651, indicates his vocation:

"It is ordered that Thomas Nash shall keepe the Towne Muskitts in his hands, and look to them well, that they be always in good order, fitt for service and that the Towne allow him what is just for his care and pains."

Thomas Nash's home-lot was on the west side of State Street, about a third of the distance from Chapel to Elm Street, as shown on an old map of New Haven settlers.

Mr. Thomas Nash died May 12, 1658. Mrs. Margery Nash's death is not recorded, but must have been between Feb. 11, 1655, and Aug. 1, 1657.

Children of Thomas and Margery (Baker) Nash:

1. Mary, m. Roger Allen or Alling.
2. John, called Captain and Major John Nash.
3. Sarah, m. Robert Talmage.
4. Joseph, called Sergeant Joseph Nash of Hartford.
5. Timothy, b. in Leyden, Holland, 1626, called Lieut. Timothy Nash of Hadley, Mass.

February 11, 1660, a vote is recorded in Hartford, Conn., whereby liberty was given Timothy Nash to "come in as an inhabitant with us." Timothy Nash removed to Hadley, Mass., June 22, 1663, and had a hundred pound allotment. His home lot was on the west side of the main street in the village of Hadley. "He was a most useful and respectable citizen, was frequently employed in town affairs," held the office of Lieutenant in the militia, 1676 to 1679, Hadley, by which title he is still designated. And it should be remembered that a military title in those days was generally a sign of real merit. He represented the town of Hadley at the General Court of Massachusetts in 1690, 1691, 1695.

On the 4 March, 1654, the Free Mans Oath was administered to Timothy Nash and 28 others. He married Rebekah Stone. His marriage and birth of his two children were recorded in New Haven. The marriage is without date but must have been 1657. They lived with and cared for his father as appears by his fathers will. His wife Rebekah was the daughter of Rev. Samuel Stone of Hartford.

The history, legend and romance, written by Rev. Guy Roberts, sixth edition, 1925, Whitefield, N. H., claims that Crawford Notch was known by the Indians, though seldom used by them, because their superstitious fear of the mountains, and they have left no legends concerning it. Its discovery by white men, is credited by one Timothy Nash, who in 1771, while in pursuit of an eluding Moose, climbed a tree on Cherry Mountain, in hopes of espying him, but saw instead the depression in the Mountain Wall, which he later explored, following the Saco down through and notifying Governor Wentworth of his discovery. Realizing the value of such a route to the upper Connecticut Valley, and wishing to test it as a possible trade route, he offered Timothy the Grant of a tract of land (later known as the Nash and Sawyer location), extending from the Upper Gateway to beyond the present Fabyan House, if he would bring a horse through from Lancaster. Nash aided by one, Benjamin Sawyer, brought the horse through, though not without great difficulty, and received the promised reward.

"Lieut. Nash died in a good and respected old age, 13 March, 1699, N. S., in his 73d year." He had a very large estate in lands at his death as appears from his will and the subsequent agreement of his heirs. Mrs. Rebekah Nash died in March or April, 1709. She also left a will. The name Palmer, in ancient records De Palmer (from the branch of palm borne by those soldiers of the Cross who had distinguished themselves in the Holy War) was conferred upon an Ancestor of the Family, Hugh de Palmer, by King Richard I, who as a reward for having slain a Paynim Knight in single combat, and for capturing one of the Saracen Standards, gave him permission to blazon upon his shield "three crescents, argent, divided by chevron" the heraldic token of Valor, and, to wear for motto, "Par set fortuna labori." The fourth crescent upon the chevron (was added at a later period, to mark this branch of the family from the Palmers of Castleton, in Northamptonshire, who are descended from the same Ancestor.

Honorable Walter Palmer, born England, about 1585. 1651, purchased 12,000 acres bs. Nov. 10, 1661, married 2nd, Rebecca Short. He came to America, 1632, and was made a member of the Church at Roxbury, Sussex Co.

1. Walter Palmer, the progenitor of the family of his name, who first settled in Stonington, Conn., came to New England as early as 1628, with his brother, Abraham Palmer, a merchant of London, England, and nine associates. They went from Salem, Mass., through a pathless wilderness to a place called by the Indians Mishawam, where they found a man by the name of Thomas Walford, a smith. Here they remained until the next year, when they were joined by nearly one hundred people, who came with Thomas Graves, from Salem and laid the foundation of the town, which they named Charlestown, in honor of Charles I, June 24, 1629. It is claimed that Walter Palmer built the first dwelling house in Charlestown after it was organized as a township, on the two acres of land that were assigned and set to him by the authority of the new town. Walter Palmer's inclinations tended to stock raising and farming, but he soon found his land was inadequate to his business, notwithstanding which he continued to reside in Charlestown, until 1643. During his residence there, he purchased additional real estate, which he improved in his line of business as best he could. While thus engaged, he became acquainted with William Chesebrough, who lived at the time in Boston and Braintree, whose business pursuits were similar to those of Mr. Palmer, and after repeated interviews and consultations, they both decided to remove to the Plymouth Colony, and did so remove their families and with others, joined in the organization of the town of Rehoboth, as an independent township, which was continued as such until they should subject themselves to some other government. Walter Palmer was a prominent man when he lived in Massachusetts, and was admitted a freeman there, May 18, 1631, and held several local offices in that colony, and such was the estimation in which he was held by the first planters of Rehoboth and the confidence that they reposed in him, that his fellow townsmen elected him as their first representative to the General Court of Plymouth, and subsequently re-elected him to that office and also conferred upon him repeatedly the office of selectman and other local offices. His friend Chesebrough, not relishing the way and manner in which he was treated by the General Court of the Plymouth Colony, decided to look farther westward for a permanent place of abode.

(For further particulars see Stanton family). William Chesebrough, in pursuance of his arrangement with the General Court, invited his friend Walter Palmer, then living in Rehoboth, to come and join him here in the organization of another new township. While Mr. Palmer was considering this proposition, Thomas Miner, who had married his daughter Grace, and was then a resident of New London, was also invited to join the new settlement which he did, by obtaining a limited grant of land, of the town of New London. So 1653, marks the time when Walter Palmer came to Stonington to reside. He and his friend Chesebrough lived near each other, and both lie buried in the old Wequetequock burial place, with Thomas Stanton, the interpreter general of New England.

Descendants of James Patterson

Among the adherents of Charles II, in the Scottish army, defeated at the battle of Worcester by Oliver Cromwell, and transported to New England to be sold as slaves or servants for a term of years, is found the name of James Patterson. The prisoners sailed from London in the ship John and Sarah, about Nov. 11, 1651, and arrived at Charlestown, Mass., before May, 1652 (Register I, pp. 377–380; Brown's Hist. of the Highland Clans, Vol. II, p. 61).

In 1658, James Patterson, supposed to be the Scotch prisoner, received a grant of land from the town of Billerica, and between that date and 1685, he received sixteen different grants of land; and, in 1661, his name appears on the town records in a vote of the Proprietors of the township. He married March 29, 1662, Rebecca, daughter of Andrew and Jane Stevenson, of Cambridge. He was admitted freeman April 18, 1690. During Philip's War, Oct. 8, 1675, his house was appointed for garrison, and the garrison consisted of himself, John Baldwin, Edward and Thomas Farmer, Henry and John Jeffts and two soldiers. For services in the war his son James, with descendants of other soldiers, was rewarded by a grant of land in Narragansett No. 6 (now Templeton) (Reg. XVI, p. 144). He was also in the Canadian Expedition of 1690, and his son James, by virtue of his father's services, was a proprietor in the Sudbury, Canada, grant of 1741, located in Maine, and comprising the present towns of Jay and Canton (Reg. Vol. XXX, p. 192).

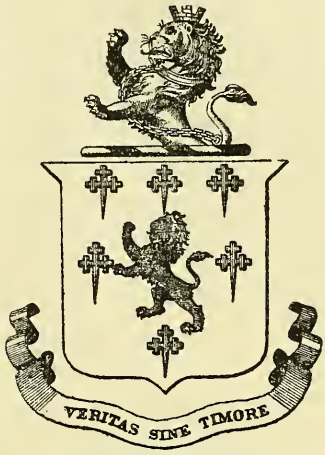
PHELPS ANCESTRY

Descended from the Guelph Family, to which Queen Victoria Belonged



The seat of the Phelps Family is still standing, occupied by Mr. Hooper. The family has eight various coats of arms. Their motto, "Truth without Fear." See "Doomsday Book No. 20," Cooper Institute, 1861: The American bearings of the family of Phelps are: Per pale or (gold) and argent (white) a wolf salient auzre (blue) with an oric of eight crosses-crosslets fitchie gule (red) crest, a wolf's head erased (torn off), azure colored or, the collar charged with a marble sable (black).

James C. Phelps, Milton, Wiltshire, writes at "The Herald's Office to inform us that two coats of arms have been granted the Phelps Family, since the time of William the Conqueror."

The interpretation of the arms is as follows: The parting, per pale, indicates that a fortification has been placed, by ancestors in the face of an enemy. The wolf signifies courage and endurance, the crosses-crosslets fitchie, being emblems of the Second Crusade or Holy War, shows that in that campaign that arms were earned or acquired. The martle is the crest in the martin or swallows of Palestine, and indicates that an ancestor has been upon a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, in addition to having been in the Second Crusade.

The Phelps Family can be traced back to the middle of the twelfth century. They were a family of landed estates in Tewksbury, Worcestershire, England, and the name appears as Phylltpes and as Guelps, and is supposed to be of Italian origin. The superfluous letters were dropped during the reign of Edward IV, but the name was always pronounced Phelps. The surname Phelps is a variation of the spelling of Phillips, the latter originally meaning son of Philip. The spelling of the name has been varied, and a number of different family names are traced to the same origin. One family of Phelps claims to be descended from the Guelph Family, of Germany, to which Queen Victoria belonged. Some branches of the American family of Phelps are descended from the ancient Phelps Family of Tewksbury, Gloucestershire, England. The coat of arms is described thus: Sable Lion chained and rampant. Various branches of the family in England bear coat of arms. (See "Genealogy Connecticut," Vol. III, pages 1569, 1699.)

The family has been of a number of centuries in the County of Stafford, England. Reference is made in our English correspondence to John Phelps, clerk of the Court that convicted Charles I. John Phelps who dwelt upon the Nether Thyme in England, the son of Francis Phelps, who died in the reign of Edward IV. John Phelps became private secretary to Oliver Cromwell. The Phelps Family opposed the High Church and Prerogative Party of Stafford and Bishopland. The original name of Phelps (Welf) Guelphs was a name assumed in Germany when the family came from the north of Italy. It is claimed that from the same stock with the House of Hanover, of whom Queen Victoria is a representative. The queen, it is well known, derives her lineage from the "Guelphs," of Germany, from the old Welfs, of Lombardy, Padua. The history of the Gulphs you will have no difficulty in tracing. The name was anciently spelled Phyllyppes, says Harper's "Pictoreal History of England," but has always been pronounced "Phelps." Although in the time of Edward IV the superfluous letters were dropped. First Phelps in the English form of "Guelphs;" 2nd, that Guelphs, German word of "Welf;" 3rd, that the Welf Family was princely in rank, the Guelphs being the leaders of the Papal Party in the famous conflict of the Pope with the German Princes. The parties Guelphs and Ghibellories, being like the Tories and Whigs in England. The present Royal House of England (Hanover), was one branch of Queen Victoria's ancestry.

"Our Ancestors, a Gallant Christian Race, Patrons of every Virtue, every Grace."

Beside the old Tewksbury Abbey Church, Gloucestershire, England, founded by the Mexican Princess, Dukes Odo, and Dodo, two noble Saxon brothers, who flourished at the commencement of the eighth century. In the burying ground beneath the Sacred Shadow, lie interred some of our ancestors, others sweetly sleep in the cemetery of Dursley, in Gloucestershire. Others are interred in Purlock, Somersetshire, and Staffordshire.

Near Towbury Hill, in the parish near Tewksbury, there is a large encampment which Leland supposes was the site of the residence of the Mexican Princess, though there is no doubt of its having been a Roman Station. The old Phelps tombstones are at the northwest wall of the churchyard and the Vicarage Wall beneath the Sacred Shadows of Tewksbury Abbey Church.

First Generation in America

William[2] Phelps (William, James, Richard), of Windsor, Conn., born in England; baptized Tewksbury Abbey Church, August 19, 1599. He married in England, first, Elizabeth ——; second, Mary Dover at Polluck, England; she died November 22, 1611. He resided for a time in Tewksbury, where his first child, Richard was born in 1619, and baptized in Tewksbury Abbey Church, December 26, 1619.

Soon after the birth of his first child (and the death of his father) he probably removed to one of the southern counties, either Somerset or Dorsetshire, as after the birth of his first child we find no reference to him in Tewksbury, nor do I find any record of the birth of his five other children. He was the mayor of Tewksbury.

Mr. Phelps, his wife, six children, and brother George, then unmarried, emigrated to New England in the ship Mary and John, of four hundred tons burden, commanded by Captain Squeb, with one hundred and forty passengers. This company had been organized into a church and selected their ministers the day before sailing, as previously stated.

They sailed from Plymouth, England, March 29, 1630, arriving and landing in Nantasket (now Hull), Mass., May 30, 1630. This company settled in Dorchester, Mass., the first settlers and founders of that place. Dorchester claims the honor of being the first town in the Massachusetts Colony to organize a town government. Mr. Phelps took an active position in town matters, and during the first six months was made a freeman. In 1634, he was a representative to the General Court. May 14, 1634, he was one of a committee of four to view the ground at Mount Wollaston for the enlargement of Boston, and drew a plan then and reported at the next General Court. March 4, 1634, Mr. Phelps and Ensign Gibbs were appointed by the General Court to go with a committee of three to arrange the bounds between Boston and Dorchester, and explain what each town wants. May 5, 1635, he was a member of the General Court from Dorchester, held in Newton (now Charlestown). ("N. S. F. P. A.," page 20, No. 1526—Served as juryman in the first trial in New England.) He was a member of the first court ever held in Connecticut, 1636.

In the year 1635, Mr. Phelps' wife died. In the fall of 1635, the Rev. Mr. Warham, with sixty of his church in Dorchester, removed to the settling of Windsor, Conn. Mr. William Phelps and his family, and brother George, accompanied this expedition, though it is probable that Mr. Phelps did not go down to Windsor till the following spring. (See Records in Hartford, Conn., Adjutant General's Office.) William Phelps, q.v., was appointed on committee to prepare for war against the Pequots. He was a member of the first Court that existed in the Colony (New Memorial History of Hatfield, p. 103.) (King Philip's War, p. 113), Oct. 19. 1676, Capt. Wheeler's Co.—"Saphire Boat" 40 guns, Capt. Sir William Phelps (Original Journal, under Capt. Joseph Gardner.)

A beautiful marble tablet placed in his honor in the upper entrance hall of the Library of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, 9 Ashburton Pl., Boston.

In Gen. Gleanings in Eng., pp. 275-6, I find the following: "Elizabeth Phelps, married Thomas Howard, Viscount, Bindon, 3rd son of Thomas, Duke of York, Wilts, Dec. 14, 1643. Children-8 XIV Henry married Elizabeth Phelps, Wentham Co. Suffolk." This Elizabeth may have been first wife of William Phelps.

Children by his wife Elizabeth:

1. Richard, bapt. Tewksbury Abbey Church, Dec. 26, 1619. He sailed for the Barbadoes, as previously stated, with Captain Burch and Gilbert Grimes; then unm.; all I know of him.

She died in Northampton, Mass., Dec. 6, 1712, and her will was proved there. Nathaniel Phelps resided on the Orton place, opposite his father's homestead, which he purchased of his brother, Samuel. About 1656/57, he removed to Northampton and was one of the first settlers there. He was one of the first Deacons of the Northampton Church and occupied his homestead forty-three years. The farm was occupied by his descendants until 1835. It comprised the land which was formerly the site of Miss Margaret Dwight's School, and later the College Institute of J. J. Dudley and which is now "Shady Lawn." The old house stood a few rods north of the present house. On Feb. 8, 1679, he and his sons, Nathaniel, Jr., and William, took the oath of Allegiance before Major Pyncheon, and May 11, 1681, he was admitted a freeman. PLATT ANCESTRY

PLATT—The surname Platt has been early found in many countries, the word meaning an open, level piece of land. In Norman French, the name was spelled Pradt, then Pratt; in German, Platz. Coats-of-arms were granted to half a dozen different branches of the family in England as early as the reign of Elizabeth, and some as early as 1326. Senator Orville Hitchcock Platt was descended through both father and mother, from long lines of New England farmers, who for many generations had held prominent stations in the communities in which they lived. They held offices in church and town affairs, were landowners, deacons, tithingmen, and captains of militia. One ancestor was imprisoned by Governor Andros in 1681, for daring to attend a meeting of delegates "to devise means to obtain a redress of grievances under his arbitrary rule." Another was among those who marched to Fishkill in the Burgoyne campaign, of October, 1777, to reinforce General Putnam. It was a sturdy, loyal, patriotic, efficient New England stock. ("History of the Colony of New Haven," by Atwater, p. 650. Dea. Richard Platt, 1603-1684, was the son of John Platt of Bovington, Eng.

1. Deacon Richard Platt, emigrant ancestor, is believed to be the Richard who was baptized Sept. 28, 1603, son of Joseph, in the parish of Bovington, Hertfordshire, England. He settled as early as 1638, at New Haven, Conn., and was one of a party of sixty-one who formed a church settlement at Milford, in the same colony, being the first settlers in that place, Nov. 29, 1639, and at the time having four in his family. He was chosen deacon at Milford in 1669, and bequeathed a Bible to each of his nineteen grandsons. His will is dated Jan. 24, 1683/4. In August, 1889, a memorial stone, suitably inscribed, was placed in the new bridge over the Mapawaug. (D. A. C., p. 91, Deacon Platt a Founder and Deacon of Milford, Conn.) (Gen. Conn., Vol. II).

Children:

1. Mary, married (first), May 1, 1651, Luke Atkinson; (second) January 3, 1667, Thomas Wetherell. 2. John, settled in Norwalk; married Hannah Clark. 3. Isaac, see forward. 4. Sarah. 5. REYNOLDS ANCESTRY

John Reynolds of London, No. 68, Church of Leydon

John Reynolds, born in England, 1612; married Sarah ——, born in England, 1614. They came to America from the Port of Ipswich on Ship "Elizabeth" early in 1633, to the New England colony in Massachusetts. They first settled at Watertown, where his first child, a daughter, was born, in 1634, and named in honor of Ship that brought them safely over. They took out papers as free-men in 1635. Joined the church, as all citizens at that time had to be registered on the church records. Some Historians have thought and asserted that John Reynolds had brothers here, one Robert Reynolds, of Boston, lived at Watertown a short time and they associated together in church capacity. Robert Reynolds was authorized by the Boston Church to organize and establish a church at Weathersfield, Conn. John Reynolds and family, with others from Watertown, Mass., moved in 1635, to Weathersfield, Conn., and joined and helped build up the Church (colony). Robert Reynolds moved back to Boston early in 1636. John Reynolds lived at Weathersfield, Conn., some five years, where his two sons were born. He moved to Stamford, Conn., in 1641, where his wife died, Aug. 21, 1657. He died in Stamford in 1660.

His first act of note was to get the Territory of land back to the jurisdiction of the New Haven Colony, that Capt. Daniel Patrick and Robert Feaks had signed over in 1642, to the jurisdiction of the Dutch at New Amsterdam. On Oct. 6, 1656, Jonathan Reynolds, with eleven other freeholders of Greenwich, Conn., declared their submission and loyalty to the New Haven Colony by article of agreement. In 1665, the Freeholders, which included Jonathan and John Reynolds, made rules and regulations by which to dispose of lands without fence and permit settlers to come amongst them, at Annual town meeting held 1669. He was selected, with four other Freeholders, to survey and lay out land of Horseneck into four-acre lots for settlement. In 1672, the Freeholders of Greenwich had grown to twenty-seven. Jonathan Reynolds' health was poor and he was compelled to retire from public service. He died 1673, and his brother John, was selected to take his place. Nathaniel Reynolds

REYNOLDS—Robert and John Reynolds, were both very early settlers of Watertown. Robert was adm. freeman, Sept. 3, 1634, and was dismissed from Wat. Church, May, 1635, in order, with others, to organize a church on the Connecticut River. John was adm. freeman May 6, 1635, and about the same time (in 1635), he was appointed on a committee in Wat. for dividing to every man, his share of meadow and upland. There is no further notice of either of them in the town records. They probably both belonged to the colony that first went from Watertown to Wethersfield. John Reynolds was one of the original purchasers of Stamford, and a John Reynolds was a freeman and "townsman" of Norwich, in 1669. As the name of Robert Reynolds does not occur, after a very early date, in the Conn. Col. Records, it is conjectured that he returned to the Bay Colony; that two of his daughters, Ruth (Whitney) and Mary (Sanger) settled in Watertown, where he had first settled, and that he died in Boston, in 1659. (See his Will, in Geneal. Reg., lx., p. 137.)

READ ANCESTRY

Arms—Gules, a saltire between four garbs or.

Crest—On the stump of an oak-tree, a falcon rising proper belled and jessed or.

Motto—Cedant arma togae.

The family name, Read, found in a variety of spellings, such as Reade, Reed and Reid, originated as a personal name to designate a person of red or ruddy complexion. It is found not only in England, where it has been common since surnames first came into use, but also in Scotland and various countries on the Continent. (Bardsley: "Dictionary of English and Welsh Surnames.") The history of the Read family of Kent, England, dates back to 1139, to Brianus de Rede, or Morpeth, on the Ensback River in the North of England. In this country since the date of the family's landing, the name has been upheld and cherished, many of those bearing it having been awarded distinction and honor.

In his "Ancestry of Priscilla Baker," 1870, the late William Sumner Appleton, Esq., devoted a chapter to the Reade family of Wickford, Co. Essex, England, four members of which emigrated to America. They were a brother and three sisters: Col. Thomas Reade, who was of Salem, Mass., in 1634, and was later an officer in Cromwell's army; Mrs. Margaret (Reade) Lake of New London, Conn., and Ipswich, Mass.; Mrs. Martha (Reade) (Eppes) Symonds, second wife of Deputy Governor Samuel Symonds of Ipswich; and Mrs. Elizabeth (Reade) Winthrop, wife of John Winthrop, Jr., Governor of Connecticut.

Mr. Appleton examined the parish registers of Wickford and found many items therein relating to Edmund and Elizabeth (Cooke) Reade, the parents of the four emigrants; but between the years 1595 and 1604 no entries pertaining to this family appeared. This lack has now been explained through a search, made for another purpose, in the registers of the parish of North Benfleet, Co. Essex, now deposited in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. North Benfleet lies a few miles southeast from Wickford, and at the period in question the Lord of the principal manor was Edmund Church, who had inherited it from his Tyrrell ancestors. Church was twice mentioned as "brother" in the will of William Reade of Wickford (1603), the father of Edmund Reade; and it was doubtless as Church's tenant at the manor house, which is still standing and is now the rectory, that Edmund Reade resided in North Benfleet.

The first Reade entry in the registers of North Benfleet is given here verbatim, in the Latin employed by the rector, but the entries that follow have been translated and condensed.

(1) John Read, the first of this branch of the family to come to America, is thought to have been a son of William and Lucy (Heneage) Reade. He was born probably at Maidstone, County Kent, near London, England, in 1598, and sailed from London for America on April 1, 1630, with the great fleet of eleven ships, which accompanied Governor John Winthrop, with about seven hundred persons, arriving at Salem, Massachusetts, June 22, 1630. He was of Weymouth, Massachusetts, in 1637, of Dorchester in 1638, and from there removed to that part of Braintree which is now Quincy, where he was a freeman, May 13, 1640.

In the spring of 1643/44, he joined the company of the Reverend Samuel Newman, of Weymouth, in founding a settlement at Seekonk, which Indian name he replaced with the Scripture town name, Rehoboth; and the name of John Read is the third in the list of estates in 1643; according to which, the allotments of land were distributed. His estate was valued at lbs. 300, a large property for those times. He served as constable, and lived at the Rim, now in the town of Seekonk, where he was proprietor of an inn, and a leading man of the town. He died Sept. 7, 1685, at the age of eighty-seven years, and was buried in the old Seekonk Burying Ground, the inscription on his gravestone, "J. R. aet eighty-seven, D. S. 1685." He and his wife, Sarah, were the parents of thirteen children.

Elias Read and His Descendants

2. Elias, who is supposed to be a son of William Reade of Maidstone, in the county of Kent, professor of divinity, and his wife Lucy Heneage, was born in 1595; and the first that is known of him is in Woburn, Mass. He had sons William and Philip, and Thomas, who were born in England.

3. Thomas, son of Elias, settled in Sudbury; and died July 25, 1659, leaving a son Thomas.

4. Thomas, son of Thomas of Sudbury, married Mary Bigelow. Children:—Thomas, Matthew, Benjamin, Edmond. He was made freeman in 1656. He died in 1701; his wife died in 1707.

RIGBY ANCESTRY

In the beginning of the year 1603, there was not one European family on the whole coast of America, from Florida to Greenland. There had been made, previous to this time, three attempts to settle Virginia, and one in 1602, by Gosnold, to plant a colony on the southern shores of Massachusetts; all of which failed. The whole coast of North America was now open to European enterprise, and although discouragements had hitherto attended the efforts of commercial speculation, yet it was not disheartened. In 1603, new exertions were made, which resulted in bringing the coast of Maine more into notice, and preparing the way for future settlement upon it. On the eighth of November, of that year, Henry IV of France, granted a charter of Acadia and the neighboring country to Du Mont, extending from forty to forty-six degrees of north latitude. Du Mont, having received a commission as Lieutenant-general of France, the next year fitted out an expedition in company with Champlain and others, with which he sailed along the coast of Maine, formed a temporary settlement at the mouth of the river St. Croix, where his company spent one winter; and then established a colony on the other side of the bay of Fundy, at a place which they named Port Royal and which is now called Annapolis (p. 25).

In the spring of 1614, an expedition was fitted out under command of Captain John Smith, "to take whales," "and also to make trials of a mine of gold and copper; if those failed, fish and furs were then their refuge." Smith adds (See Smith's New England, p. 192): "We found this whale-fishing a costly conclusion; we saw many and spent much time in chasing them, but could not kill any; they being a kind of Jubartes and not the whale that yields fins and oil as we expected." They were also disappointed in their mines, and he thinks the representation was rather a device of the master to get a voyage, "than any knowledge he had of any such matter." Leaving his vessels, Smith, with eight men in a boat, ranged the whole coast from Penobscot to Cape Cod; within which bounds, he says, he saw at least forty several habitations upon the sea-coast, the principal of which was Penobscot. He adds, "Westward of 'Kennebeke' is the country of 'Casco' bay, and Aucocisco may be supposed to express the English sound of the aboriginal name of that extensive and beautiful bay." Smith returned to England, where he arrived the 5th of August, and immediately prepared a map of the country which he had visited; and gave it the name of "New England."

The next year (1615), Captain Smith was again employed by Sir F. Gorges and others to visit New England, with a view to beginning a settlement there: for this purpose he was furnished with two ships, and a company of sixteen men to leave in the country. But he was driven back to port by a violent storm which carried away his masts. On the second attempt, he was captured by the French. It does not appear that this celebrated adventurer ever came to America after 1614: he published his description of New England in London, in 1616, and died in that city, 1631.

Every year after this, vessels were sent to the coast to trade with the natives and to fish; many of which made profitable voyages. In 1615, Sir Richard Hawkins sailed from England with a commission from the council of Plymouth to do what service he could for them at New England; but on arriving here, he found a destructive war prevailing among the natives, and he passed along the coast to Virginia. In 1616, four ships from Plymouth, and two from London, made successful voyages, and obtained full cargoes of fish, which they carried to England and Spain. Sir F. Gorges also sent out a ship under the charge of Richard Vines, who afterward became conspicuous in the early history of Maine; he passed the winter at the mouth of Saco River; from which circumstance, I suppose, was derived the name of Winter Harbor, which it still bears.

The patent upon the east side of the river was given to Thomas Lewis and Richard Bonighton, and recites that it was made "in consideration that said Thomas Lewis, Gent., hath already been at the charge to transport himself and others to take a view of New England for the bettering his experience in the advancing of a plantation, and doth now wholly intend by God's assistance, with his associates to plant there," etc. (The original patent was accidently found by Mr. Folsom, when he was collecting materials for his history of Saco, and has been deposited by him in the Archives of the Maine Historical Society.) The patentees undertook to transport fifty persons there in seven years at their own expense. Livery of seisin was given June 28, 1631, and the proprietors in person successfully prosecuted the interests of their patent. Such were the beginnings of the towns of Biddeford, and Saco and the lands continue to be held under those patents at this day.

In 1630, the colony of Plymouth procured a new charter from the council for a tract of land fifteen miles on each side of Kennebec river, extending as far up as Cobbisecontee. Under this grant, they carried on a trade with the natives upon the river for a number of years, and in 1660 sold the title for four hundred pounds sterling, to Tyng, Brattle, Boies and Winslow. (pp. 30, 1, 2.)

The first company arrived at Winter Harbor in the summer of 1631, in the ship Plough, but not being satisfied with the appearance of the country and their future prospects, the principal part of them continued on to Boston and Watertown, where they were soon broken up and scattered. No further effective measures seem to have been taken for the occupation of this grant until 1643, when it fell into the hands of Alexander Rigby, under whom a government was established. (p. 45.)

The settlements which commenced at Plymouth in 1620 now dotted the whole coast from Cape Cod to the Bay of Fundy. (p. 50.)

The foregoing records present us the names of two persons who then appear for the first time in our history, Thomas Wise and George Lewis. When they came here or where from, we cannot ascertain. George Lewis, of Scituate, in Massachusetts, had a son George, who is conjectured to be the person here mentioned. Lewis, previous to 1640, had received a grant of fifty acres of land at Back Cove, from Cleeves and Tucker, upon which he lived; in 1657, he received an additional grant of fifty acres, and his son John one of one hundred acres adjoining. (p. 75.)

The patent granted by James I to the "council for the affairs of New England," Nov. 3, 1620, was the civil basis of the subsequent patents which divided the country. This patent contained powers of government to the council and their successors; but it soon became a question whether the council could, with a conveyance of any portion of territory within their limits, transfer a right of government. This point, it is believed, was never directly decided, although it may be inferred from the practice of some of the patentees, that the general impression was adverse to this power.

The council of Plymouth continued their operations until June 7, 1635, when they surrendered their charter to the king.

During their existence as a corporation, a period of fourteen years and seven months, they were not inactive. In 1621, they relinquished a large proportion of their patent in favor of Sir Wm. Alexander, and assented to a conveyance by the king to him of all the territory lying east of the river St. Croix and south of the St. Lawrence, embracing the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The other grants made by the council within the present limits of Maine, were as follows:

1. 1622, Aug. 10. To Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Capt. John Mason, from Merrimac to the Kennebec River.
2. 1626, Nov. 6. To the Plymouth adventurers a tract on Kennebec river; which was enlarged in 1628.

3. 1630, Jan. 13. To Wm. Bradford and his associates, fifteen miles on each side of the Kennebec river, extending up to Cobbisecontee; this grant Bradford transferred to the Plymouth adventurers.
4. 1630, Feb. 12. To John Oldham and Richard Vines, four miles by eight miles, on the west side of Saco River at the mouth.
5. 1630, Feb. 12. To Thomas Lewis and Richard Bonighton, four miles by eight, on the east side of Saco River at the mouth.
6. 1630, March 13. To John Beauchamp and Thomas Leverett, ten leagues square on the west side of Penobscot river, called the Lincoln or Waldo patent.

Early in 1643, we find him in England, and on the seventh of April of that year, Col. Alexander Rigby, an ardent republican, and a member of parliament, purchased of the surviving proprietors of the province of Ligonia, or a part of them, a conveyance of their charter. We are inclined to the opinion that George Cleeves was active in this measure, because he was appointed by Rigby, his first deputy for the government of the province, and because he succeeded in obtaining a confirmation from him of the valuable grant in Falmouth, originally made to him by Gorges in 1637.

Cleeves arrived at Boston, in 1643, with his commission from Rigby, to act as his deputy in the government of Ligonia. (p. 90.)

This decision arrived soon after and declared Rigby to be the "rightful owner and proprietor of the province of Ligonia, by virtue of conveyances, whereby the planting, ruling, ordering and governing the said province is settled." The commissioners further ordered that all the inhabitants of said province should yield obedience to Rigby; and the government of Massachusetts was required in case of resistance, to render support to his authority. (p. 96.) (See Winthrop Vol. II, p. 320.)

He immediately commenced making grants in his newly acquired territory; as early as May, 1647, he granted to Richard Moore four hundred acres in Cape Porpus, and in September of the same year, he conveyed to John Bush a tract "in the village of Cape Porpus," He also made grants in Scarborough and Falmouth, all of them as the agent of Col. Alexander Rigby, president and proprietor of the province of Ligonia. (Rigby was a sergeant at law, and one of the Barons of the Exchequer in the kingdom of England; Cleeves was styled deputy-president.) (In January, 1656, Edward Rigby petitioned the Lord-Protector to aid in the settlement of his plantation in New England, called the province of Laconia, granted by patent from the king to his father.) (Referred to the Commissioners or plantations.—Sainsbury.) (p. 97.)

We have no means of determining with precision how the government in Ligonia was constituted. We find a general assembly in existence, and suppose it was formed upon the plan of that in Massachusetts, or of that proposed by Gorges; that is, by assistants or counselors appointed by the president or his deputy, and deputies chosen by the people. In fact, Edward Rigby, the son of Alexander, in a letter written in 1652, to the province, speaks of the six assistants and the judges. The proceedings of the assembly in September, 1648, are subscribed by George Cleeves, deputy-president, Wm. Royall, Henry Watts, John Cessons, Peter Hill and Robert Booth. (p. 99.)

RIGBY, EDWARD, Lancaster, 1654. JOHN, Dorchester, 1637; freem., 18 May 1642; d. in April 1647; was perhaps f. of Samuel, bapt. there 21 Mar. 1641, and of Abigail, wh. m. 19 Feb. 1664, Thomas Holman. The family came from Normandy into England with William the Conqueror. The first Norman killed in the battle of Hastings was named Rigby. From England they came to North Carolina and frequent mention is made of them in the Colonial Records of the State. It is probable that the "s" was added to the name there because of the hatred and contempt felt for Sir Richard Rigby because of his position so antagonistic to the colonies in the British Parliament, he at that time, being one of its members. death of Judge Rixford seemed particularly sad, coming as it did so soon after the family reunion and festivity. The three brothers and four sisters, and many other members of the family, had gathered at East Highgate, Vt., to meet a brother, Luther Rixford, from San Francisco, Calif., who had been away for seventeen years. It was the first time in forty-six years that the entire family had been together. After two weeks of pleasant sociability, Judge Rixford and wife left East Highgate for Burlington, Friday, the 18th day of September. They were there the guests of Mr. E. W. Peck. On Sunday, the 20th, Judge Rixford was in his usual health and enjoying his visit greatly. Early that evening he left the house to call upon a friend, but was soon brought back home, being assisted by two young men who said he was not able to reach the house alone, and although a Doctor arrived right away, Mr. Rixford died in a few minutes of heart disease.

He graduated from the Burlington University in 1843. Among his classmates were Judge E. H. Bennett, of Massachusetts; Dr. J. E. Dwinell, of California; Hon. W. C. Smith of St. Albans, and others who have attained pre-eminence in various professions and callings.

He studied law and practiced his profession there. He removed thence to Oshkosh, Wis., in 1857, where he practiced law for about ten years. He then went to Washington, where he held for many years the position of chief law clerk of the U. S. Pension Bureau. When the news of his death reached Washington, Acting Commissioner of Pensions, W. E. McLean, issued an official announcement to the bureau, which concluded with these words: "Judge Rixford was a gentleman of fine legal acquirements, an efficient and conscientious officer, and held the respect and confidence of the Commissioner and other officers of the bureau."

On the afternoon of Sept. 21, a brief service was held at the house of Mr. E. W. Peck, the Rev. J. I. Bliss officiating. The Pall-Bearers were Senator Edmunds, Judge Wales, Colonel B. B. Smalley, C. F. Ward, J. W. Hickok, Edward Lyman, John S. Arthur and G. G. Benedict. The remains were then carried to East Highgate, where the funeral was held at the house of his brother, O. S. Rixford, September 23. The Rev. Dr. A. A. Bailey, who officiated, was a classmate of Judge Rixford's. The remains were interred in the family lot in the cemetery overlooking the beautiful valley of the Missisquoi.

4. Judge Bradford Rixford married Katharine Clark, daughter of Joseph Clark (1795-1879) and Lois Lyon (1805-1879). Their daughter, Katharine Clark Rixford, born about 1859; died 1921; married 1878, Henry Orville Clark, born 1843; died 1914. Mr. Clark was a Colonel in the Civil War and presented a beautiful Marble Soldiers Monument to Westford, Vt. (his birthplace). The Clark family are prominent throughout the State. They held landed estates in Milton, Vt. The daughters and their families spend part of the summer on one of their picturesque farms there.

The Rixfords of Vermont

(Taken from "Successful Vermonters," by William H. Jeffrey)

The History of Franklin and Grand Isle Counties, Vermont, edited by Lewis Case Aldrich, in 1591, says:

East Highgate Village is situated three miles East of Highgate Center, on the Missisquoi River, a thriving busy little village, the prosperity of which is mainly due to Hon. Oscar S. Rixford and his descendants.

4. Oscar S. Rixford, Esq., son of Luther and Sarah Hawkins Rixford, was born at Winchester, N. H., March 2, 1828; died March 23, 1911. His grandfather, William Rixford, was an early pioneer of that town.

His father, Luther Rixford, came with his wife and eight children from Winchester, N. H., in an ox team in 1837, forded the river, built an axe shop and continued the manufacture of scythes which he had commenced in New Hampshire. Oscar S. Rixford, after completing his education at St. Albans and Bakersfield Academies, returned to East Highgate, married Jan. 21, 1858, Mary Flint, born Feb. 4, 1838; died March 25, 1909, daughter of Moses Flint and Adeline (Cutting) Flint. She was the adopted daughter of her uncle, Rev. Henry P. Cutting of Troy. Mrs. Rixford received her education at Bakersfield Academy. At his majority he became a partner in the scythe factory, then employing ten or twelve men. Some six years later, Mr. Rixford became sole proprietor and conducted a constantly increasing business, in 1880 adding the manufacture of axes. In 1868, he installed a large scythe factory at Bedford, P. Q., and six years later added the feature of axe manufacture. In 1882, this business was incorporated as the "O. S. Rixford Manufacturing Company," and the business was continued until 1889. He has entered heartily into local improvements, is an extensive fruit farmer, with the largest orchard of Fameuse apple trees in the world. In politics a staunch Republican; on account of the demands of his business he had refused to accept town office, but represented Highgate in the Legislature in 1862 and 1863 and was a senator from Franklin county in 1876. He was a Universalist in religious belief, and a Mason of many years standing. Hon. Oscar S. Rixford died March 11, 1911.

They had one son, Oscar Adelbert Rixford, b. Aug. 4, 1890. Oscar H. Rixford received his schooling at East Highgate, Vt., and Goddard Seminary, Barre, Vt. He was Station Agent at East Highgate, for several years. He was afterwards employed by his father, O. S. Rixford, and was Vice President and Clerk from the time the Rixford Manufacturing Company was incorporated in 1900, until his father's death in 1911, when he was made President and Manager of the Company, and his son, Oscar A. Rixford, was made Vice President and Clerk. In 1911, when the O. S. Rixford Estate was settled, he bought out his sisters' interest in the Company. The scythes manufactured here are marketed under the names of Fine India Steel, Golden Clipper, Rough & Ready, Hercules, Cast Steel and Red Razor. The axes are marketed under the names of Rixford, Pride of Vermont, Ethan Allen, Green Mountain, Ebony, Ready For Use, and Vermont Clipper. This business is the industrial life of East Highgate: Oscar H. Rixford was Senior Warden of St. John's Church, Highgate, for seventeen years, where a bronze tablet was placed in his memory. He was Post Master for thirty-five years at East Highgate, Vt.

4. Susan K. Rixford, b. Sept. 5, 1875; unmarried. She is a member of Bellevue Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, No. 81742—Ancestor, Jonas Cutting. She was for several years Vice President of the St. Albans District of the Woman's Auxiliary.

6. Oscar A. Rixford was born at East Highgate, Aug. 4, 1890, the son of Oscar Herbert and Elizabeth May (Leach) Rixford; married Jan. 18, 1819, Mary Carolyn Rixford, Montreal, Que., born June 6, 1899. Children of Oscar and Mary: 1. Mary Elizabeth Lenora, born Oct. 6, 1922; 2. Oscar Theodore, born July 21, 1925. The elder Mr. Rixford was an official of the organization bearing his family name until his death, and the family life has centered around the town that is the industrial base of the operation of this large manufacturing plant, and young Mr. Rixford received his early schooling there, going away for a time to Lower Canada College, Montreal, Quebec, and Goddard Seminary, Barre, and was taken into the company upon graduating. Founded in 1812, by Luther Rixford in Winchester, N. H., in 1837 he moved the plant to East Highgate and there laid the foundation of what has since become a large and the oldest plant for the manufacture of scythes, and axes in the United States. Originally started to make scythes, the making of axes was added in 1880 and the present extensive plant is modern in structure and methods, and is an industrial asset of the community. The plant consists of several large buildings and employs a large number of workers. It is said that when the factory is working at its full capacity, thirty-five hundred dozen scythes and the same number of axes are turned out yearly and sent all over the United States where a market for these fine quality implements has been created. At the time of the disastrous flood of November, 1927, immense damage was done to the plant. As the railroad had been badly damaged and future operation was doubtful, it seemed for a time as though the plant would be shut down indefinitely, but officials of the company recognizing that their concern was the life of the community, cleaned up with incredible speed and, although with a loss of property estimated at over twenty thousand dollars, soon had the factory running again. To help relieve the economic sufferings of their workers, the rents of their homes were reduced fifty per cent., in recognition of the cooperation that the workers themselves gave towards rehabilitating the works.

Oscar A. Rixford, as president of the Rixford Manufacturing Company, occupies an hereditary position in the commercial world of Vermont. A few years ago, one of the oldest and leading journals of the State, "The Free Press," celebrating its one hundredth anniversary, sought through the State for other organizations of equal longevity, and among the eight or ten such concerns, whose periods of existence had reached the century mark, was the Rixford Manufacturing Company. It is a matter of justifiable pride with the family that the company is in its fourth generation.

The present president of this fourth generation of the company is also the third of his name, being preceded by Luther, his great grandfather, Oscar S. Rixford, his grandfather, and by Oscar H. Rixford, his father, and has a son Oscar T. (See picture of five generations.)

The community in which Oscar A. Rixford lives has several times honored him by choosing him for public office of trust. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1915/6, is a selectman of the town, 7 years, and has served as town auditor; has been Moderator for 14 years. He is a member of the Vermont State Chamber of Commerce and of the Taquahunga Club. He and his family are communicants and liberal supporters of the Episcopal church at Highgate where his father, Oscar H., was senior warden for several years and where the son is now junior warden. He has been Lay Reader for Highgate and Swanton Episcopal Churches for several years. He was a Delegate to the Roosevelt National Convention at Chicago, 1912-1916. He is one of the County Committee of the

Both of these families have been active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, down to the present generation. Mrs. Rixford's father, Willard Hefflon, attended the Swett School at Highgate and Norwich University. Mr. Hefflon served in the U. S. Customs Service in Montreal, for 25 years. All of his children were born there. In 1919, he purchased a fine home and fruit garden in St. Albans and moved his family there. He bought out the Spaulding Shoe Store where he and his son, Carroll, ran a prosperous business until 1932, when they sold out their business. Mr. Hefflon served as Mayor of the City of St. Albans in 1930. Mrs. Hefflon is very active in social and religious work. Their children were: Mary, Ruth, Dorothy, Carroll and Hillis. Ruth Hefflon graduated from Montreal High School in 1915, and studied two years at the Art School in Montreal. She also took a special course at Columbia University. She worked one year in the Amie Dupont Studio, 5th Avenue, New York, and is now at home where she does miniature work for the Dupont Studio in New York, and the Cole Studio in Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Elvira Pickering Rixford, of San Francisco, Cal., celebrated her 100th birthday in the Western City, Sept. 19, 1918. Gathered around the centenarian on her anniversary were her two sons, Gulian P. Rixford and E. H. Rixford, several grandsons and granddaughters, and also several great-grandchildren.

Note: Mrs. Elvira Pickering Rixford, whose husband was Luther Parker Rixford, one of the early settlers of East Highgate, Vt., celebrated her 100th birthday in San Francisco, September 19, 1918. The event was celebrated by a birthday feast and by a program of music and dancing, comprising old-fashioned and classical entertainment, arranged by the third generation of Pickerings and Rixfords in honor of their grandmother. Four grandchildren, of whom were Dr. Emmet Rixford, Mrs. W. W. Sargeant, Mrs. C. R. Johnstone, Mrs. Rogers Beales, nine great-grandchildren, some of whom were Mary Campbell Rixford, Henry Covington Rixford, Emmett Lane Rixford, W. W. Sargeant, Jr., Emmet R. Sargeant and Cathryn Beales; two sons, E. H. Rixford and G. L. Rixford; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Loring Pickering, and a few old-time friends were present. Mr. Gulian Rixford, who rendered several of the musical selections, was a son of the grand old lady; he is a government expert of horticulture in California and the other son is E. H. Rixford, a well known attorney.

A nephew, Major Loring Pickering and a great-grandson, Halsey Rixford, both in the Aviation Corps, were absent on duty and Loring Pickering, a grandson, was in France with the Red Cross.

Failing eyesight had obliged great grandmother Rixford to reluctantly give up her little activities and she had become blind a few months before the event, but her mind was still clear and her hearing good, and she derived much pleasure from the occasion.

A poem, written in her honor by former Mayor Edward Robeson Taylor, was read at the close of the entertainment, while Bishop William Ford Nichols pronounced the benediction. Bishop Nichols also offered prayer and presented Mrs. Rixford with a book of travels. The home was made exquisitely beautiful with a lavish display of flowers.

And now ahead shine golden rays
That such a life has surely won—
A life well lived and duty done.

Persons of 70 to 90 years often feel that if they permitted themselves any cessation in habits of industry their existence would soon terminate. Perhaps a similar hope to round the century mark sustained Mrs. Rixford, for within a month after its attainment, she passed away. She led an unselfish life and endeared herself to a large circle of friends in her thirty-five years residence in California.

Wilbur, oldest son of Secretary of the Interior Wilbur; Russell V. Lee and E. F. Roth, all members of Stanford University Medical School staff.

Sargeant was a musician known for years in San Francisco and Los Angeles musical circles as a finished artist and a man of great ability. Their sons showed, almost from the first, that they had inherited the talent of the Rixford family, and the musical sensitiveness and genius of their father.

Before they were out of baby-hood, Winthrop and Emmet, the two boys, were picking out tunes on the piano and were singing, in their childish way, the songs of Schubert and Schumann, which they had heard their father sing by the hour. Winthrop played the piano at first, then they got him a small violin and he took to that instantly. Emmet wanted to play something but he did not know what until he was five years old (imagine that!), when a visitor at the Sargeant home played the cello. "I'm going to play the thello," Emmet said, positively, so he was given a baby-sized cello, specially made for him, and he played it—and played it well. There is a picture by his mother, of Billy Sargeant and his brother, Emmett, 15 year old prodigy cellist, painted in 1923. In 1922, Winthrop's talent was given recognition when he was invited to play one of the second violins in the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Emmet in the meantime, had been taken to Stanislas Bem, the great cello teacher; and made his bow on Feb. 23, 1923, at the St. Francis Hotel, and every musician and music-lover in San Francisco was invited to attend. His mother's picture showing Billie Sargeant, is called the "American Boy." Geneve and her whole family spent several years in Paris, France, where the boys studied Music and French. The oldest boy went to Vienna to study.

Caroline Esther Rixford Byrd, m. 1st, C. R. Johnson, traveled for some time in Europe; m., 2nd, Benton Cole Byrd, lived for several years in China, where Mr. Byrd was in the export business. Mrs. Byrd is an artist and studied both in America and in Europe.

Emmet Hawkins Rixford, son of Luther Parker (Luther, William, William), born Feb. 2, 1841; married Kate Tillinghast Halsey. He died Aug. 20, 1928, at the Mills Memorial Hospital, San Mateo, Calif., as a result of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Rixford was born in East Highgate, Vt., in 1841, and attended well known colleges in the United States and Canada. He was admitted to practice law by the Superior Court of California, in 1870. In 1899, he accepted an invitation to become the attorney for the California Title and Trust Company, remaining in that capacity until his death, at which time he was one of California's oldest lawyers and prominent in the legal profession in San Francisco. He was recognized as one of the foremost authorities on titles to real estate in San Francisco and also was Vice President of the Bar Association and a member of the Masonic Order.

Arms—Argent, a lion rampant gules, on a chief sable three escallops of the first.
Motto—Che sara, sara.

Russell as a surname belongs to that class of English surnames which had their origin in nicknames. It is derived directly from the cognomen Russell, the diminutive of Rous, a sobriquet for one with hair or complexion of a reddish-brown. Just as the old French brun (brown) took in English two diminutives, burnett and burnell, so roux (reddish-brown) found two diminutives, russet and russell. From nicknames these became hereditary surnames, and are all in existence today with the exception of Russet. The first entry of the name in English records of mediaeval date occurs in the Hundred Rolls in the year 1273. It is recorded that the name Rozel (roz—castle, el—a synonym for water) was first given to a castle located in lower Normandy in 1045 and implied a tower or castle by the water. Hugh, son of William Bertrand, was invested with this stronghold and took its name, calling himself Hugh Rozel, from which came Rosel, Rousel and Russell. The Bertrand ancestry traces to Norwegian Earls of the seventh century, whose descendants were in the train of William the Conqueror and received large grants of the public domain taken from the Saxons. They were founders of the English family of Russell.

Jennett Russell married, as first wife, Sir Eustace Whitney, son of Sir Robert Whitney. (See Whitney English Pedigree 4.)

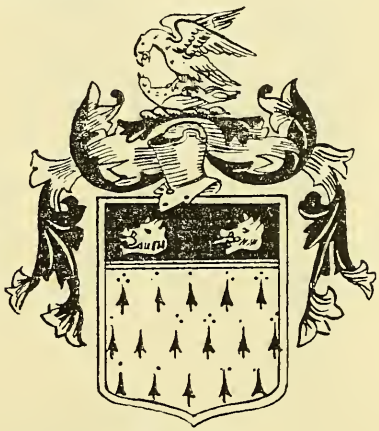
SANFORD ANCESTRY

Sanford Family—Sandford, Samford, Arms—ermine, on a chef giles, two boars heads, Crest—(sometimes used) a falcon, wings endorsed, praying on a partridge, all proper. Sandford also found Sandiford —Sanford, Sandyforth, is a local place name.



Sandford

The Duchess of Cleveland in her work entitled, "The Battle Abbey Roll" (1889, Vol. III, p. 108), states:

"The ancient Shropshire family of Sandford did not derive its name from Normandy. They, like so many others, adopted the name of their English manor. Other Sandfords there were, not included in the Shropshire pedigree, that may possibly have imported the name from Normandy.

Oldest Sanford Seat in England—The oldest Sanford "Seat" in England, so far as I have been able to learn is Sanford Manor in Salop (Shropshire) county, England. Many Sanfords in America believe this property was originally General Thomas de Sanford's share of the spoils in the conquest of England.

All the statements in print to the effect that a Sanford went across the English Channel from Normandy to England with William the Conqueror, in the year 1065, fought at "the Battle of Hastings" and became the founder and progenitor of the Sanford families first found, some generations later, in England, may be rejected as unproven and unlikely to be true; moreover, they are impossible of proof. The so-called "Roll of Battle Abbey," in which, it is asserted, appears the name of the genuine Sanford (the aforesaid compatriot of William the Duke of Normandy) has lost much of the importance and significance, under the searchlight of recent investigation by men of real authority in historical matters, that had been applied to it.

This latter suggestion is reasonable enough; but as no evidence in support of it is obtainable, and as the surname of Sanford can be sufficiently accounted for without going out of England, there is no need for us to indulge in supposition. Sanford is a surname, originating in England from an older place-name of Sandford or (and) Sampford. The place-name is a Saxon name; it was created long prior to the entree of the Normans into England, but not adopted as a surname until the latter part of the twelfth century. We are unwilling to believe that there was such a person as "Gen. Thomas de Sanford" living at the time of the Norman Conquest (1066) as the Sanford progenitor. We may well doubt that there was any person alive at that time, of the true English surname of Sanford. We are not among the credulous who have thought that there was a Norman name of "Sontford" that was the same as Sanford.

The great grandfather of Thomas Sanford, the emigrant to New England of 1634, was RICHARD SANFORD, whose wife was ELIZABETH, as will be proven shortly. There was another Richard Sanford closely related to the first named Richard. (American Ancestry, Vol. I, p. 69, Thomas Sanford was the son of Anthony and Jane Sanford, of Gloucester, England.)

Now the other Richard Sanford, to whom we have referred as being the great grandfather of the emigrant Thomas Sanford, lived in the parish of Stanstead Mountfitchet, in Essex, five miles to the northeast from Great Hadham, and just over the line dividing the counties of Hertford and Essex. Here, in this border town, he died in the year, 1591, as is shown by this now-extent record of burial in the register of the old parish church of Stanstead Mountfitchet:

"Burialls 1591. Olde Samford buryed 16 of Novem."

This Richard Sanford's wife was named Elizabeth, as their son's will proves; it names them both specifically. She was buried, according to the register of Stanstead Mountfitchet:

"Beured Wedow Samford XV of September 1600."

Their son's name was Thomas. He was undoubtedly born in Stanstead Mountfitchet shortly prior to the year, 1558. His birth is not recorded in the register of the old church of this parish because the earliest book of such records, now preserved, begins in 1558. This son, Thomas Sanford, however, married in his home parish shortly after he was of age, as the church register there affirms in these words:

"Thomas Samford and Ffriswit Eve were married the XXIth of September 1581."

Afterwards for solace or relief, Thomas Sanford sought another scene. Leaving father and mother he went away the five miles to Great Hadham, in nearby Herts, an even quainter place then he left. Somewhere in or not far from Great Hadham, he married again, within three years, to a MARY, whose maiden name is not specifically recorded, though she was likely a "Lewes" or a "Mellett," since Thomas Sanford calls John Lewes and John Mellett of Great Hadam, brothers-in-law.

The records of four of the five children of Thomas and Mary Sanford were entered as follows:

"1586 ffebruary 20, Ezechiell sonn of Thomas Sandford."
"1588 March 17, Priscilla, daughter of Thomas Sandford."
"1590 August 9, Zachary, sonn of Thomas Sandford."
"1592 September 24, Sara, daughter of Thomas Sandford."

Of these children, Priscilla married in Much Hadham as this entry in the same register attests:

"Marriages September 30, 1609—Thomas Howe & Priscilla Sanford."

Of Ezechiel, there will be much to tell shortly.
Of Sara, she was married by 1615, to a Howe.
Of Zachary, his life was most uneventful. He was the only son who continued in Much Hadam.
"Philip Mills and Thomas Sandford chosen constables for the year."

Doubtless he served in the years following and also in other capacities in this court and in this court and in the town. The court rolls of this manor are lost from 1586 to 1662.

Thomas Sanford was a young tradesman. He inherited a bit of land from his father, in 1591, over east in Stanstead Mountfitchet. This property his mother lived upon until her death, in 1600.

Ezekiel Sanford! What of him? We have proved that he was baptized at Much Hadam, Herts., 20 Feb. 1585/6, as the eldest son of Thomas and Mary Sanford. It now becomes a great pleasure to prove that he was the father of Thomas, Andrew and Robert Sanford, the three brothers who emigrated to New England. Zachary Sanford, who appeared in America in close connection with the other three, also was possibly his son.

In America, Thomas, Andrew and Robert Sanford, each had a son whom they named Ezekiel, so named after their father. Zachary also named a son Ezekiel.

(Sanford Gen., by C. E. Sanford, Vol. II, 1911, p. 1321), Old Records and Census of 1790, Very Old Original Papers—Ephraim Sanford, 1687, Inventory of his Estate). Thomas Sanford, brother of Robert Sanford and Richard Sanford, born 1594, in England; died in Swansea, Mass.; married Marjery, died 1640, Boston.

We have turned up the will, however, of Ezekiel's father-in-law. This document is quite a revelation. It proves that Thomas Sanford, our emigrant ancestor, was one of the aforesaid sons of Ezekiel; but more remarkable than that, this will reveals that Ezekiel's brother-in-law was the guiding genius who accompanied the Sanford emigrants to America. Andrew Warner, now the proven uncle of Thomas, Robert and Andrew Sanford, and perhaps the uncle of Zachary Sanford, has been long known as a founder of Hartford in Connecticut. We have thus discovered not only Andrew Warner's home and parentage in England, but, in him, we find the older mind, that either planned the emigration or that fell in with the ideas of his nephews and became their adviser, the director of their emigration, and their close friend in the New World. Ezekiel Sanford was present in Hatfield Broad Oak on the sixteenth day of July, 1614, when he wrote his name at the end of his father-in-law's will, as a witness. It is judged that he had lived in Hatfield probably at his wife's home, from the time of their marriage (about 1607) until the births of their eldest son Thomas (the emigrant to America) and their second son John (who did not emigrate). This couple had eight children (in the records): the younger six were baptized at Stanstead Mountfitchet, the home of Ezekiel's grandparents, Richard and Elizabeth Sanford. It was at Stanstead Mountfitchet that Ezekiel finally settled.

Children of Ezekiel:

"1612 Baptismes. Ezechiell the Sonne of Exechiell Sampford December 26."
"1615 Baptismes. Robert the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford November 1."
"1617 Baptismes. Andrewe the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford November 1."
"1619 Baptismes. Samuell the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford November 25."
"1622 Baptismes. Mary the daughter of Ezechiell Sampford ffebruaries 13."
"1624 Baptismes. Jonathan the Sonne of Ezechiell Sampford Januarie 18."

Of these children nothing has been found to indicate what became of Ezekiel the younger, if he grew up. Robert and Andrew went to America, with (or followed) their elder brother, Thomas Sanford and their uncle Andrew Warner, after whom Andrew Sanford was named. The son Samuel, baptized as above, was buried ten days after his baptism, viz.: "1619. Burialles. Samuel Sampford, Dec. 5."

1. Thomas Sanford, born (1607/8), in Essex County, England, and in all probability at Hatfield Broad Oak; died Sept. or Oct., 1681, Milford, Conn. (See preceding article by Mr. C. A. Hoppin on his parentage and lineage.) Married (1636/7) Sarah, maiden name unknown, at Dorchester, Mass. She died May 14, 1681, at Milford, Conn.

2. Ezekiel[2] Sanford (Thomas[1]), born (1637, Dorchester, Mass.); died late in 1683, Fairfield, Ct.; married April 25, 1665, Rebecca Whelpley, born 16—. (Her name is given in "Schenk's History of Fairfield" as Rebecca, daughter of John and Rebecca Whelpley of Fairfield and in other works as Wickla and Wakely.)

Mr. Sanford settled in Fairfield, Ct., before 1660, where he died only two years later than his father. Was a Freeman there in 1669. His grave is not known. The inventory of his estate shows that he was a tanner and a large land owner for his time.

They had seven children all born in Fairfield, Ct.:

1. Sarah, b. March 5, 1666; m. Cornelius Hull.
2. Ezekiel, Jr., b. March 6, 1668, d. March 2, 1728/9; m. Rebeckah Gregory.

3. Ezekiel[3] Sanford, Jr., (same descent as 8), born March 6, 1668, Fairfield, Ct.; died March 2, 1728/9, Fairfield, Ct.; married March, 1696, Rebeckah, daughter of Samuel Gregory of Chestnut Hill, Ct. They were admitted to full communion in the first church at Fairfield, Sept. 30, 1705. Mr. Sanford left a large landed estate. He was an engineer and built the first stockade fort at Saybrook at the mouth of the Connecticut River for protection against the Indians. His will dated Jan. 29, 1729.

The widow was still living in 1764, as is shown by a settlement under his will, probated March 28, 1729, between her and the first five children. His stone of blue slate is still standing (1908) in the Old Fairfield Cemetery and bears this inscription:

"Here lies ye body of Mr. Ezekiel Sanford aged 62 years dec'd March ye 2nd 1728/9." (History of Fairfield, Conn., p. 318.) Lieut. Ezekiel Sanford renewed the Covenant May 27, 1705 (P. R.).

The author has a copy of the covenant dated Fairfield, Jan. 7, 1764, whereby the brothers Joseph, Lemuel, Zachariah, Ezekiel and Samuel bound themselves in the sum of one hundred pounds to support their Mother, Rebecca.

They had nine children, all born and baptized in Fairfield, Ct.:

4. Ephraim[4] Sanford (same descent as 58), born Feb. 12, 1708/9, Fairfield, Ct.; died Feb. 2, 1761/2, Redding, Ct.; married Oct. 7, 1730, Elizabeth, daughter of John Mix, died Jan. 21, 1777, age 62. Settled in a place in the northern part of Fairfield, which was incorporated under the name of Redding, in 1767. He joined the church there in 1734. The locality where he settled was, and still is, called Sanfordtown. He conducted the first store, and was very successful. He died, leaving a widow, four sons and seven daughters. To his widow by will, dated Jan. 30, 1761, he left £967 3s; to each son £760 2s 6 1/4d; and to each daughter £253 7s 6 1/4d, making a total of about $33,000. Estate distributed, May 23, 1763. On Sept. 2, 1766, widow Elizabeth was appointed guardian of sons, Ephraim and Augustus.

Mary and Elizabeth ye daughters of Henry Shelley ar yet not married.

SARAH SHELLEY, probably a descendant of this family. (See Chamberlain Ancestry.)

From its genealogical significance, the will of Sarah Shelley of Boston is reproduced verbatim et literatim:

"I Sarah Shelley of Boston in New England, Spinster, being Sick in body, but through mercy of sound disposing minde Knowing the uncertainty of this present Life do hereby revoke all former and make and declare this my last will and Testament, etc.

It. I release unto my Brother William Chamberlain a debt of Six pounds which he oweth me and I give and bequeath unto my Sister his wife and unto her three daughters Twenty Shillings apeice in money: etc."

From the will of Sarah Shelley it is apparent that Rebecca, the wife of William Chamberlain, was her "sister."

Rebecca Chamberlain was marriageable in 1648, and became the mother of thirteen children between Aug. 13, 1649, and Sept. 27, 1671. She was, therefore, probably born between the years of 1625 and 1634. She and her sister Sarah Shelley were of the same generation as Capt. Isaac Addington and his wife Anne (Leverett) Addington and since they were not sisters of the latter, they were likely to have been either own sisters or half sisters to Capt. Isaac Addington, who appeared in Boston in New England as a "single-man" before June 6, 1640, and lived here until his death in 1652

SHATTUCK ANCESTRY

Arms—Gules, an inescutcheon argent charged with a plain cross of the field, within an orle of martlets of the second. Crest—A martlet argent.

Chadock
(Chattock)
(Shattuck)

The Ancient surname of Shattuck is spelled in various ways—Shatac, Shattauk, Shathooke, Shadoc, Chaddock, Chadwyke and Chadioc. It is probably a name of Anglo-Saxon origin. As early as 1525, we find the names of Samuel and Alice Shattocke on the Parliament Subsidy Rolls of Assessments in Tolland, Somersetshire, England. As Chaddock and Chadwick, the name appears in Lancashire and Worcestershire. Chadwick is a name of great antiquity in England. The first William de Chadwyke was of the fourteenth century. Among his contemporaries were others of that same name. Uniting with different patrician families, they gave to England, as well as to America, a long line of noble descendants. Going back further in the records, we find Sir John de Chydeoke (Chideoke or Chadeoke) who was one of the Barons of Somersetshire as early as the thirteenth century. When William Shattuck came to America, his name was spelled Shattocke. The names Chaddock and Chadwick and Shaddock were also used interchangeably in New England with Shattuck. The family here in America has produced a people of great value to the communities in which they have lived. Many of them have been graduated from the New England Colleges and have taken their places in important walks of life.

Surnames," p. 167; "Colonial Families," by American Hist. Soc., Inc., pp. 199-200.)

1. WILLIAM SHATTUCK was born about 1621 or 1622, in England. He evidently came from England to America in his minority, but no record of his arrival in America has been found. His father may have died on the voyage over, and his mother may have been the widow, Damaris Shattuck (Shattuck, L.: "Memorials of the Descendants of William Shattuck," p. 361), who was admitted to the church at Salem, in 1641. This, however, is not proven, as there is no full record of her children. Samuel Shattuck, the first son recorded, was born in England, in 1620. William Shattuck may have been his brother or more probably, was a near relative. Damaris Shattuck married (second) Captain Thomas Gardner, of Salem, Mass. As early as 1642, William Shattuck's name is listed in Watertown, Massachusetts, when land was granted to "William Chattuck." By grants and purchases he added to his possessions until by 1664, he was a man of considerable property. William Shattuck was a weaver, but it is evident that he was also a farmer. He died, Aug. 14, 1672, in Watertown, Mass. He married, about 1642, Susanna. She married (second) Nov. 18, 1673, Richard Norcross.

1. WILLIAM SHATTUCK was the remote ancestor with whom we have been enabled to connect ourselves, in our history, upon satisfactory evidence; and we begin with his, in our classification, as the first, or earliest known generation. From him, as their progenitor, have descended nearly all, if not every one, of those who now bear his name in America. He was born in England in 1621 or 2, and died in Watertown, Mass., Aug. 14, 1672, aged 50 years.

Massachusetts was first colonized by the English Puritan emigrants in Boston and its vicinity, in 1630. Watertown was settled in the same year—ten years later than the founding of Plymouth. This town is in Middlesex County, from four to seven miles westerly of Boston, and has Cambridge, easterly, intervening between the two places. It originally included the present town of Waltham, incorporated separately in 1737. It is thus one of the most ancient, and it was early one of the most important towns in the Province. The General Court and the Provincial Congress held several sessions in this town. Mr. Shattuck's name appears in an old list of the proprietors of Watertown, made about 1642, twelve years after its first settlement, although he was then only twenty years of age.

Mr. Shattuck is sometimes denominated a weaver. He resided in Watertown about thirty years; and by his sagacity, industry and economy, though dying in the full vigor of manhood, he acquired for the times in which he lived, a large property. He held a respectable position among his fellow townsmen; and his family and the families to whom they were allied by marriage were highly respected, and among the most wealthy and influential in Watertown.

He was interred in the ancient burying-ground situated on the old road leading from Cambridge to Watertown, a short distance westerly of Mount Auburn. A simple but substantial marble tablet, resting in a granite base, has recently been erected near the northwesterly corner of this ground, at the turn of the road to Brighton, bearing the following inscription: "To perpetuate the memory of WILLIAM SHATTUCK, who died in Watertown, Aug. 14, 1672, aged 50; The Progenitor of the families that have borne his name in America."

William Shattuck was married about 1642, when he was twenty years of age. The christian name of his wife was SUSANNA; but neither her surname, nor her parentage, nor the exact date or place of her birth or marriage, have been ascertained. She remained a widow about fifteen months after his death, and married Nov. 18, 1673, Mr. Richard Norcross, who survived her. She died in Watertown, Dec. 11, 1686, fourteen years after the death of her first husband.

In his will Mr. Shattuck mentions "his ten younger children," as if he had others, but it does not appear that he had more than that number. The births of the second, third and tenth only are entered upon the Watertown records. The remainder are ascertained from other authentic evidence.

Children of William and Susanna Shattuck, all of whom were born in Watertown, Mass.:

DR. PHILIP SHATTUCK, s. of William (p. 61), was b. in Watertown and d. within the present limits of Waltham, June 26, 1722, ae. 73. His place of residence was in the vicinity of the Waverley Station on the Fitchburg Railroad, easterly of Beaver Brook; and his estate extended northerly into Cambridge. He was a physician of eminence, and for a long period a leading man in the public affairs of the town. He was often chosen moderator of town meetings, and held the offices of assessor, town treasurer, chairman of the selectmen, and very many other important stations of public trust and responsibility.

The gravestone was standing in the Waltham burying-ground, in 1852, bearing the following inscription: (The Genealogy of the Lawrence Family and Bond's Family contain further information concerning these families), "Here lyes Buried ye Body of Doct[R] PHILIP SHATTUCK, who dece[d] June ye 26th, 1722, in ye 74th year of his Age. Blessed are the Dead that Die in the Lord."

A new marble tablet has recently been erected, to which the above inscription was transferred, with the following appended: "The above record was transferred from a moss-grown crumbling head-stone of slate, to one of more enduring marble, by a descendant of the 5th generation, A. D. 1853."

His will, dated Jan. 29th, and proved Aug. 30th, 1722, is recorded in the Middlesex Records, Vol. XVI, p. 436.

He m. 2, Feb. 11, 1680, Rebecca Chamberlain, who survived him, and d. in 1728. She also left a will, dated Dec. 13, 1727; proved Nov. 19, 1728, (Mid. Rec., Vol. XVIII, p. 522) in which Amos and Philip were appointed her executors. She bequeathed to her sons Benjamin and Joseph, 20s each; to Isaac, one feather bed; to Sarah Parkhurst, "half my wearing apparell, and half my wearing and housell linnen, my biggest iron pot, one pewter platter, a brass mortar and pestle"; to granddaughter Rebecca Gale, "half my wearing apparell, half my wearing and housel linnen, and one pewter platter;" to dau. Ann Sanderson "my wainscot cobbart that stands in the dwelling room;" to sons Amos and Philip, "all the rest and residue of the estate," to be equally divided between them. He had 10 children by his 2nd wife, Rebecca Chamberlain, all born in Watertown, the 4th child, Joseph, b. March 6, 1687; m. Mary Ladd.

In some early legal instruments, Phillip Shattuck is designated "Weaver." He had two sons named Phillip, living at the same time, one by each wife. April 6, 1671, Michael Bairstow, of Wat., for love and affection to kinswoman Deborah, wife of Phillip Shattuck, of Wat., gives to Phillip and Deborah 6 acres, bounded E. by Richard Sawtel; S. by wid. Kemball and John Mix; W. by John Eddy; N. by Camb. line. It is not unlikely that Deborah lived with her uncle Michael, as he had no children and her father was dead, and that this was a marriage portion, bestowed a few months after her marriage.

Children of Philip Shattuck by Deborah Barstow (1st wife); born in Watertown:

1. Deborah, b. Oct. 10, 1671; d. Oct. 19, 1671, age 9 days.
2. Philip, b. Jan. 26, 1673; m. Margaret Pratt.
3. Susanna, b. Aug. 6, 1675; m. Nathaniel Norcross.

Dr. Joseph Shattuck, son of Philip (p. 73), was born in Watertown, March 6, 1687. He was a physician and resided in Boston, from 1708 to 1715. He afterwards removed to Watertown and assumed the medical practice of his father, where he died in the full vigor of life, May 19, 1729, aged 42 years, 2 months, 13 days.

He married in Boston, Oct. 12, 1708, Mary Ladd of that town. His first 3 or 4 children were born in Boston and were baptized in the Brattle Street Church, of which the parents were members. They had nine children, the 5th, Samuel, b. May 29, 1716; married Sarah Clesson.

8. John, b. July 6, 1723; m. Martha Hammon.
9. William, b. 1725; Samuel, his brother, was his guardian in 1737.

51. Samuel Shattuck, son of Dr. Joseph (p. 86), was born in Watertown, May 29, 1716; and died in Montague, Dec. 29, 1760, aged 44 years, 7 months. He probably was the Samuel Shattuck who was a proprietor of Petersham at its first incorporation. (Wilson's Address, pp. 15, 88.) He afterwards settled in Deerfield. His eldest son served a campaign in the French war; and on his return brought home the small pox, and gave it to both his parents. The mother and son recovered, but the father died. So far as the information contained in this volume shows, the name of Shattuck among the Descendants of Dr. Philip, his grandfather, has been preserved only in the line of this Samuel. In the other branches it appears to have become extinct.

He married Dec. 4, 1740, Sarah Clesson, born Jan. 10, 1722, daughter of Joseph Clesson and Hannah Arms of Northampton, and granddaughter of Matthew Clesson and Mary Phelps, who were married in 1670. Her will, dated Sept. 14, 1785, appoints her kinsman, Eliakim Arms, her executor and leaves legacies to 10 children or their representatives.

1. Samuel, b. Sept. 18, 1741; m. Chloe Field; d. Sept. 1, 1827.

121. Samuel Shattuck, son of Samuel (p. 107), was born in Deerfield, Sept. 18, 1741; and died in Portland, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Sept. 1, 1827, aged 85 years, 11 months, 13 days. He was a miller and farmer, and first settled in Greenfield in his native county. For several years before his death, he lived with his children and after 1816, with his son Seth. He was a soldier in the French and in the Revolutionary Wars and was in the battles at Bunker Hill, at Bennington, at Yorktown and at other places. He was a pensioner of the United States government, and is stated in the printed list of 1835, to be 95 years old and of Niagara County.

He married Chloe Field, who died of Pleurisy in Greenfield, April 10, 1781, in her 38th year, about four months after the birth of her youngest child. She was a twin daughter of Aaron Field of Bernardston, whose father Ebenezer Field was slain Oct. 26, 1708, "by the enemy a going to Deerfield, near ye Maddy Brook." (Gen. Register, Vol. IX, p. 162.) He was the son of Samuel and grandson of Zachariah Field, one of the first settlers of Hatfield.

Samuel Shattuck married Chloe Field, born Dec. 29, 1743. He died Dec. 20, 1760. (See Deerfield, Mass. History, p. 158), Scituate, Mass., by Deane, 1831, p. 49, gives 1659, Samuel Shattuck and other Quakers.

In 1630, he was living in London, as established by the record of the baptism of his son Thomas, in the Parish of St. Michael's, in that city. He sailed from Ipswich, April 21, 1634, in the ship "Francis," John Cutting, Master, and landed in Boston, Mass., in June of the same year.

They landed on Cape Cod and after several years in Massachusetts, came to Weathersfield, Conn., finally 1648, settled in Fairfield, where Thomas Sherwood bought land, 1650. In 1654, he was Deputy to the General Court. A bill of sale of land to John Hawley by Sherwood, appears on Stamford, Conn. Land Records. In 1650, he bought land at Barlow's Plain, Fairfield, Conn. He was a pioneer of Rippowams, later called Stamford. In 1654, to 1663, Thomas Sherwood is spoken of as Ancient Town Clerk of Stratford. Thomas Sherwood and Thomas Fairchild, Sr., were appointed by the General Court to draft men in 1654, for the proclaimed Narragansett War. He was a Representative from Sgratford in 1645. He served as a Deputy with Roger Ludlow, in the General Court, 1650. His wife Alice Seabrook was born 1583, and is said to have married (second) Lieut. John Banks. She was the daughter of Robert Seabrook, who came to America with the Sherwoods, settled at Stratford, and died about 1650, aged 85. Thomas Sherwood brought with him to Fairfield his 2nd. wife, Mary ——, by whom he had six more children. His will is dated July 21, 1655, and proved Oct. 26, 1655.

SMITH ANCESTRY

In the old records the name is spelled Smith, Smithe, Smeith and Smyth. It is one of the very oldest surnames, giving precedence to none, unless it be King.

There is no doubt that the ancestors were of English origin, and the Matthew which I have designated as 1st came to America from England, in 1637, and in direct descent there appear nine by that name alone, the ninth dying unmarried.

Sir Henry Smith (son of Sir Hugh Smith, of Ashton, Somerset, England) with his wife Elizabeth Gorges came to New England, 1630, as chaplain in charge of fleet with Governor Winthrop. (See "Compendium of American Genealogy," Vol. III, page 683.)

Rev. Henry[1] Smith was born in England. Some say he was the son of Robert Smith of London, while others claim he was the son of Erasmus Smith, born about 1540, at Whitcock, died 1616; married 1576, his second wife, Marjery (Cecil) Cave, widow of Roger Cave, daughter of Wm. Cecil, Lord Burleigh, Lord High Treasurer of Queen Elizabeth. He came to Watertown, Mass., removed to Wethersfield, Conn., and became the first settled pastor of the church there in 1636. He married first in England, but we know nothing about his wife. He married second, Dorothy, who after his death, married John Russell, father of Rev. John Russell, who succeeded Henry Smith as minister at Wethersfield. They moved to Hadley, Mass., where she died in 1694. Henry Smith was appointed by Governor Winthrop a member of the General Court of Connecticut in 1636. He was a soldier in the Pequot War, 1637. He died Aug. 9, 1648. (See "Bassett Preston Ancestry," page 257.)

Thomas Watson, Esq., one of the principal secretaries to our most dread Sovereign, Lady Queen Elizabeth and of her Highness most Honorable Privy Council, May 18, 23 Eliz., proved July 19, 1582. Buried without any charge my good and loving friend Sir Francis Washington, Knight, brother-in-law, Sir William Winter, Knight, and Matthew Smith, Esq., my cousin. (See "Genealogical Gleanings in England," Vol. I, page 854.)

Ralph 1. Inhabitant 1636.

Henry 2. Married Dorothy ——; both admitted church July 10, 1637; perhaps he was the Rev. Henry, of Wethersfield, and probably was the same Henry who embarked in the Elizabeth with wife Dorothy, aged 45; daughter Mary, aged 15; and son John, aged 12, 1635.

STALLION ANCESTRY

Edward Stallion, died May 14, 1703. When this person made his first appearance in the plantation, Mr. Bruen, the clerk, recorded his name Stanley. It was soon altered to Stallion or Stallon. In later times it has been identified with Sterling, which may have been the true name.

Edward Stallion was at first a coasting trader, but later in life, became a resident farmer in North Groton, (now Ledyard). His children are only named incidentally, and the list obtained is probably incomplete. Deborah, wife of James Avery, Jr.; Sarah, wife of John Edgecombe; and Margaret, wife of Pasco Foote, were his daughters. His first wife, Margaret, died after 1680. He married in 1685, Elizabeth, daughter of George Miller, by whom he had two children, names not mentioned. In 1693, he married, a third time, Christian, relict of Wm. Chapell, who survived him. He left a son, Edward, probably one of the two children by the second wife, who, in 1720, was of Preston, and left descendants there.

The last vessel built by Hugh Mould, that can be mentioned by name, was the "Edward & Margaret," a sloop of 30 tons burden, constructed by Edward Stallion, in 1681.

Edward Stallion before the Court, for sailing his Vessel from New London to Norwich, on the Sabbath, fined 40 shillings.

The death of Edward Stallion, Sen., May 14, 1703, was caused by drowning, which was the result of an accident caused by falling out of his Canoe, at New London.

The houses of James Rogers and Edward Stallion, both built before 1660, were of stone. Stallion's was on the Town Street: afterward Edgecombe property. Edward Stallion among Early Planters in this country. Edward Stallion, £169 taxable property, 1664.

STANLEY ANCESTRY

The Stanleys rank amongst the most ancient and influential families in the Kingdom. They were of consequence, half a century before the Conquest.

The English Family. In the county of Stafford, in the heart of England, there was in very ancient times an old Saxon manor, called STONELEY, a name compounded of Stone, and Leah or Ley (modern lea), meaning a stony meadow or field. There is still in that county a considerable town name Stone, which very probably, like the former, may bear a remembrance of the rugged surface of what is now one of the chief mining districts of the island. At the time of the conquest, the estate belonged to Saxon Sir Henry de Stoneley, the place of his residence in that day supplying the surname of the owner.

Among the Norman knights who accompanied William the Bastard into England, in 1066, were Adam de Aldithely and his two sons, Lydulph and Adam. These received, as did others of William's associates, large possessions from the conquered lands as a reward for their services. Lydulph, the elder son, had a son Adam, and Adam, the younger, had a son William. These two young Normans, Adam and William, both married wives of the Saxon family De Stoneley.

Adam de Aldithely married Mabella, daughter of Sir Henry de Stoneley, and received with her as her marriage portion the two adjacent estates of Stoneley and Balterley. They were ancestors of the noble family of Audley, so call by a shortening of their name from Aldithely to Aldethley and Audley.

William de Aldithely married Joan, daughter of Thomas de Stoneley, a kinsman of Sir Henry, and received with her as a dowry the manor of Thalk, in the same county. Afterwards, he exchanged this estate with his cousin Adam for Stoneley and half of Balterley, and made Stoneley his family residence; and in honor of his lady, and the great antiquiry of her family, of noble Saxon descent, who flourished many years before the conquest, he assumed the surname of Stanley, and became the recognized founder of the Stanley family. This was in the reign of Henry I., A. D., 1100-1135.

We begin then, the genealogy with:

I

SIR WILLIAM DE (ALDITHELEY) STANLEY, who married Joan de Stoneley, and had:

They had: 6. A daughter. 7. John, of Stourton. 8. Adam.

VII

STEVENSON ANCESTRY

The Stevenson family given below is said to be descended from an Officer of that name in the Army of William the Conqueror, who fought in the Battle of Hastings and was rewarded for his services by a grant of land in South Scotland. The Parish and its town still bear the name Stevenson. The Estate passed out of the family in the fifteenth century. The Heralds Visitation in 1662 gives four descendants of Stevenson (of Ounston, or Unston, County Derby). The Stevenson of Steveson of West County Derby and County Lincoln, bore the same Arms and Crest which are described as follows in Burk's General Arms Edition, 1878, page 302:

STONE ANCESTRY

Rev. Samuel Stone

The Register of the Church of All Saints, Hertford, England, has the following entries of the baptisms of Rev. Samuel Stone and his brothers and sisters, children of John Stone, a freeholder of Hertford, England:

Jeremyas, son of John Stone, bapt. Feb. 18, 1599; buried Jan. 19, 1601.
Samuel, son of John Stone, bapt. July 30, 1602.
Jerome, son of John Stone, bapt. Sept. 29, 1604.
John, son of John Stone, bapt. July 6, 1607; buried Oct. 8, 1609.

Sara, daughter of John Stone, bapt. April 3, 1625.
Ezechiell, son of John Stone, bapt. April 27, 1629.

There is a very good account of John Stone, and his son, Rev. Samuel Stone, in the Memorial History of Hartford County, Conn., p. 262-3, part of which is as follows:

John Stone an original proprietor, had an allotment of lands, but conveyed it to Samuel Stone by gift before 1640. Lechford speaks of him as "Mr. John Stone, of Hartford," Sept. 16, 1639; removed to Guilford, where he was one of the signers of the original compact in 1639. Lands were recorded to John Marsh, Feb. 1639/40; part whereof did belong to John Stone and were by him given to Sam'l Stone, and so by the said Sam'l Stone unto John Marsh, of Hartford, and now belongeth to him and his heirs. His home lot was on the west side of Front St.

Passengers and Ships of the Winthrop Fleet, "Griffin". This ship of 300 tons arrived Sept. 4, having been eight weeks from the Downs. She brought about two hundred passengers. Among them were:

Mrs. ——Stone.
Rebecca Stone.
Mary Stone.
Sarah Stone.

Rev. Samuel Stone, son of John Stone, a freeholder of that place, was b. in Hertford, Co. Herts (usually at that time sounded Hartford); bapt. July 30, 1602, in the church of All Saints; entered at Emmanuel Coll., Cambridge, 1620, A.B., 1623; A.M., 1627. Recent discoveries show that a Samuel Stone, probably this one, was curate at Stisted, Co. Essex, near Chelmsford, from June 13, 1627 to Sept. 13, 1630. He came to New England with Cotton, Hooker, and other men of note, in the "Griffin," arriving at Boston, Sept. 4, 1633; chosen Teacher of the church at Cambridge, Oct. 11, 1633. Freeman, Mass., May 14, 1634; removed to Hartford in 1636, where he was an original proprietor, and in 1639, his home-lot was on the north bank of the Little River, between those of Rev. Thomas Hooker and Elder William Goodwin. He served as chaplain to the troops under Capt. Mason in the Pequot War, 1637. His wife d. 1640, before Nov. 2 or 3, when Dr. Hooker mentions her death in a letter to Rev. T. Shepard, saying that she "smoaked out her days in the darkness of melancholy." He m. (2) before July, 1641, Elizabeth Allen, of Boston.

In 1630, Mr. Stone went as the Puritan Lecturer to the large town of Towcester, in Northampton, by the commendation of Thomas Shepard, who had been offered the place, but could not accept it, and Shepard records that Mr. Stone went to Towcester to Lecture, "where the Lord was with him, and thus I saw the Lords mercy following me, to make me a poor instrument of sending the Gospel to the place of my nativity."

While still in Towcester, Mr. Stone was invited by "the judicious Christians that were coming to New England with Mr. Hooker" to be "an assistant unto Mr. Hooker."

In 1633, Rev. John Cotton, Rev. Thomas Hooker, Rev. Samuel Stone, Mr. Haynes, afterward Governor of Massachusetts and Connecticut, "a gentleman of great estate (Atheton Hough) and many other men of good estate, two hundred passengers in all, left England on the "Griffin."

The voyage was of eight weeks duration, "the vessel reached Boston, Sept. 4, 1633, and Mr. Hooker and Mr. Stone went presently to Newtown, where they were to be entertained, and Mr. Cotton stayed at Boston."

("Stone Ancestry," p. 784), Rev. Samuel Stone, a Puritan Divine of Herfordshire, Eng., in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. ("Cleveland Gen.," p. 1122, note), Boston 1641, married (second) Elizabeth Allen of Boston. ("Stone Ancestry,"), John[1], Rev. Samuel Stone[2]. ("N. E. H. Reg.," p. 300), Received of Capt. In settling the admittance of New Haven Colony to the Connecticut Colony, the committee selected for "the important and delicate embassy" were Matthew Allyn, Samuel Wyllys, Stone, the Chaplain of the Pequot Expedition and Thomas Hooker.

Samuel Stone's first wife died in 1640.

Rev. Samuel Stone died July 20, 1663, leaving a widow Elizabeth, his second wife. Elizabeth, the sister of Rev. and Capt. John White married first Thomas Gardner; 2nd —— Allen; 3rd, Rev. Samuel Stone. See Gardner Genealogy.

Oct. 11, 1633, Mr. Winthrop says, "A fast at Newtown, where Mr. Hooker was chosen pastor and Mr. Stone teacher, in such manner as before in Boston." He had fully described the event of setting Pastor and Teacher in their places in the event of settling John Cotton in Boston the day previous. The two offices of Pastor and Teacher were explained thus, "and for the Teacher and Pastor, the difference between them lyes in this, that one is principally to attend upon points of Knowledge and Doctrine, though not without Application; the other to points of Practice, though not without Doctrine. Both were preachers, but the Pastor's function as a preacher was to have special reference to the experimental life and behaviour; the Teacher's rather to dogma and faith. Both had oversight of the flock, but the Pastor was supposed to be the shepherd and feeder; the Teacher, the guide and warder. Both were to be vigilant against error; but the Pastor, chiefly in matters of practice, the Teacher in matters of belief. Both gave their whole time to the work of the ministry and were supported by the common funds of the congregation." Later, as these offices were seen to be inevitably the same, they became merged into one; then Pastor and Teacher were deemed indispensable. "And so the grave, Godly and judicious Hooker,—and the Retoricall Mr. Stone" entered upon their work.

Newtown proved too small for the two colonies, and in September, 1635, some moved to Connecticut. May 31, 1636, saw the rest of the Colony on its way to Hartford, as the place was named in honor of Mr. Stone's native place, Hertford, Eng.

May 1, 1637, a "Gen'all Corte att Harteford" was held and the first recorded act of the new government was to declare war against the Pequots. Capt. John Mason of Windsor, Conn., commanded the little army of ninety men, and "Mr. Stone the Preacher of the Hartford Church went with the men as their Chaplain." May 26, the Pequot Fort near New London was attacked and several hundred Indians were killed by sword, bullet and fire."

Capt. Mason, in celebrating the victory, says, "It may not be amiss here also to Remember Mr. Stone, the famous Teacher of the Church of Hartford, who was sent to preach and pray with those who went in those engagements against the Pequots. He lent his best assistance and Counsel in the Management of these Designs," etc.

The General Court of Hartford afterward gave to —— "to Mrs. Stone and her son Samuel Stone, in lieu of a former grant to the husband and father of a farm for 'his good service to the Country, both in the Pequot War and since,' " five hundred acres of upland and fifty or sixty acres of meadow.

The Colonial Records say, "The renowned John Mason was Captain of the army, and Rev. Samuel Stone scarcely less known to fame for his battles in a different field of strife, was its Chaplain," and this tribute is paid to him. "Mr. Stone it was who, attending the soldiers as chaplain kept their courage ever high and holy through pious mindfulness—who went to pray with them as they sailed as they marched, in fatigue, in pain, and during the perils of a mortal struggle."

His personality seems to have left a very strong impression upon all historians, as his happy disposition, wit, and brilliancy are often mentioned. The following extracts from among many give his chief characteristics.

"Samuel Stone—a theological Socrates—a subtle reasoner and great disputant—ingenious, witty, didactic—remarkable for his frequent fastings and exact Sabbaths"—"a man of principles, and in the management of those principles," says Mather, "both a Load Stone and a Flint-Stone." Mrs. Sigourney says that during the darkness that rested upon the people the first months they were in Hartford, from cold, lack of proper food, poor dwellings and "terror of hostile Indians" he "was as a perpetual sunbeam, naturally possessed of great firmness and cheerfulness—he endeavored to breathe his own spirit into the desponding. In preaching instruction from house to house and visits to the afflicted he was unwearied. His very countenance and manner had a consoling influence upon the sorrowful." His cheerfulness and happiness were part of his religion, as he thought, "many that knew not religion might be led to love it, if they saw it bringing forth the fruits of daily happiness."

We are told also that he was "amiable, frank, of easy manners, of winning address, and noted particularly for his pleasantry and wit."

It was a keen jester indeed that he could not vanquish in repartee. His society was sought by all and especially by men of ingenious minds, some of whom visited him for the purpose of having doubts satisfactorily settled, some for the purpose simply of gathering up the rich stores of his conversation, and some to provoke and enjoy his wit. He was a kind husband, a fond father, a pure patriot and one of the sincerest of Christians—so upright, so public spirited, so full of heart and full of mind as amply to deserve Mather's eulogy of him as "a precious gem laid deep in the foundations of New England."

"As a preacher he was doctrinal and argumentative, his style was nervous and he was often eloquent. In applying his subject he was brief, but pungent and remarkable for 'notably digenting in his prayers the doctrines of his discourse.' He was a great student of theology, and skilled in sacred philology." He seldom used written sermons, but used to repeat his sermons for the following day, to his family Saturday evening, both for their benefit and also to get a thorough knowledge of his discourse and "enable him by alteration and additions to render it more lucid, pungent or practical."

"He was one of the most brilliant and accomplished divines of the new world, and was alike distinguished for ability as a preacher and controversalist, his pleasing manner and his wit and eminent social qualities. He was a leader both in church and state." Of his manuscripts, which he left to his intimate friend, Rev. John Higginson of Salem, Mass., with instructions to select and print those he thought suitable for the press, few seem to have been published. His Catechism, an able elaborate treatise entitled "A Body of Divinity," of which there is a copy in the Connecticut Historical Society Library; his "Discourse about the logical notion of a Congregational Church," and his "Confutation of the Antinomians" still exist. He published a volume relating to the Congregational Church in London in 1652.

His letter announcing the death of Mr. Hooker is in the 4 Mass. Hist. Coll., VIII, pp. 544-546, also quoted in full in "Life of Thomas Hooker."

In public affairs he was very prominent, as "great confidence was reposed in his judgment, both by the Town of Hartford and by the General Court, and so we often find him serving upon important committees and in arbitrations."

He conferred with Sowheag, the powerful Sachem, in regard to the difficulties at Wethersfield.

The Colonial Records mention Mr. Stone as one of the farmers of the Constitution of Connecticut, the "mother of the Constitution of America;" also record his being appointed by the Court "to amend and perfect the petition to Charles II for a charter for Connecticut."

He also went to England with Governor Winthrop to procure the old charter. Rev. Samuel Hart says, "The Conn. Charter was given to Gov. Winthrop and Samuel Stone which practically constituted Conn., with full consent of England, a free and independent state, and which sufficed for her government for more than a hundred and fifty years."

The charter was dated April 23, 1662: the boundaries of Connecticut were "the Mass. line and the sea, and to extend from Narragansett Bay to the Pacific Ocean."

After Mr. Hooker's decease he was the sole pastor of the First Church until his death, July 20, 1663. Inv., £563. 1. His widow m. (2) George Gardner, of Salem, afterward of Hartford, and d. in 1681. Children:

1650; d. young (?); 6. Samuel; 7. Elizabeth; 8. Rebecca, m. about 1657; Timothy Nash, of New Haven, who removed to Hartford (q. v.); 9. Mary; 10. Sarah."

His property amounted to £563. 0s. 0d., a large estate for those days. To his son he gives his library, valued at one hundred and seventy pounds, together with half his "houseing and lands"—to his wife and four daughters portions of his remaining estate.

His tombstone still stands, a slab of red freestone supported by pillars, in the old Center Church burying ground, Hartford, with this inscription:

Mr. Samuel Stone, Deceased Ye 61 year of his age, July 20, 1663.

TERRY ANCESTRY

Terry, Eng., a demi-lion ppr., holding a fleur-de-lis, Gu.

Terry

Stephen Terry settled in Dorchester, Mass., where he was admitted as a freeman May 18, 1631, and held the office of constable. About 1636, he removed to Windsor, Conn., where he lived for some years. He was several times a member of the grand jury, and of the jury of "life and death," served on committees for laying out highways and held the office of constable. About 1660, he removed to Hadley, Mass., being one of its "first settlers," was the first constable of the place, and afterwards was a selectman. He was rated at £200 and had nearly nine acres of land assigned to him. None of his townsmen were rated higher, but several were rated the same. He was married in Dorchester, but lost his wife by death, in Windsor, June, 1647. He died in Hadley, Sept., 1668, leaving a widow named Elizabeth, and from the fact that she died about 1683, aged about ninety years and their probably relative ages, we may conjecture that he was born as early as about 1590. Perhaps Hadley was the name of his native place in England.

Passengers in Winthrop's Fleet, on Ship "Mary and John," Thomas Chubb, Master, sailed from Plymouth, England, March 20, 1630, with 140 passengers from the counties of Somerset, Dorset, and Devon under the patronage of the Reverend John White. She arrived at Nantasket, May 30, and all the passengers settled at Mattapan which was renamed Dorchester.

Thompson

The family of Thompson in Kent spelled the name Thomson, and the change to the present form was made in America. Thomas Thompson, of Sandwich, married a daughter of a Mansfield. Arms were granted to him in 1600. He had children: Henry, Anne and Thomas.

HENRY THOMPSON, born Derby, Eng.; died 1681; married Alice ——, died 1681; married (second) John Birdsee. He had sons, John, Anthony and William. Thomas Thompson, named last in the paragraph above, also had sons, John, Anthony and William. These names, found together in the Thompson family of County Kent and the fact that three brothers, William, Anthony and John, came from England to America, 1650, make it seem highly probable that the Thompsons of America descended from the family of Thompson (or Thomson) of Kent, England. There has been much controversy on this matter, but extensive research has failed to settle the point, and almost all of those who have investigated the Thompson pedigree concede the probability of descent from the family of Kent.

The name Thompson stands twenty-first in a roll of common surnames, being rarer than Edwards, but more common than White. Thomson or Thompson signifies a son of Thomas. Bardsley, in his "Surnames," gives: Eborard fil Thome, County Cambridge, 1273; Abraham fil Thome, County Bedford, 20 Edward 1, 1291; Richard fil Thome, County York, 1291; Petrus Thome, son, County York, 1379; Johannes Thomasson, of County York, 1379.

There are large families of Thompson in both Ireland and Scotland. Baron Haversham, created baron in 1696, was a descendant of Maurice Thompson, of Cheston, County Herts. This baronetcy became extinct in 1745. A Thompson was Lord Mayor of London, in 1737, and another in 1828. Richard Thompson was treasurer of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, in 1582. Baron Sydenham, Governor-General of Canada, was a descendant of the Thompsons of County Surrey.

The New Haven family of Thompson was founded by three brothers, William, Anthony and John. An attempt has been made to connect them with the Thompson family of Lenham, Co. Kent, England. This Lenham myth has been set forth as a certainty in the History of Goshen (by A. G. Hibbard, 1897), in the "Marks-Platt Ancestry (by E. J. Lines, 1902, p. 46-50), and in several other accounts and so far as known has never been refuted. Henry Thompson of Royton, in Lenham married Dorothy Hony Wood and died 20 Oct. 1648, leaving, with other issue, sons John, William and Anthony. The coincidence of names would seem promising, and it is not strange that somebody hastily conjectured their identity with the emigrants, but investigation overthrows the theory. According to William Berry's "Pedigrees of the Families in the County of Kent" (Published in 1830, p. 15-17), Anthony Thompson of Lenham was baptized 30 Aug. 1612; and died in England 13 Feb. 1682, leaving as heiress an only daughter. Moreover, John Thompson of Lenham was born in 1604, too early for John of New Haven, who was probably the youngest of the eimigrant brothers. The Lenham brothers had three cousins, sons of Thomas Thompson of Pethem, Co. Kent, likewise named John, William and Anthony; but this John was a knight and died in 1645 without issue. Furthermore the evidence of chronology tends to show that the emigrants could not descend from Henry of Lenham or Thomas of Pethem in the following generation. At all events, the accepted pedigree must be abandoned.

(P. 198-199, The Thompson Family of New Haven.)

1. ANTHONY THOMPSON, was born in England, and died in New Haven, Conn., in September, 1648. Three brothers, Anthony, John and William Thompson left England, with the party led by the Rev. John Davenport and Theophilus Eaton, in the "Hector," and arrived in Boston, Mass., June 26, 1637. In April, 1638, they settled in the vicinity of what is now New Haven, Conn. On Sept. 1, 1640, when the settlement was called New Haven, Anthony Thompson, with a family of four persons, was one of the list of first settlers. He was a member of the band of soldiers organized to protect the settlers from the Indians. He mentions his family and brothers, John and William, in his will of 1647. He married (first) in England. He married (second) Catherine, who married (second) Nicholas Camp. (Society Colonial Wars, p. 382), Anthony Thompson (1612-1684), New Haven, Soldier in Indian Trouble, 1642.

ANTHONY[1] THOMPSON died Sept., 1648. In his will of 23 Mar. 1647, he mentions his eldest son; second son, Anthony; daughter Bridget, which he had by former wife; other daughters; wife; and brothers William and John (New Haven Probate Records, Vol. 1, p. 33). He married first ——; and secondly Katherine ——, who married for her second husband, 14 July 1652, Nicholas Camp of Milford. The Proprietor's records contain several references to payment of portions to Anthony's children, by "Kattern Camp," the children mentioned being John, Hannah, Liddia, Ebenezer, Anthony and Bridget. (Proprietors' Records, Vol. II, pp. 91, 98, 114, 229.) (Soc. Col. Wars, p. 472.) Anthony Thompson 1612-1647, Signer of Compact with Gov. Eaton and Rev. John Davenport at New Haven. Soldier in Indian troubles, 1642.

1. JOHN, of whom further.
2. ANTHONY, b. Dec., 1634, d. Dec. 29, 1654.
3. BRIDGET, b. in 1636; m. Rev. John Bowers.

Children of second marriage:

4. HANNAH, bapt. June 8, 1645; m. a Stanton.
5. LYDIA, bapt. July 24, 1647; m. Isaac Crittenden; m. (2) Dea. J. Meigs.
6. EBENEZER, bapt. Oct. 15, 1648; m. Deborah Dudley.

2. JOHN THOMPSON, son of Anthony, was born in England, in 1632; and died June 2, 1707. He was called "mariner" and is mentioned frequently in deeds, etc., owning land in New Haven. He married Anne Vicars, Aug. 4, 1656. He was one of the Proprietors of New Haven. (Hist. of New Haven, p. 153.) (See Vicars.) (John Thompson, No. 22, "Elizabeth and Ann," p. 153. See Drake Founders, p. 84.)

JOHN[2] THOMPSON (Anthony[1]) called "Mariner," has usually been assigned a wife Ellen or Hellena ("cf. History of Goshen, and Genealogical History of Connecticut, 1911, p. 1000"). This is an error, and the only wife of John who appears on record was Anne Vicars, or Vicaris. On 25 Feb. 1657, John Tompson entered an action against the estate of John Roberts, part of which was then in the hands of Mr. Wakeman, on the ground that there had been a treaty of marriage betwixt the said John Roberts and Ann Vicars (now wife to the said John Tompson), and that her former betrothed had by word of mouth left his estate to Ann (Hoadley, Records of the Jurisdiction of New Haven, Vol. II, p. 198".) It should be noted that John Wakeman's wife, Elizabeth Hopkins, had a first cousin Ann, daughter of Walter Vicaris (see the will of William Hopkins of Bewdley, Worcestershire, given in the "Wakeman Genealogy," p. 30.) John Thompson died 2 June 1707, and the inventory of "Mr. John Thompson, Marriner, late decd," was presented 28 Oct. 1707 (New Haven Probate Records, Vol. III, p. 116) In the absence of any distribution of the estate, it is difficult to place his daughters with certainty. Most of his land had been deeded in the later years of his life to his sons, John, Joseph, Samuel, and William (New Haven Deeds, Vols. II and III.) There is no difficulty in identifying the first three, but there seems to have been considerable misapprehension as to the identity of William. This problem is considered below under William Thompson (No. 9). There is no proof that Ann Vicars was mother of all the children, but no other wife has been found.

Children:

1. JOHN, b. May 12, 1657; m. Rebecca Daniel.
2. ANNE, m. in 1688, Caleb Chidsey. She d. bef. 1693. He m. 2nd Hannah Dickinson.

Anthony[2] of Milford, son of Anthony[1] had no wife and died before middle age. In his will of Dec. 26, 1654, he gave his property to John. He had one sister, Bridget also half brothers and sisters by good wife Camp, who had been the second wife of his father.

TOMES ANCESTRY

To the "Register," Vol. 80, pp. 446–447 (October, 1926) the contributor of this article communicated a note which, in addition to certain Welles items from English records, contained a brief abstract of the will of John Tomes of Marston Sicca, Co. Gloucester, England, father of Alice Tomes, the first wife of Gov. Thomas Welles of Connecticut, and also an account of the timely aid given to the royal fugitive, Charles II, after the Battle of Worcester, in 1651, by John Tomes, half brother of Alice (Tomes) Welles. In that note the writer expressed the hope of being able to communicate to the "Register" an article on the ancestry of Alice Tomes; and, when he was in London last summer, he was informed by Maj. Alfred Trego Butler, Portcullis Pursuivant at the College of Arms, that he had prepared, from what he called "original evidences," tabular pedigrees showing several generations of the Tomes and Gunne families, for a descendant who died about the time when the pedigrees were completed. According to Major Butler, Ellen (Gunne) (Phelps) Tomes, the mother of Alice (Tomes) Welles, was descended, through her mother, Anne Fulwood, from many of the best-known families in Warwickshire. Major Butler stated that these pedigrees had not been registered at the College of Arms, but were in such shape that they might be registered there if anyone desired to have it done. The writer, therefore, arranged to procure from Major Butler these pedigrees, and they are given in this article in the genealogical form customary in the "Register," having been rearranged from the chart form in which they were compiled.

The sources (other than wills and parish registers) from which the pedigrees were compiled are, according to Major Butler, "The Register of the Guild of Knowle in the County of Warwick," by W. B. Bickley, 1894. "Men and Armour for Gloucestershire in 1608," by John Smith, 1902, Lay Subsidy Roll 116/490, 20 James I (1622–23), preserved in the Public Record Office, London, and the Tomes pedigree published in "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica," New Series, Vol. 3, pp. 273–279, which is based in part on manorial documents in the possession of the Tomes family and has been used by Major Butler in so far as he has been able to verify it. In the pedigrees that follow words enclosed in brackets are additions made by the contributor or by the editors of the "Register."

Among the early members of the Tomes family whose relationship, if any existed, to the ancestors of Alice (Tomes) Welles has not been discovered may be mentioned the following:

Richard Tommes, of Long Marston (Long Marston, also called Marston-Sicca or Dry Marston, is a parish in Gloucestershire, some five miles northwest from Shipston-on-Stour in Worcestershire. In Yorkshire there is another parish named Long Marston) Co. Gloucester, contributed to the guild of Stratford-on-Avon, Co. Warwick, in 1429–30. He married Joan ——, who died before 1429–30.

William Tommys, of Long Marston, Co. Gloucester, contributed to the guild of Stratford-on-Avon, Co. Warwick, in 1441–42, and received a lease of the manor of Marston from the abbot of Winchcombe 20 Sept. 1479. He married Margaret ——, who contributed to the guild of Stratford-on-Avon in 1441–42.

His widow, Alice, was the executrix of his will, in 1548, and also of the will of her second husband, John Holtom, in 1564. Worcester, of whose will, dated 26 Oct. 1579 and proved at Worcester, in Dec., 1579, she was sole executrix, by whom she had issue; and secondly, at Wormington, Co. Gloucester, 3 Aug. 1601, ANN WARNER, who was executrix of his will in 1602 and married secondly Henry Cooper of Long Marston, who was on the muster roll at Long Marston in 1608, was assessed for a subsidy there in 1623, and made his will 7 Sept. 1646, which was proved at Gloucester 13 Oct. 1646, by whom she had issue.

TURNER ANCESTRY

Descendants of Humphrey Turner

Humphrey Turner, 1593–1673, from England to Plymouth, Mass., 1628, where he owned land in 1653. He removed to Scituate 1633; founder of the Church there, 1635; Constable and Representative to the General Court, 1640, 1652–53; married Lydia Gamer. (Com. Am. Gen. says "Lydia Garnet or Gamer.") ("Hist. of Scituate, p. 99") Humphrey Turner, Deputy from Scituate, 1641 to 1647, 1650 to 1652. (p. 153) Humphrey Turner was Freeman in 1633. He was given land by Court, 1637, Nathaniel Turner being one of the heirs.

("History of Scituate, Mass., from First Settlement to 1831," by Deane, p 360.)

Humphrey Turner (Tanner) arrived, with his family, in Plymouth 1628. He had a house lot assigned him 1629, and he erected a house and resided there until 1633 probably; the latter being the date of the laying out of his house lot on Kent Street, viz. the 4th. lot from the corner of Satuit Brook. The farm, however, on which he resided was east of Colman's hills, near the spot occupied by his descendant James Turner. The house was on the side of the road next the hill. He also had 80 acres granted by the freemen of Scituate, at the place now known as Union bridge on the west side of North River in 1636. This land remains in possession of his descendants. Humphrey Turner erected a tannery as early as 1636. He was a useful and enterprising man in the new settlement, and often employed in public business. His wife was Lydia Gamer, who deceased before her husband. He died 1673, and left children named in his will, in the following order, "John, Joseph, young son John, Daniel, Nathaniel, Thomas, daughter Mary Parker, daughter Lydia Doughty; Grandchildren: Humphrey (son of Thomas), Mary Doughty, Jonathan, Joseph and Ezekiel (sons of John, Sen.) and Abigail, daughter of Nathaniel." Executors Nathaniel and young son John. These all left families except Joseph. ("Com. Am. Gen., Vol. II," says Humphrey Turner's wife's name was Lydia Garnet or Garner.)

John, Sen., married Mary Brewster, daughter of Jonathan, eldest son of Elder Brewster. He settled 30 rods north-west of Union bridge, where he erected a tannery. His children were: Jonathan, b. 1646; Joseph, 1647; Joseph, 1648; Ezekiel, 1650; Lydia, 1652, John, 1654; Elisha, 1657; Mary, 1658; Benjamin, 1660; Ruth, 1663; Grace, 1667; Amos, 1671. (Burke's Royal Families, Vol. II, Pedigree CVI, Mehitable Rigby, probably dau. of Alexander Rigby and sister of Lucy, who m. Robert Hespith, Esq., of Rufford. He d. 1653. He was 12th in descent of Edward I, King of England.

(P. 361), Nathaniel lived on the paternal farm, east of Colman's hill. He married Mehitabel Rigby. Children: Nathaniel, Abigail, Samuel, Mehitabel, Lydia (wife of John James, 2nd generation 1719).

(P. 363), The ancient Humphrey Turner farm has descended to Nathaniel, who married Mehitabel Rigby; to his son, Capt. Samuel, who married Desire Barker and widow Abigail Leavitt, daughter of Lieut. Thomas Gill of Hingham; to his son James, who married Mary Turner; to his son James, who married Deborah Lincoln; and to his sons Nathaniel and James; the grand children of Nathaniel, being the 8th generation.

(Family Sketches, p. 362) As a specimen of his facetiousness it is related, that when the army were throwing up the breast works at Roxbury, they struck upon the bones of an Indian burying ground; and Gen. Heath said as he passed by, "let those men lie, we have soldiers enough." "But, said Turner, if your honor pleases, we want officers." In 1777 he was taken prisoner by Burgoyne, at Ticonderoga, and was kept in the camp until the surrender. We have been informed by a fellow soldier of his, that he used to afford infinite amusement to the officers, and that the Gen. once said to him, "I shan't exchange you, Turner; I shall carry you home; the king wants a fool." When Burgoyne marched out with his army and surrendered, Turner took occasion to pass near the Gen. and say, "we shan't exchange your Honor, the People want a fool." Richard Turner referred to was the great-grandson of Humphrey Turner (Tanner).

("History of New Haven," p. 521) Capt. Nathaniel Turner was baptized at Derby, England. He was Captain in Stoughton's Expedition. ("Colonial Daughters of the 17th Century," p. 315) Turner, Capt. ("History of Lynn, Essex County, Massachusetts," by Alonzo Lewis and James R. Newhall, pp. 128–30.)

Nathaniel Turner (Capt.), lived on Nahant Street and owned the whole of Sagamore Hill. He applied to be admitted a freeman, 19 Oct. 1730, but did not take the oath until 3 July 1632. He was representative in the first seven sessions of the General Court, and a member of the first County Court at Salem, in 1636. In 1633, he was appointed captain of the militia, and in 1636 and 1637 had a command in several expeditions against the Pequot Indians. In 1637 his house was burnt. In 1638, he became a member of the Ancient Artillery Company (he was 12th on the Artillery Roll), and the same year sold his land on Sagamore Hill to Mr. Edward Holyoke, and removed, with others, to Quilipeake, where a new settlement was begun, and called New Haven. His name is preserved in Turner's Falls. In 1639 he was one of the seven members of the first church at New Haven. In 1640 he purchased for the town of Ponus, the Indian Sagamore, the tract of land which is now the town of Stamford, for which he paid in "coats, shoes, hatchets, &c." His active and useful life was soon after terminated in a melancholy manner. In January, 1647, he sailed for England, with Capt. Lamberton, in a vessel which was never heard of more. Governor Winthrop informs us that in June, 1648, the apparition of a ship was seen under full sail, moving up the harbor of New Haven, a little before sunset, in a pleasant afternoon, and that as it approached the shore, it slowly vanished. This was thought to have a reference to the fate of Capt. Lamberton's ship. The following epitaph was written to the memory of Capt. Turner.

Deep in Atlantic cave his body sleeps,
While the dark sea its ceaseless motion keeps,
While phantom ships are wrecked along the shore,
To warn his friends that he will come no more!
But He who governs all with impulse free,
Can bring from Bashan and the deepest sea,
And when He calls our Turner must return,
Though now his ashes fill no sacred urn.

In 1639, Capt. Turner, in connection with Rev. Mr. Davenport and four others, at New Haven, was appointed to "have the disposing of all house lotts, yet undisposed of about this towne, to such persons as they shall judge meete for the good of the plantation; and thatt none come to dwell as planters here without their consent and allowance, whether they come in by purchase or otherwise." In 1640, Capt. Turner, as agent for New Haven, made a large purchase of lands on both sides of the Delaware River—sufficient for a number of plantations. The purchase was made chiefly with a view to trade, though the establishment of Puritan churches was an object. Trading houses were erected, and nearly fifty families sent out. In all fundamental matters the Delaware colonies were to be under the jurisdiction of New Haven. In the same year he made the purchase of the Indian territory of Rippowams-Stamford—as noted by Mr. Lewis, partly of Ponus and partly of Wascussue, another chief. He gave for the whole, "twelve coats, twelve hoes, twelve hatchets, twelve knives, two kettles, and four fathom of white wampum." In a sale to the people of Wethersfield, a while after, the tract was valued at thirty pounds sterling.

In a list, made in 1643, giving the names of a hundred and twenty-two New Haven planters, with the number of their families, including only parents and children, and the value of their estates, the family of Capt. Turner is put down at seven, and his estate at £800, the latter being as high as any on the list, with the exception of ten.

But the land speculations of New Haven do not seem to have turned out in any degree profitable. The Delaware trade was not successful; and the Dutch were troublesome at Stamford. And she seems literally to have struck a vein of ill-fortune, in which she was destined to struggle for some time. It was under a desperate effort to retrieve her fortunes, that the planters sent to Rhode Island and had a ship of a 150 tons built, hoping to open a profitable foreign trade.

By joining their means, the planters were able to freight her in a satisfactory manner. Capt. Turner, with five others of the principal men embarked, and she sailed from New Haven in January, 1647. Nothing was ever heard either of the vessel or any on board, unless the apparition which appeared in the harbor, the next June, immediately after a great thunder storm, the renowned phantom ship, be regarded as tidings. Capt. Turner had kept alive his friendship for the people of Lynn, and while "New Haven's heart was sad," there were many here to mourn his fate.

VICARS ANCESTRY

Arms—Sable, on a chief dancette or, two cinquefoils gules, a border engrailed ermine.

Vicars

Forms of one name, Vicary, Vicery, Vicarey, Vicars, Vicors, Vicaris, Vicaridge, Vickerage, Vickeridge, with many others of the same origin but of various spellings, mean of the Vicarage, or office of the vicar, or at the vicars. They are official or sometimes local names, and are found very early in England. Peter atte Vicars in 1379 was of County York; in 1574, Stephen Vyccarye married Margaret Johnson in London; in 1585, John Vicary, of County Devon, was registered at Oxford College; in 1574, John Vicarish married Margery Gerard; in 1665, John Halton married Alice Vicaridge at Canterbury; in 1614, Margaret Vicares married William Collins in London; Joan Viccaries married John Wells at London in 1617.

In the "Visitation of Worcester" in 1634 were the families of Robert Vicaris, of Astley, and Robert Vickers, of Bewdley. Descendants of these families were found in Astley and Bewdley in 1682, when the second visitation of that county was made. John Vicaridge, of "Natton," married, in 1603, Mary Sheldon, daughter of William Sheldon. They had a son, John, who was baptized in 1607.

Richard Vicaredg, son of Francis Vicaredg, was baptized in Over Ardey, County Worcester, July 30, 1653. Walter Vicaris, son of William Vicaris and Joyce, his wife, was baptized Sept. 13, 1640, at Doddenham, County Worcester, England. Anne Vicaridge, daughter of Richard Vicaridge and his wife, Anne, was baptized March 20, 1603, at Knightwick, County Worcester, England. Many others of the name are to be found in the parish registers of County Worcester. There are also Hopkins and Wakeman families (the Vicars family intermarried with these families) in County Worcester.

Robert Vicaris married Anne Sterry (they were both of Doddenham, County Worcester), June 29, 1678. In 1608, Robert Vicaris was of Tibberton, County Worcester, and in 1613, Robert and William Vicaris were taxed at Tibberton. On Nov. 12, 1636, mention is found of Robert Vicaris, of Bewdley, Gentleman. (Bewdley was in the parish of Ribsford.) In 1607, Walter Vicaris was of Omberseley (near Bewdley) in County Worcester.

Collateral Vicars families include the following:

Edward Vickers, of Wakefield, Yorkshire, married Mary Rawson, daughter of Thomas Rawson, of Wardsen, near Sheffield, and had children: Thomas, John, William and Anne. Thomas Vickers married Elizabeth Broadbent, daughter of Joseph Broadbent of Aston, and had children: William, Sarah, Elizabeth, all living in the seventeenth century. William Vickers, son of Edward Vickers was of Southall Green, Ecclesfield, Yorkshire. He married Elizabeth Turbell, daughter of James Turbell, of Southall and had children: John, Thomas, Edward, Elizabeth and Mary. John Vickers of Doncaster, attorney, was buried April 21, 1668. He married Mary Rasine, daughter of George Rasince, and had children: John, George and Catherine.

Thomas Vicars, was of Scrawsby before 1585. His daughter, Alice, married Thomas Bosville, of Warmsworth, County York. Joane Vicars married George Metham, of Cadeby, County York, abt. 1550. Mary Vicars, of Brodsworth, married George Holgate, of Stapleton, abt. 1600.

At Exeter, in the twelfth year of Henry I (1288), Walter de Wynemaneston and his wife, Alice, remitted and quit-claimed a tract of land in County Devon to Robert le Vicare and his heirs. The will of John Vicary is recorded in County Devon, in 1547; that of Robert Vicary in the County Devon in 1592; of William, in 1596; of Roger, in 1603; of John, in 1608; of Emott, in 1619; and Benedict, in 1624. The arms of this family were granted in 1558. The principal seat of the Devon Vicars or Vicareys was at Dunkeswell, County Devon. They are of the same parent family as are the Vicars of County Worcester.

William Vicaris (or Vicars), of Bewdley, England, is mentioned in the will of William Hopkins, in 1647. Walter Vicars is called "cousin" in this will. Walter Vicars may have come to America, but there is no record of him in the New Haven Colony. The son-in-law of William Hopkins, John Wakeman, did come, however, and later on came "the cousin of his wife's," Anne Vicars.

Anne Vicars, daughter of Walter Vicars, of Bewdley, County Worcester, England, was born abt. 1634. She is also mentioned as a "daughter of Walter" in the will of William Hopkins. She came to America probably when between sixteen and eighteen years of age, and was engaged to marry John Roberts. He went back to England from America and was not heard of again. Before leaving, he gave his property in America to "his espoused wife Anne Vicars." He left the property in the hands of John Wakeman, to be given to her if he did not return. She married, Aug. 4, 1656, John Thompson (See Thompson II).

WASHBURN FAMILY

WASHBURNE

Washburn, Berks., Heref., and Warc., on a Wreath, a coil of flax, or., surmounted by another wreath of the same, and gu., thereon flames, ppr.

Burke in his "Commoners," III, pages 621-622, says:

"The Washbournes or Washbornes were generation after generation of knightly degree previous to the time of Edward I (1274-1307) and ranked in point of descent with the most ancient families of the kingdom."

"The Book of Family Crests," I, 54, speaks of the Washbournes as

"a name of Norman descent, the founder having been knighted on the field of battle by the Conqueror and endowed by him with the lands and manors of Great and Little Washbourne."

Dr. A. B. Grosart goes back further and speaks of the family as reaching back into the Saxon period in Edward the Confessor's time before the Conquest. Perhaps there is not so much contradiction in this as appears. At any rate, it would seem as if the Domesday Book should throw some light on such a question. But whether a family of Knights Washbourne can or cannot be found in the Domesday Book (1086-7) existent in Saxon times, it appears certain, from the antiquary Sir Thomas Habington's quotation from the Bishop of Worcester's Domesday Book (1108-18) that there were Washbournes or Wassebornes holding land in one of these villages as early as when its statistics were gathered, which, as we shall see, was very early. The quotation is as follows (Survey of Worcestershire c. 1640):

"Where the Bishop of Worcester's Domesday Book beginneth 'Quatuor decem hides, ex hiis tenet Willielmus fillius Sampson in Wasseborne 3 hides g. Theare are 14 hydes (in) that guild, of which William, the sonne of Sampson holdeth 3 hydes in Washbourne, and Sampson of him.' Wheather the ancient family of Washborne is descended from this Sampson or not, I am uncertaine; for fewe of the englishe at thys tyme had surnames."

And again, "You may read in Bredon (i.e., in the Bishop's Domesday Book's account of Bredon, an adjoining parish), that William the sonne of Sampson was lord of thys Washborne in the raygne of Henry the second; but knowing not how to unyte them (i.e., Sampson and William) to these (the later family of knights, Sir Roger and Sons) I omit them here" (in the account of Sir Roger's family).

The interesting point in this extract from the Bishop of Worcester's Domesday Book is, that if this William, Lord of Wassebourne, and his father, Sampson, were living and holding land at the time the "inquisitions" for this book were made, viz., in 1108-18 and before, they were but only twenty or thirty years removed from the last years of William the Conqueror; and the father, Sampson, might well have been a subject of Edward the Confessor before 1066, and William may well have been holding his lands from the Conqueror's times, or even before. But no record of descendants of Sampson and William permits us to link them with the next family of de Wassebournes that comes into view from that village a little more than a century later. And hence they are not brought into the pedigree of that family with which hereafter we shall be concerned.

He and his sons, John and Philip, were included in those able to bear arms, 1643, and his name is among the first freemen of Duxbury.

John Washburn, the Emigrant and his Father were contemporaries of William Shakespeare and lived not far from him, in a large and frequented market town. Shakespeare bought "New-Place" in Stratford, between 1580 and 1590, and retired from the London life of actor and author, to become a country gentleman and landlord in his own home, Stratford, about 1604, where he spent the time until his death in 1616.

Hon. John Washburn and his son John were two of the fifty-six original proprietors of (the town of Bridgewater) the thousands of acres of land bought in 1645 of the old Indian chief, Massasoit (King Philip's father), by Capt. Myles Standish, Samuel Nash and Constant Southworth, for the use of those proprietors.—"The History of Bridgewater, Mass.," John and sons Joseph, etc., with Church in battle in King Philip's War.

WATSON ANCESTRY

Descendants of Robert Watson of Plymouth

Robert[1] Watson, a bell founder from the west of England, came with his wife, Elizabeth, and eight children in 1632, to Plymouth. His younger brother John came the same year and married, 1634, Alice, widow of Valentine Prentice. John died in 1672. In 1636 Robert, with his sons Robert, Nathaniel and John, went to Windsor, Conn., where he died in 1637. His widow was living in Plymouth in July, 1638.

Robert Watson was Deputy to General Court, Marshfield, Mass., 1643–1644–1646–1650.

John[2] Watson, son of Robert, was born about 1616, in England. He went to Hartford from Windsor, Conn., about 1637, and married there Margaret (Smith?). She was born in England, and tradition says that Peggy Smith, a fellow passenger on the ship coming to America, fell overboard. John Watson saved her and later married her.

He was surveyor of highways in Hartford, 1647. In 1645, "The eare marke for Jo Wattson: a little slitt of the side of the near eare & both the tops cutt of both eares." He died in Hartford, in 1650, between March 26, the date of his will, and June 4, its probate. He left his property to his wife, naming portions to be given his son John, when of age, and five pounds each to his daughters Sara and Mary, at eighteen years old. His widow died March, 1683. The will of Margarett Wattson, made March 26, and probated May 31, 1683, mentions her daughters Sarrah Merrels and Mary Seamor; and granddaughters Mary and Margaret Seamor; and the new wife of her son John Watson. (The Bassett Preston Ancestry, pp. 311, 312.)

John Watson was a Juror in Hartford, Conn., in 1644. Lived on Lot No. 9, So. Mance St. He bought land of the Original Proprietors in West Hartford. He was a highway Surveyor, in 1646. Gov. Thomas Welles, ancestor, was born in 1598, being descended from "a family of high rank in Normandy and England, with royal intermarriages for over seven centuries;" came to America with his kinsman, Lord Say and Seal, in 1636; occupied the most important offices in Connecticut, including that of governor; died January 14, 1660; married first, in England, Elizabeth Hunt. Their son, John Welles (1621-59), married 1647, Elizabeth, daughter of John Curtiss. Their son, John Welles (born 1647; died March 24, 1714), married 1669, Mary, daughter of Lieut. John and Joanna (Treat) Hollister. Their daughter, Sarah Welles (born January 2, 1674), married Ambrose Thompson. (See "Gen. Conn.," Vol. III, page 1453.)

Gov. Thomas Welles (Robert, Thomas), was born in England; died at Wethersfield, Conn., January 14, 1659-60. He married first, in England, soon after July 5, 1615, Alice Tomes, who died in Connecticut probably not later than 1646, daughter of John Tomes; and secondly, in Connecticut, about 1646, Elizabeth (Deming) Foote, who died between August 16, 1682 and September 3, 1683, sister of John Deming and widow of Nathaniel Foote, both of Wethersfield.

Gov. Thomas Welles was probably related to William Shakespeare's family, as Dame Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Barnard, the grandmother of Shakespeare, bequeathed in her will £50 to be given to her cousin Thomas Welles, of Carlton, Bedford, England. ("American Ancestry," Vol. VII, page 216.)

He emigrated to New England with his six children after August 20, 1635 and before April 5, 1636. He was with his wife in Boston, Mass., June 9, 1636, and perhaps had a house at Cambridge, Mass., February 8, 1635/6. He settled at Hartford, Conn., his home lot being opposite that of Gov. George Wyllys, on what is now Governor Street. The first mention of Gov. Thomas Welles in the Connecticut Colony Records is under date of March 29, 1637, when he was a member of a court held at Hartford. After that his name appears on almost every page of the Connecticut Colony Records until his death in 1659/60. He acted as a magistrate at the General Court held May 1, 1637, and was a magistrate every year thereafter until his death. He was elected treasurer of the Colony in 1639 and served until 1641, and was again elected to this office in 1648, and served until 1652. He was secretary from 1640 until 1648, and commissioner of the United Colonies in 1649 (in Boston).

He was chosen governor in 1655 and 1656; the next year he was deputy governor and in 1658 was reelected governor of the Colony. The following year he was deputy governor again, and that ended his eminently successful and honorable public career. Governor Welles went to Wethersfield to live.

A writer says of the Governor:

"Governor Welles possessed the full confidence of the people, and many of the most important of the early laws and papers pertaining to the founding of the Colony were drafted by him. The successful issue of Connecticut from her difficulty concerning the fort erected at Saybrook on one side and the Dutch enchroachments on the other was largely due to his skill and wisdom." (See "The Governors of Connecticut," by Frederick Calvin Norton, pages 19 to 21.)

Concerning the exact spot where the Governor's remains lie buried, there has been considerable controversy among the historians. Benjamin Trumbull, the eminent historian, wrote regarding this:

"Though Governor Welles was first buried at Wethersfield, his remains were afterwards removed to Hartford. Four of the first governors of Connecticut, Haynes, Wyllys, Welles and Webster, lie buried at Hartford without a monument. Considering their many and important public services this is remarkable.

But their virtues have embalmed their names and will render their names venerable to the latest posterity."

Albert Welles, a biographer of the Governor, says that his remains were buried

"on the top of the hill near the fence on the south side of the old yard, in the rear of the meeting-house, where the remains of the Welles family for many generations now lie grouped."

One of the very best authorities on this question contends that the Governor was buried at Wethersfield and was never removed from that town. This seems to be the general belief. (See "The Governors of Connecticut," by Frederick Calvin Norton, pages 19 to 21.)

WHEELER ANCESTRY

A Genealogy, while primarily an account of persons directly or indirectly connected with a certain family and a recital of their deeds, is, in a secondary sense, a recital of the deeds of those who bear the family name. It is difficult, indeed, to follow a genealogy through its manifold entanglements save by the clues afforded in the use of the family name or names, and it is therefore of primary importance to determine the variants of the original cognomen. The genealogy of the "Wheeler" family would be utterly incomplete, for example, if it did not include also the records of the "Wheler" and "Whaler" families; at the same time it would be incorrect were it to include the "Wheeland" family, which, in spite of the apparent similarity of the first syllable, seems to have sprung from an entirely different source and is the patronymic of an unrelated stock.

The name first appears in history in the eighth century, when one of the Saxon chieftains is recorded as bearing the name "Wielher." As the word shows progressive changes from that date onward, there is no great difficulty in tracing the character of that change. Thus, in the great Domesday Book of William the Conqueror, the name appears as "Weleret," the holder of the name being recorded as a landowner. "Hugh le Welere" is mentioned on the One Hundred Rolls in 1273 and "Rich le Whelere" on the Close Rolls in 1348. The spelling "Wheeler" does not appear until later, not until a date which precludes its origin having borne any relation to a trade, such as a wheelwright.

Without entering into this question in too much detail, it may be pointed out that three dominant facts stand out from these early historical references. Of these, the significance of the early establishment of the cognomen comes first. No instance, prior to the ninth century, is known of an Anglo-Saxon family bearing on a surname from generation to generation, and there are not more than half-a-dozen in which a surname crops up frequently, every second or third generation. In such cases, these foreshadowed surnames, if such they may be called, are found in families strongly established, holding positions of quasi-chieftainship in their respective localities. When, therefore, the name "Wheler" is traced from the eighth century to the Norman Conquest, when it is found to have survived triumphantly the revolutionary overthrow of tenure in that Conquest and to have maintained its individuality until the period of the definite establishment of surnames, there is strong evidence of the solidity and enduring worth of the family that bore so honored a name throughout a period of such storm and stress.

In Colonial records alone, the variations in spelling the old "Welhari" name are as follows: "Weler" and "Weeler", "Wheler," "Whelir" and "Whelor;" "Whalor" (which has nothing to do with "Wheelar," and "Wheeler);" "Whealer" and "Whealor;" "Wheller," and "Wheter" (which is probably a misspelling).

The third striking point is the meaning of the name "Wheeler" itself. For this, it is evident, determination must be made from the earliest form on record. How significant is this early appearance has been mentioned, a fact all the more remarkable when it is remembered that surnames do not appear in general use until the eleventh and twelfth centuries. This early spelling "Wielher" is evidently a compound of two Anglo-Saxons words "wel" or "Wiel" meaning "prosperous" or "Fortunate," from which derivation the modern word "Weal" and "wealth" may be traced; and the Anglo-Saxon word "hari" or "heri" a warrior, a root traceable in the modern word "hero." The present spelling of the family name "Wheeler," therefore, is a spelling of words which in their modern form would be "Weal-Hero" or in the Anglo-Saxon words "welhari." The meaning of the family name, therefore, is clearly "the lucky warrior," or "the prosperous hero."

In America, prior to the year 1650, it may confidently be affirmed that no other one surname was borne by as many families as the name Wheeler. Numerous families bearing that name were domiciled in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia. In the New England Colony Savage says that in the year 1640, there were in Concord alone thirty-five families bearing the name, and Hudson says that there were more families of that name in town than of any other.

The principal reasons for the emigration of the Wheelers from England naturally closely paralleled the causes which led to almost all the emigration at that period. Chief among these reasons was the infamous Act of 1593, which said "all persons above sixteen years of age, who obstinately refuse to attend divine service at some established church, should be committed to prison, without bail, until they should conform and make public confession of conformity, in terms prescribed by the statute itself." "This atrocious statute," said Edward Everett, "in its final result peopled New England."

Hopes that relief from the iniquities of this Act would be realized upon the accession to the throne of James in 1603, were grievously dashed when James himself said, "no bishop, no King; I will make them conform themselves; or I will harry them out of the land, or else do more."

(P. xvi) Charles I ascended the throne in 1625 and the following nine years were troublous ones for England. The struggle with the Crown for the maintenance of the constitutional rights of Englishmen and the conflict between the liberty of the people and the royal prerogative, in addition to a religious movement became part of the great political strife which resulted in Civil War and culminated in the death of the King. In 1627, many people of large means refused on constitutional grounds to pay the "Ship Money tax," or forced loan of Charles I because it was not levied with the consent of Parliament.

As early as 1629, Charles had summoned and prorogued four Parliaments because each had dared demand redress against the King's illegal acts—redress against the extortion of gifts and forced loans; against the arbitrary commitment to prison and the degradation of the judiciary. Charles resolved to govern without Parliament. For eleven years no Parliament sat at Westminster. For eleven years the king taxed his people without representation, and confined in the Tower those who questioned his right. The people of England rose in one mighty protest against such tyranny. They found their leaders in Elliot and Pym and Hampden. Political and constitutional liberty was dead, except as it lived in the hearts and memories of the Englishmen, who could not forget Rune-mede and Magna Carta. All of these things resulted in a steady stream of emigration of Separatists and Puritans, who sought toleration in Holland, and especially in America, recognizing the "special hand of Providence in raising this plantation." Green says that "between the sailing of Winthrop's expedition (1629) and the assembly of the Long Parliament (1640), in the space of ten or eleven years, two hundred emigrant ships had crossed the Atlantic, and twenty thousand Englishmen had found refuge in the West.

Individuals of the name of Wheeler appear in Massachusetts, Maryland, Virginia, Connecticut and Pennsylvania as early as 1629, in some places and in considerable numbers during the next five years in all the others except Pennsylvania. The Concord settlers came from Odell, Bedfordshire, twelve families according to Walcott embarking at London, May 9, 1635, in the ship "Susan and Ellen" under the leadership of Rev. Peter Bulkeley, and later with the Rev. John Jones in the ship "Defiance," landing Oct. 3, 1635.

(P. 491), Ephraim Wheeler married Ann Turney. He may be the brother of Thomas, No. 2700. Referred to as Sergeant. It is thought that he came from England with Rev. John Jones' Company in the ship Defiance, Oct. 3, 1635. He was made "freeman" at Concord, Mass., March 13, 1639. In 1644, he joined the portion of the Concord population that followed Rev. Mr. Jones to Fairfield, Conn., taking with him his wife and one or two children, and was granted a home lot of 3 acres at Pequonnock. He became a large landowner and a leading citizen, and was one of the wealthiest citizens of that county. His will dated Sept. 22, 1669, mentions his wife, Ann, and his children as follows: bequeaths "lands and housings" to 3 sons, Samuel, Timothy and Ephraim; and to Isaac, Mary and Ruth, 10 shillings each, they having previously had their share; to Hannah 15£; to Rebecca, Judith and Abigail, 30£ each. The inventory taken Oct. 28, 1670, amounted to £1026-18-6. His widow in 1681, paid tax on 706 acres of land. One of his daughters married Samuel Treadwell.

WHITNEY ANCESTRY

("Colonial Families," by New York Historical Society, 1928, pages 168-179)

Arms—Azure, a cross chequy or and gules.

Crest—A bull's head couped sable, armed argent, the points gules.

Motto—Magnanimiter crucem sustine (Gallantly uphold the cross.)

The surname Whitney was originally a place name. The parish from which the family takes its name is located in County Hereford, England, upon the extreme western border, adjoining Wales, and is traversed by the lovely Wye River. The name of the place doubtless comes from the appearance of the river, meaning in Saxon, white water, from "hwit," white, and "ey" water. The English ancestry of John Whitney, the immigrant, who settled at Watertown, Mass., has been established by Henry Melville and presented in an exquisitively printed and illustrated volume. Very few American families have their English genealogy in such well authenticated and satisfactory form. ("Watertown, Mass."—Bond, 2nd Edition, Vol. I, pages 642-643.)

WHITNEY.—1. Embarked at Ipswich, England, April, 1635, for New England, in the Elizabeth and Ann, Roger Cooper, master, JOHN WHITNEY, aged 35; wife Ellin (Eleanor), aged 30; sons John, aged 11; Richard, aged 9; Nathaniel, aged 8; Thomas, aged 6; and Jonathan, aged 1 year. He was admitted freeman, March 3, 1635-1636; was selectman several years between 1638 and 1655, inclusive, and was town clerk 1655. In 1642 his homestall lot of 16 acres (where he continued to reside), was bounded E. and S. by William Jennison; W. by Martin Underwood; N. by Isaac Mixer (See 60). He at the same time owned eight other lots, amounting to 212 acres. The Registry of Deeds shows that he made additions to these possessions. His early admission as a freeman, and his early election as selectman, show that he held a respectable social position. His wife, Eleanor, died May 11, 1659, and he married (2), September 29, 1659, Judah (Judith) Clement. He died a widower, June 1, 1673, aged 74. His will, dated April 3, 1673, attested by William Bond, Sr., and Sarah Bond, Sr., mentions sons John, Richard, Thomas, Jonathan, Joshua and Benjamin. Inventory, dated June 4, 1673, 50 acres dividend land, £25; 3 acres of Beaver Brook meadow, and 1½ acres upland £60; 1 acre plain meadow, £10. He had probably previously distributed much of his estate in the settlement of his sons. See his son Benjamin (60).

WILSON ANCESTRY

Arms—Per pale azure and argent, three lions' gambs barways erased and counterchanged. Crest—A Lion's head erased argent, guttee de sang.

The surname Wilson is one of the most common and widespread in England, Scotland, and Ireland. It is derived from Will and Son, in the same way as Johnson, Jackson, Davidson, etc., and, like those surnames, there are doubtless hundreds of progenitors of related families that assumed the surname when the custom became general in the twelfth century or earlier. Many of this name have won distinction. In Scotland the Wilsons were numerous in Renfrewshire, Elginshire, Eifeshire, Lanarkshire, and were found in other counties also at an early date. During the frightful persecution of the Scotch Presbyterians, one of this family suffered martyrdom. In 1685, James II, an avowed Roman Catholic, became King of England, sworn to maintain the Established Church (Episcopal) but his accession brought no relief to the persecuted Covenanters in Scotland and Ireland. An Episcopal farmer named Gilbert Wilson had two daughters — Agnes, aged thirteen, and Margaret, aged eighteen. These girls attended conventicles and had become Presbyterians. Arrested and condemned to death, their father succeeded in procuring the pardon of the younger by paying one hundred pounds sterling, but the elder, and an old woman named Margaret MacLaughlin, were bound to stakes on the seashore that they might be drowned by the rising tide. After the old woman was dead and the water had passed over Margaret Wilson's head, the latter was brought out, restored to consciousness, and offered life if she would take the abjuration oath. But she said: "I am one of Christ's children; let me go." She was then once more placed in the sea, and her sufferings ended by death.

In the North of Ireland the crown granted to William Willson, of Suffolk, England, two thousand acres of land in the precinct of Liffer (Barony of Raphoe), County Donegal, about 1610. In 1611, Willson bought two thousand acres granted to Sir Henry Knight. His residence is given as Clarye, in Suffolk, and his Irish agent was Chris. Parmenter. He brought over some English settlers. This Englishman may never have settled there himself. In 1619, we find a Scotchman named Stephen Wilson (also Woolson), a tenant of John Cunningham, precinct of Portlough, County Donegal, Ireland. There were doubtless other Scotch from time to time settling in Ulster. Few surnames are more numerous than Wilson in Ireland. In 1890, there were three hundred and sixty-six births of children of this name, two hundred and eighty-seven being in the Ulster counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Tryone, Londonderry and Fermanagh, indicating a population of about 18,000 of this name in Ireland at the present time. In 1689, one of these Scotch Wilsons living in Enniskillen became famous. July 1, Lieutenant MacCarmich, in whose company James Wilson was a soldier, made a stand against the Duke of Berwick, as illegitimate son of King James, at the head of a detachment of Irish, six hundred dragoons on foot and two troops of horse. Governor Hamilton, his superior officer, failed to keep his promise to support MacCarmich, and his little company was fairly cut to pieces, his son slain at his side, and he was taken prisoner. But thirty escaped. Among these was a brave soldier named James Wilson. Surrounded by a number of dragoons he was assailed by all at once, some of them he stabbed, others he struck down with his musket, and several he threw under the feet of their own horses. At last, wounded in twelve places, his cheeks hanging over his chin, he fell into a bush. There a sergeant struck him through the thigh with a halbert; but Wilson, exerting all his strength, pulled it out and ran it through the sergeant's heart. By the assistance of this halbert, he walked back to Enniskillen. He was afterwards cured of his wounds, and survived for thirty years.

The Wilson family is one of the many whose love of liberty and desire to worship in their own fashion and according to the dictates of their own conscience, drove them from native England, by way of Holland, to the New World. The original home of the Wilsons was in Nottinghamshire, and the ancestors of the family were of good old "mid-country" stock. Burke, in his "General Armory," records more than forty coats-of-arms for individuals and groups of the Willson or Wilson family residing in counties Sussex, Berks, York, Westmoreland, Cumberland, Durham, Essex, Kent, Leicester, Norfolk and Suffolk, in England, and in Scotland and Ireland. The armorial bearings described herewith are recorded by Burke for Wilson without designation of locality, and have been used in this country by descendants of Roger Willson.

1. Roger Willson, was born about the year 1588, in the village of Scrooby, and we have it of record that he was a member of the Rev. John Robinson's Church, the members of which fled from the religious persecution of the time and settled in Leyden, Holland, in the year 1608. He appears to have been a prominent member of this congregation and continued to exercise no little influence among its members in their new home. He was also better provided with this world's goods than most of his fellow-wanderers, and was successful as a Woolen and Silk draper in Leyden. When it became the purpose of the Pilgrims to seek a home in the New World, Roger Willson was one of those who fitted out the "Mayflower" and evidently intended to be one of those who sailed in her. For some reason not quite clear, it appears that his intention did not bear fruit, and the death of the Rev. Mr. Robinson on March 1, 1634, broke up the organization among the members of his flock. After this event, some remained in Holland, where they were eventually merged with the native population, and some returned to England. The period of the worst persecutions had by that time passed and these wanderers were naturally glad to return to their homes. It is not recorded, however, among which party Roger Willson found himself, but it is thought probable that he was among those who returned to their native land, as there is no record of his death in Leyden. The wife of Roger Willson was Mary Fuller (a sister of Dr. Samuel Fuller, who sailed in the "Mayflower" to care for the bodily health of the Pilgrims).

It was the youngest child of this union who became the founder of the Wilson family here. This is, of course, not the only family of the name in America, as there were many Wilsons among the immigrants to the Colonies at even an earlier date, some coming from Ireland, and some from Scotland as well as from England. The Willsons or Wilsons, with whom this sketch is concerned, however, are the only ones who are in any way connected with the original Pilgrims and Puritans of Leyden, or with the fitting out of the famous "Mayflower."

2. John Wilson, or Lieutenant John Wilson, as he is spoken of in the records, was the youngest son of Roger and Mary (Fuller) Willson, and the only member of that family who came to the New World. He was born in 1631 at Leyden, and was twenty years old when he joined the Colonists of New England. He took part in the Indian Wars of that period, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant, and was seemingly prominent in the affairs of Rehoboth one of the old settlements in the Seekonk region of Massachusetts, where he had made his home. His death occurred in 1691 and he was buried in the old Seekonk (now North Swansea) Cemetery. He also made his home at Woburn, Massachusetts, and it was here that his children were born. He was twice married, and among the children of these two unions were:

WINSLOW ANCESTRY

Arms—Argent, on a bend gules seven lozenges conjoined or.

Crest—A stump of a tree with branches proper encircles with a strap and buckle.

Record is not made by Bardsley in his compendium of "English and Welsh Surnames," of the origin of the patronymic Winslow. But in Frank R. Holmes' "Director of Ancestral Heads," is found the following paragraph, which would seem to prove that "Winslow" is a place, or local name:

"Winslow, a place-name from the town of Winslow in Buckinghamshire England. Original family seat in Worcestershire, England."

Reference: "Governors of New Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay," pp. 132-133.

There were five brothers who came early to this country, viz.: Edward and Gilbert, in the Mayflower, 1620, John in the Fortune, 1621, and Kenelm and Josiah before 1633. The residence of this family had been in Worcestershire, England. ("Deane's History of Scituate," Family Sketches, page 388.)

Edward Winslow was the eldest of a family of five sons and three daughters, the children of Edward and Magdalen Winslow, of Droitwich, in England. Edward was born 19 Oct. 1595, John in April, 1597, Elynor in April, 1598, Kenelm, 29 April 1599, Gilbert, in Oct., 1600, Elizabeth in March, 1601, Magdalen, 26 Dec. 1604 and Josiah in Feb., 1605.

John, the eldest brother of Edward, came over in 1621, in the ship Fortune, and was married at New Plymouth, sometime prior to 1627, to Mary Chilton, daughter of James Chilton, one of the first emigrants in the Mayflower. The tradition in the family, confirmed by a writing left at her death by Mrs. Ann Taylor, in 1773, the last grand-child of John Winslow, is, that Mary Chilton "was the first female who set her foot on the American shore." This may refer either to the landing at Cape Cod, where as is mentioned by Belknap, "the women went ashore to wash their clothes," or, to the landing at Plymouth. The descendants of John Alden claim for him the honor of having been the first to leap upon Plymouth Rock; but the tradition is best received, which accords that feat to the adventurous maiden. John Winslow resided in Plymouth till about 1656. His children were mostly, if not all, born there. His occupation was that of a merchant; and he held different municipal offices in Plymouth. In 1661, with Antipas Boies, Edward Tyng, and Thomas Brattle, he purchased the colony lands on the Kennebeck river, for 400£ sterling, and they were afterwards well known as the "Plymouth Company in Maine." His place of residence was in the north part of ancient Plymouth, called "Plain Dealing." This estate was sold to his son-in-law, Edward Gray, about the time of his removal to Boston, and was, by the latter, disposed of to the Plymouth colony in 1662, who purchased it as a residence for Governor Prence. John Winslow died in Boston, in 1674, aged 78 years; his wife, Mary Winslow, died in Boston, in 1678. Their children were, six sons—John; Isaac, who married a Parnell; Benjamin; Edward; Joseph; and Samuel, who died at Boston, in 1680; and five daughters—Sarah, whose first husband was Miles Standish, Jr., second, Tobias Payne, ancestor of the Paines of Boston, and third, a Mr. Middlecot; Susanna, who married Robert Latham; Mercy, who married Arthur Harris; Ann, who married a Le Blond, of Boston; and Mary, who married Edward Gray, of Plymouth, died in 1663, leaving two or three daughters and one son. One of these daughters married Nathaniel Southworth, in 1671. Mr. Southworth bought the estate of "Plain Dealing" in 1677, but in after years removed to Middleborough, and there died, leaving three sons and several daughters.

It is said that John Winslow, eldest son of John, brought the Prince of Orange's declaration from Nevis to New England, in Feb., 1689, for which he was imprisoned by Sir Edmund Andros. From the eldest son John, (through John, son of the latter) it is supposed that the family of the late General John Winslow, of Boston, is descended.

John (another brother) was a merchant in Boston, after having resided a few years at Plymouth. He married Mary Chilton, the adventurous maiden, who disputed with John Alden the honour of having leaped first upon the Plymouth rock. We have few notes of the genealogy of his family. He had a son John, whose son John was born in 1665. Isaac, Esq., now of Boston, is a descendant. ("Deane's History of Scituate," Family Sketches, page 389.)

   The graves of John Winslow and Mary Chilton are near the center of "Old Kings' Chapel Cemetery," Boston. The graves are marked with a large tomb with the Winslow coat of arms.

   In commemoration of the Signing of "The Compact" on the Mayflower, at Cape Cod Harbor, now Provincetown, Mass., and in memory of Mary (Chilton) Winslow, the Mayflower Passenger, who removed from Plymouth to Boston, and was a member of the Old South Church from July 16, 1671, until her death in 1679, a memorial service was held at the Old South Church, Copley Square, Boston, on Sunday evening, Nov. 22, 1931, at half-past seven o'clock.

   The sermon was preached by Rev. Russell Henry Stafford, D.D., minister of the Old South Church, and a member of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants.

   "The Compact" was read according to custom.

Families Descended from all the Royal Families in Europe
Mayflower Descendants

An interesting volume has been published by the Free Press Publishing Company on "Families Descended from All the Royal Families in Europe, 495 to 1932 and Mayflower Descendants," by their lineal descendant, Mrs. Elizabeth Rixford of East Highgate. The book is dedicated to her husband, Oscar Herbert Rixford. It is an interesting and beautifully bound volume and betrays many years of most careful and painstaking research, evidently a labor of love on the part of the compiler. The genealogy enthusiast will revel in it. Countless books have been consulted. She has traced from Cerdic, first of the West Saxon Kings, 495. The book also includes several Mayflower lines connected to all members of the Vermont Society of Mayflower Descendants and an accurate lineage of George Washington's early ancestry. The book will prove very valuable to those fortunate enough to have their line so clearly outlined.
